

Preface

I read somewhere that to fall asleep, think of two words that don't go together. You'll eventually fall into a slumber. It seemed that this was an ineffective method, and I began to think of things that I did not know I could recall of.

It speculates the collection - Strange Stories from a Chinese Studio by Pu Song Ling (Herbert A. Giles' translation) as an entity and further explores the interaction of language and code, where computational methods become the dreaming apparatus.

It takes two random words from a pool of (curated) nouns, and through an algorithm the interaction between these two selected words generates a new and unique 'dream' from the source text.

As the purpose to practice this exercise is, to sleep, 'sleep' was the seed word that generated this dream log.

This project was born out of curiosity. It is my human attempt to explore how computational methods may recreate experiences of dreams, and what that recreation might mean once the line between machine process and human association blurs. How language and code interact to create new experiences, as do dreams create new realities for us.

Sleep Thick

Spending the interval in padding their knees with thick felt concealed beneath their clothes; they took Niu's clothes and buried them, and after that Chung continued his father's business and soon amassed great wealth. And immediately seizing a sharp knife. Though it is severe, a cure can be effected; there was actually a ferry known as the Old Dragon (Lao-lung).

Sleeping Release

One day, as I was sleeping in the grass. We can love each other very well here. And my home is in Shen-si; I feel very sorrowful at the prospect of parting. Will you drink a parting glass with me in the palace of the moon? The above was given in such melancholy tones that the old man smiled and said, Mr. Lu. A third servant, named Li Lu.

Landlord Ounces

The landlord urged him to sell even at a loss, and turn his attention to something else while Jen and Yi to which, however. A few days afterwards he told his mother that Hsiao-hui was very happy in Purgatory, being married to a son of one of the Judges; Thereupon Mr. Hua was overwhelmed with fear, and begged and implored the judges to forgive him; Now in the village where these events took place there was a magician who was employed in certain devil-work among mortals, and Na's ghost. Why necessarily regard life as a boon and death as a misfortune? But the magician went on to say, It is not a question of what you can afford; The latter declared he could not afford the expense. Hsü asked him how it was but since in life he had never been able to get enough of the dross.

Oil Day

Who was brought before him for some trifling misdemeanour, and whose statements were very confused, to be bamboozed to death. Have you forgotten your father's death, your wife's disgrace? Falling on his knees before Fêng hearing sounds of talking and laughing in his son's room, got up and looked in. The General cut off the priest's head and restored the cloth merchant's property to him. Calling to Ch'êng and receiving no reply he has determined to employ three classes of mortals to clean them out. One day there was a heavy fall of snow which kept visitors away from the monastery; So when the disciples. Not one of them knew his motives for visiting this place; besides which our friend was able to tell him every pound of meat he had sold, and every slice he had cut off. While he was waiting there with all his heavy baggage where it fizzed a moment and then went out.

Sheep Judge

And the attendant devils had already clothed him in a sheep's-skin in the manner above described where his grandmother, to whom he described Mr. Rushten's appearance, confirmed the suspicion he himself had formed. Ch'êng stood looking at it, without trying to catch such a worthless specimen who was an amateur mineralogist and would pay any price for a good specimen.

Hall Servants

Meanwhile, as the magistrate was one day inspecting his gaol, suddenly a man appeared in the hall he is going to take musicians. There were musicians on horseback and musicians in chariots, and in three days he had visited every one of the marine kingdoms, making his name known in all directions. Whereupon the others were very much alarmed, and cried out, The hill spirit! He made no reply to this either; Everyone suspected some supernatural agency to be at work observing that he was no common-looking youth, had set to work and brought him round again. Seizing his son's hand and leading him within to see his step-mother. He then prepared for his journey "And if you do not forget the days of our friendship," added he, I pray you come and see me, in spite of the long journey.

Cause Payment

And when Chou hesitated and, as your son has shewn himself one of the best of men so collecting together these men.

Omen Life

And that she was not destined to enjoy a long life; Why raise the dead one to life?

Candidate Present

Soon after Mao took his bachelor's degree, and then set off to present himself as a candidate for the master's degree. "You," replied the magistrate, have slain the children of others; that such a punishment was a trifle too severe; Though it is severe, a cure can be effected; "The first line," argued he, must signify old (lao in Chinese); The young man did not know what was meant by a colonel. So the merchant sailed away and soon reached Chiao-chou. The merchant now knew that the young man was Hsü's son. Now, as she was always thinking of making a good match for her son, and curing him of his settled melancholy and, now that we shall meet no more. So Hou went home and told his wife and children; and when his wife and children arrived to take away the corpse. Chu's mother wept bitterly over his corpse.

Little Shame

And at the appointed time the two friends went together, not expecting, however, to find anything ready for them. But the Judge and there sat the officials in crimson robes arranged right and left in the hall; who is looked at only with sidelong eyes, and in whose presence all people stand aslant;--this is to be a mandarin. The latter ordered one of them to give up his horse to Na, and thus they rode together back to the mandarin's house. Rushing in to see what was the matter, found that husband and wife and Mao's wife.

Tea Come

Which he stowed away with the ring, and took his leave. And accordingly the latter remained chatting with Mr. Shang without reserve, and finally told him she was a fox. Wang then enquired after Hsiao-jung. Meanwhile, Wang had been explaining who he was; when his wife died, left his home and became a priest. "In that case," said he, you had better get to bed, so as not to be behindhand with your wood-cutting in the morning. When the ceremonies were concluded, Tou said to the Princess, In your presence, Madam. You need fear nothing. Who looked at him in astonishment, and asked him what he had met. How is it you are still amusing yourself among mortals? Chu asked the Judge if he could not save him; accordingly, the general sent off to inquire about him, and found that he had been in a trance for two days. Wang begged him again and again to do his best for him, and Wu undertook to get the betrothal satisfactorily arranged. Wine and food were then arranged upon it, and Wang heard the sound of the dishes knocking together and, in about the time it takes to cook a pot of millet at the same time pulling out from over the top of a wall a stalk of millet, to which he attached his own waistband, and tying the latter round his neck, made a pretence of hanging himself. Just then a very tall and noble-looking stranger walked in so that everybody got well. To which Hsiang-yü replied that they must make her, and proceeded with him into the garden, where. When morning came. The bystanders thought he was joking. At this Wang's rage knew no bounds. All this time the magician had been in a divine ecstasy, not knowing what he was saying; bidding them at once prepare an image of him.

Appearance Talk

At Chia-p'ing there lived a certain young gentleman of considerable talent and very prepossessing appearance. While his visitor continued, The murderer is Kung Piao: he replied, In China I hold a high position, and people will not dare to shew you disrespect. After severely censuring Mr. Wang, turned round and went away. why have you done so? So he had no difficulty in entertaining the thought of marrying this young lady, and soon regained his health. But his aunt was there, and inquired after the health of his mother. Just then, one of the herd-boys pinched his cub and made it squeak.

Pledge Bumper

Tou remained in a state of stupefaction you, Sir, are the one in danger. To which the other only replied, The judgments of heaven may not be discussed. And when they had passed on to something else who did not seem to notice that anybody else was present. Another short interval, and in burst a third messenger to say that Wang had been elected a member of the National Academy.

Prince Highness

But now to receive you in marriage--this, indeed, far surpasses my wildest expectations. Even if he is still alive but not being a mortal. Fêng now knew that he was not of mortal flesh and blood; The dark blood gushed forth, and stained the bed and the mat; Shortly after these events little Chu fell sick, and crawled about the bed scratching the mat.

Beauty Imbecile

Possessed of peerless beauty, the ring of her admirers gradually increased there was the priest writhing and shrieking under every cut begging to be allowed to have a look at the weapon. This the butcher seized hold of at once, and held it firmly. I allow, argued her mother; “But even a filial son makes a bad nurse,” answered the patient; The patient was overjoyed; but that it would not be long. Sang struggled a long time to speak; For some time she did not speak.

Admirers Last

Possessed of peerless beauty, the ring of her admirers gradually increased and, in a few moments. Gradually this glow worked its way up until it attacked the heart, and then some painful moments ensued. After eight hundred years passed in the murky gloom of the infernal regions, have lost all discrimination, like men long buried in a cave and suddenly transferred to the light of day. And while there Chêng's second wife saw him, and asked her husband if his guest's name wasn't Ching. Do not behave like this again, and so shorten your term of life. Wang promised he would not divulge her secret, and so she remained there for some days without anyone knowing anything about it. Three or four years afterwards, as some of the villagers were worshipping on Mount Tai in consequence of which the search was relaxed, and Tai's wife, not being happy where she was, married another husband. Turning to her husband.

Ring Tea

Which he stowed away with the ring, and took his leave. The family were afraid to leave the house. Miss Chao went straight to Li's house.

Girl Light

He saw by the light of the lamp in front of the corpse that the girl was raising the coverings from her and preparing to get down. So he sat down and rested outside; The following evening Miss Li came in; whereupon the magistrate ordered him twenty or thirty blows on the mouth for lying in the presence of such irrefragable proof, and cast him into the condemned cell.

Prayers Distance

“but how,” cried he, situated as I am, can I ever hope to look again upon the light of day? Shortly afterwards, Chou was one day going to sleep and when Pai expressed his doubts as to the accuracy of this statement, Ting led him in, when, lo and behold! He arranged a quantity of meat-offerings and wine on a table in the court-yard, and proceeded to invoke the Gods in the usual manner; and by-and-by he exclaimed, What I should like now is just a draught of iced wine to cool the twelve joints of my œsophagus.

Realms Beauty

Those you shed have sunk down deep to the realms below, and may perhaps succeed in restoring her to us; For Fan a chicken was boiled. Lê ordered another supply “Just what I shouldn’t like,” cried she, to be always with anybody. Mr. Yin jumped up at this, and cried out, What is there difficult in that? This blood it was quietly sucking up she tore up a piece of silk and bound it round, at the same time bringing back circulation by rubbing the body and covering it up with clothes. When the lad looked in and said, Master’s coming! Saying to Miss Wang you must not be so lazy. She also warned him, saying, Be neither lazy nor slow-- For if a day too long you wait, Repentance comes a day too late. After raising some objections, the fox at length consented, and conducted the spirit-merchant to a cave leaving the entrance blocked, and by-and-by came back with a deer and the old woman, by selling the flesh and skin, was able to purchase food. If she doesn’t expect too much when the lad looked in and said, Master’s coming!

Father Family

That on his way to the capital he had made a détour and visited his old home and the work completed; and when the old lady knew who was coming. A maid-servant had already seen him coming, and cried out, Here's master! After some delay a slave-girl came and whispered something to her master which seemed to make him very angry. After another pause. He then took out the slipper, and on shaking it Miss Li appeared, somewhat cross at having been kept away for several days. And a few days afterwards Liu said to him, A great many people will be at the gardens to-day; A beautiful girl drew aside the bamboo curtain at the door, and announced, Mr. Ch'ên; he requested Ch'ên to write the word Ch'u on each; and Ch'êng's companions by-and-by rising up and going away. Hearing of it, threw Fêng into prison, and took possession of the mirror. When he looked at her again whom he treated as if they had actually been his wife's parents. Upon which the girl told him if that was really the case he should hear both plaintiff and defendant, and not act like a dog, biting anybody he is set upon. But he first poured some wine upon the ground you must not object to its being cold. But, at the time of this feast, the weather was cold.

Fame Friend

Though try as he would he could never succeed at the public examinations, and by-and-by he sickened and died. Which his son had gone away to buy. She then presented Shang with some money, and bade him go on ahead and buy some good wine, adding, I'll bring something to eat with me, and we'll have a jolly time of it. Drawing the arrow from his back. He had a pouch on his back in which he kept some ten of these little animals; Tell Mr. T'an that the old lady of the southern village has several piculs of grain which she wishes to sell in order to get money for a journey, and beg him to send some animals to carry it.

Affairs Minutes

“But,” added he, there are a great many names down. The rat followed, upon which the cat jumped down.

Dint Talking

By dint of tickling it was roused at last, and then it fell upon its adversary with such fury they beat Yu-yü until the neighbours separated them and put an end to the row. Besides, as the row was beginning to subside, the clear rattle of dice from a neighbouring boat fell upon Hsiu's ear, and before long he was itching to be back again at his old games.

Night Livelong

They placed the body in the hall, with the head alongside, and gave themselves up to weeping and wailing the livelong night. Running over the eaves of the house like so many ropes. Who looked fixedly at our hero, and cried out, Why, surely you are Mr. Ch'ên, aren't you? So they lay down and went to sleep again, Ch'ên urging the young man to visit him often, and saying that they must have faith in each other. Till the place was as light as day. "You have come to the wrong person," replied the priest, smiling; Isn't that it in the inner room? That at length some of the latter determined to keep watch. That he ran off a copy of them and put it in his pocket. Li Nêg then addressed the animal as follows:--O tiger. Then the people of that place built a shrine in honour of the Faithful Tiger.

Action Father

He had been in confinement for more than a year while the case was being investigated. Who investigated the matter himself, and found that Chou was in the last stage of starvation, for which the gaolers were bamboosed to death. Therein it appeared that the animal's destiny had doomed it to death on the very day on which it had died; and he and his servant crept forth. Its eyes shot forth yellow fire: he stopped, not liking to advance further. Na further pointed out to Ch'êng that by not doing as he had told him. A few months afterwards his friend arrived, bringing with him a person of about that age; At twelve years of age Han-ch'an took his bachelor's degree; and when the time for the publication of the list drew near which grew again as fast as it was cut off. So Li went home, to find that little Chu was already dead; which proved conclusively that he couldn't be dead.

Joker Friends

His friends now found that he was quite dead. Three or four years afterwards, as some of the villagers were worshipping on Mount Tai. Three or four years passed away and there was a change of magistrate; whereupon the latter gave out that any person who was willing to take the woman to wife was to present himself at his yamên. Where stood on either side crowds of official servants and he was proceeding to use violence for such is but the behaviour of brute beasts, of which men thus take advantage. The merchant said he would do. She then told him he had better practice making verses he knew it was Chiang-hsüeh; The young ladies then went away, and next day Huang observed the shoots of a young peony growing up where Hsiang-yü had once stood. Said the young lady; and by-and-by, as the sounds came nearer. By-and-by, the clepsydra shewed that two hours had already gone without bringing him any nearer to dissolution; and when he got home and then Tung explained what his own particular hobby was, adding how much he would like to learn from them any tricks in the art of broad-sword. Tung handed it to him. At night a slave-girl came to him with twenty ounces of silver for him, and Mrs. Chên and when he told them and at length they would take no more notice of him.

Wild Wayside

Which displeased his father and mother very much, and made them regard his wife, too, with anything but a friendly eye. why have you come so late? And whenever she took her own meals and, as her husband did very little towards looking after his affairs, and was further sponged upon by all the needy ones of the neighbourhood. The former was on terms of too great intimacy with a notably bad character of the neighbourhood.

Servant Noise

Hearing a noise. Thereupon ensued a chattering between them. Ch'ên had met her before, and so they at once exchanged greetings.

Know Letter

He then took his leave, being in rather a disturbed state of mind, and bade the merchant wait until the wind should prove favourable. The young lady did not venture to select a favourable spot; he beheld a tiny official hat, no larger than a wine-cup, lying there behind the door. She jumped up on his arrival and when he waked up he was on board his boat again, and at his old anchorage on the lake. Lin here rose to take leave. Wei remained on the ground, not daring to rise; Chang was a long time unable to rise, but at length he got up and carried the serpent off with him. Which caused his wife to laugh at him and say, Supposing you do find such a place at the end of that long journey which he was able to swallow; thinking it an inauspicious manifestation. They then searched for the damsel and from a distance, through a breach in the old wall. It was already pretty late there was a great profusion of flowers along the road, quite unlike the beginning of winter. Who looked delicate enough to be blown away by the wind, and yet worked harder than an ordinary labourer's wife Where did you get them? So Chou handed over the amount at once. With her scarlet sleeve she wipes the tears from her perfumed cheek, In fear and trembling lest they should guess the thoughts that o'erwhelm her. There is no help for you; and though you two are a little near and that therefore he had flooded the place with salt water and drowned them.

Money Number

Feasting and enjoying himself, and forgetting all about going home. But the old gentleman said no more. The other then asked his name, to which the boy replied, My name is Hu. And a few days afterwards Miss Quarta said she too would have to be absent for a day, so Shang went out for a walk by himself, and suddenly beheld a very nice-looking young lady emerge from the shade of an old oak that was growing on the hill-side. The long-bearded man was considerably startled at his answer, but much more so when he added, We've lived there for generations: Such devotion as yours casts its light back on generations gone by; who owned a burial-ground in the neighbourhood; but Miss Hung-yü told him to meet her again the following evening returning after a short absence some twenty beautiful young ladies stood before him. He straightway died. Whose third wife had died since Na left, and who now was a desolate old widower, left alone with only his own shadow. And there was nothing except his own shadow within the four walls of his house. As to Ta-nan himself. Just then some constables knocked at the door, and when Mr. Tung went out to see who it was, the constables were all astonishment; In great astonishment Ch'ên took a hair-pin, and inserted it into one of these places who died at the age of eighty, was being carried to his grave, the bearers thought the coffin seemed remarkably light, and on opening it to see, found that the body had disappeared. Where he had been wounded and the family property being almost gone, Chang made him come and live with them, and be one of their own family. He next hunted up Mr. Lung-fei's name in the family tables of genealogy, and proceeded to sacrifice all kinds of nice things at his tomb. Who had heard the strange story, gathered round the grave in gala dress to the number of many hundreds. In the fatal fourth moon he had started on his journey and had fallen in with bandits, to whom he had offered all his money and valuables; so he immediately bought it, and so became immensely rich in all kinds of valuables.

Justice Daily

And after a time the story reached the ears of the Examiner which at once replied in the following terms:--Let not Mr. Li be disheartened by temporary failure. They now understood why the presents had been refused; and when, six months later, Mrs. An died. Just at this juncture a parrot that had been long with the family died.

Steward Clothes

For the baby. They were a charming band, not one being over thirty years of age; The priest was over sixty years of age, and had the usual white beard a petty fellow like that to have a retinue like this? At Lin-t'iao there lived a Mr. Fêng until one evening old Mr. Fêng.

Strings Man

One night the latter dreamt that a man rushed in and said to him, To-day you must repay me those forty strings of cash. He found therein more than a hundred strings of cash.

Arms Account

Huang then went into the garden and threw his arms around her plant after picking a blade of grass where he met his father with a lantern in his hand, coming in from a party at a neighbour's house; fearing that he was going to die, sent to beg of the rich trader that he would allow a search to be made for Sun's spirit in his house.

Stranger Latter

The stranger here got very angry he heard an angry voice saying, Tell your son to come here at once, and then I will spare you. But one of them cried out, A nice sort of fellow you are, to be bothering about your way home, and paying no attention to the fine moon we have got to-night. The three friends laughed loudly, and one of them said, We are very jolly to-night.

Table Seeking

Humming this stanza to himself, Ch'ên walked along seeking for the path by which he had entered; an official entered.

Servants Stray

This startled the donkey so much that it ran off full gallop, and knocked a rich gentleman's child but he had no sons; and that the line would not be interrupted by his marrying her. it was not he. Calling to Ch'êng and receiving no reply. The general begged him to be seated, an offer which he accepted, being all the time extremely deferential in his manner. He even went so far as to set to work, by all manner of means, to secure his success; and the prolongation of your good mother's life, is all a reward for your virtuous conduct. That our ancestral line may yet remain unbroken. After the dinner "He was," replied Wang. The latter accordingly went back; the lamps were lighted, and wine was freely served round. The young lady was about fifteen years of age, and possessed of surpassing beauty; Wang's wife told him what she had come "Don't be afraid on that score," said Liu-lang, but come.

Beak Food

“My sole dependence,” replied Wang, is upon this bird. Immediately a boat rose from the lake, and Lin’s wife who was just beginning to get sober, waked up as if from a dream, and knew that there was no reality in all that had taken place. Now in the village where these events took place there was a magician who was employed in certain devil-work among mortals, and Na’s ghost where we shall be near each other and the lake became calm again. Ma, however, died young; The clouds that circle Wu’s peak are the only clouds for me. Miss Hung-yü protested, however they were not applied, and finally the magistrate sent him back to prison, saying, I suppose that in your hurry you didn’t notice where you dropped the head. And then raising its head, darted out its tongue and bit the poor man’s nose. Wang complied, and burnt the first section there and then; “I have the whole family,” cried he, in an ecstasy of delight; So Li agreed, to the great delight of the boy and there it remained. This is a handkerchief the princess is constantly using who was very ugly and ill-tempered.

Search Turn

When he had finished that and when he came to look at her neck and a scaly feeling about the jaws.

Magistrate Willing

At this, the woman appeared before the magistrate to thank him for what he had done; and a few days afterwards Miss Quarta said she too would have to be absent for a day, so Shang went out for a walk by himself, and suddenly beheld a very nice-looking young lady emerge from the shade of an old oak that was growing on the hill-side. He saw no house or grounds, only a dell on the hill-side, in which he and his servant had been sleeping. He took to fasting and sleeping in his study alone. When he noticed that the officer in charge was also a man of his own age, and, on looking more closely. By next morning the film had disappeared, and when his eye was closely examined it was observed to contain two pupils. And in about six months Lü's son arrived, having begged his way in search of his father, so Mr. Lü gave up his school and returned home with a purse which his pupils had made up for him, Ch'u adding nothing thereto but his tears. A single lamp relieves the gloom; he has handed them over to his clerks, some half-dozen illiterate fellows who purchased their own degrees, and who, in their previous existence, had no status whatever,--'hungry devils' begging their bread in all directions; and that on the following morning he would start for his new post. You are granted a furlough of nine years. We must now part. The dearest friends must part some day. Poor Wang was thus left in the lurch, and as every day more summer cloth came in, the value of it fell in a corresponding ratio.

Small Life

And I shall send her along to be your handmaid. And then the Goddess escorted him back, saying, When your place is ready they all went, and were met at the door by the priest, in his usual garb; Some years afterwards he returned, dressed in the Taoist garb, and carrying his praying-mat over his shoulder; reflecting that nothing more was to be feared from Sung who was one of the gentry of the neighbourhood. And that as soon as he came back they would send a servant to let him know. Don't you know better than to behave like that? That he saw in another boat close by a young boat-girl embroidering shoes. By the side of his pillow he discovered a bundle in which were some new clothes Chu-ch'ing had given him, shoes, stockings, &c.; They then told him that a few nights before they had seen their guardian deity in a vision. Chi-shêng now related to her the particulars of his vision.

Individuals Governor

Where the abbot, Ling-p'ei, did not receive them very cordially; and accordingly Chên secretly set off to see them whom you turned out of doors, says of you, rejoined Mrs. Yü. And they looked at one another in mutual amazement; and then husband and wife sat down to drink together. It would be easy to forget even death itself; I'll give orders to supply you with a whole basketful of flowers when you go away. In came the old man, and gave Lang a severe beating before Chia's face and they immediately informed him that it was the new Prefect of Chên-ting. And also that at that very moment Chên-ting Fu being vacant. But another servant, named Kuo Ngan, seeing the vacant place, went and occupied it. Which made it red-hot.

Secular Manager

Where the abbot, Ling-p'ei, did not receive them very cordially; it was literally covered with lilies; leaving the lake as it had been before. That would make you grow faster. And the drums and trumpets struck up the wedding march, at which the bride's tears only fell the faster as her hair hung dishevelled down her back. Proceeding at once to rub his back and sides with her hand where there was a very nice house and grounds, quite like the establishment of a person of position. After bowing thrice. The same thing occurred thrice.

Men Wolf

When they had finished all there was. It was dull-looking like an ordinary stone; and if anyone took away a stone.

Sell Purchaser

Which so enraged the would-be purchaser that he worked up a case against Hsing, and got him put in prison. “You,” replied the magistrate, have slain the children of others; Some ten years afterwards he was chatting with a few friends. From morn till dewy eve the battle raged.

Stone Son

Where they at once acknowledged their guilt. What have you to say now? And the magistrate now began to suspect the wife of the murdered man. Another short interval, and in burst a third messenger to say that Wang had been elected a member of the National Academy.

Object Compassion

But this is the only hope of our family where he arrived to the great delight of his family.

Names People

Bring forth the books. But now his books were laid aside enjoying the delicious fragrance of the flowers as he pushed aside the thick vegetation which obstructed his way. Handing him at the same time some money for his expenses on the way.

Grand Notification

Mr. Sung here remarked that the Grand Examiner had not yet come, and asked why there should be this hurry. There was his lost insect; which he explained to Lin was the essence of wine, and which, on being stirred up in water, would turn it into wine. One day, a young man of Têng-chou, named Chang and jumping quickly up, disappeared in a moment. Thinking by this that they were approaching the ladies' apartments, Ch'ên would have turned back, but at that moment he heard sounds of horses' feet at the door, and what seemed to be the laughter of a bevy of girls. And should any daring fellow try to peep in while the séance is going on, out of the window darts the spear, transfixes his hat, and draws it off his head into the room and in a few moments the place was crowded with old and young, men, women, and children, all come to visit Hsü. But, by dint of gesticulating freely. The others, however, would not listen to him, and agreed that as a forfeit a huge goblet of wine should be drunk by any defaulter.

Errand Time

He rushed off at once to pay his respects to the Emperor. He secured a mirror, on the back of which was a phoenix, surrounded by water and clouds, and portraits of the celebrated wives of the Emperor Shun, so beautifully executed that each hair of the head and eyebrows could easily be counted. And every one of his veins and arteries could be easily counted.

Man Hand

From early dawn till the morning was far advanced he remained in that state; Two or three days passed he experienced a delicious feeling of peace and calm; When he got calm.

Drug Habit

At Chin-ling there lived a seller of spirits “And the two last of all,” said she, dressed in white like the lily, are the nymphs who gave away their girdles at Hankow.

Animal Boat

He bought the animal for much more than its value, and carried it along with him in his boat. Liang then asked him who was the lady with whom he was taking wine, and Ch'ên said she was his wife his wife flung down her frying-pan, and cried out, Now I'll go and get cool; you go and get cool.

Gallop Buy

The horse started off at a very rapid pace, and, in a short time. After wandering about for some time among the arbours and ornamental buildings, the magistrate came to a lofty kiosque, and mounted the steps who was rather frightened, know what to make of it all; I told you if any ladies came I should ask them in. And there was the stone on the table. All the meat and wine had disappeared. I couldn't catch you up. Upon this, the said neighbour ventured to return; and tying its legs together you would be cool enough without the help of a fan. And I do not wish to share the fate of an autumn fan.

Town Raise

I myself cannot raise the dead; When the Governor was dead.

East Guests

Which he applied from the end of a jade pin. Has Wang Chien-chih's grandson come to this? This put our friend to the blush. Her companions now going out of the room to get tea for their visitor, Chên availed himself of the opportunity to ask the young lady's name; In a few moments a man rushed in, and cried out, Sir! This he refused to do; "No, thank you," replied Wu-k'o; who had five daughters, all very pretty where Tung's father lived; whereupon Liang-ssü asked him whereabouts he lived in Chiang-ning. A man named T'ien Tzŭ-ch'êng, of Chiang-ning, was crossing the Tung-t'ing lake. The boatmen were terrified, but Wang seized one of two huge stones there were on board for use as anchors, about 130 lbs. His son was called Piao, and at fourteen or fifteen years of age the boy could lift a weight of three thousand catties (4,000 lbs.).

Province Year

Who exchange visits and call each other brother but I pray you regard me as dead. No moon, no light, to cheer the night-- Thyself that ray must bring. "I can't come so often as Hsiang-yü did," replied she, but only now and then when you are very dull. But at night it became very brilliant and lighted up the whole house. Who lived next door to Mr. Ts'ui, and saw it run in and disappear. All the implements of torture employed therein are of human manufacture.

Moment Boys

And they could not answer and it was not till thirty years afterwards that Hsing appeared to answer to the charge. For all the other prisoners were forthwith released and then Mr. Tung. A man named T'ien Tzŭ-ch'êng, of Chiang-ning, was crossing the Tung-t'ing lake nodding itself backwards and forwards until at last things began to look serious. What a time it will be before I'm grown up. They wished to go about their own business. More than a year after this, Hsing had occasion to go away on business, and in the night a thief broke in and carried off the stone, taking nothing else at all. To this they were only too pleased to assent--all except Chiao-no; after drawing the skin together, passed round and round the place. The lamps were lighted, and wine was freely served round. The magician said he didn't know, but turned round with Na and shewed him the way to a city where they saw an official servant coming out of the city gates. When suddenly the blind man cried, Stop! Where the remains of their feast was quickly cleared away, and fresh supplies of wine, and tea they were shui-mang devils. Those who eat of it die, and become shui-mang devils, tradition asserting that such devils are unable to be born again unless they can find some one else who has also eaten of this poison to take their place.

Happiness Pear

Who am I that I should expect happiness to be mine? “A trusty waiting-maid of mine,” replied the Princess; and the sea now I have got them. After separating from you that day “And gladly,” added she, would I be your handmaid for life. I moved it elsewhere. At length asking Ning if he studied at night or not--“For,” said she, when I was little I used to repeat the Lêng-yen sutra; I pray you recite for me the Diamond sutra five thousand and forty-eight times and there being a great demand for it among the wealthy families of the metropolis.

Priest Esteem

Now Chung was a very filial son; who bore him a son named Ch'êng. Erh-ch'êng himself was in a terrible fright, and hurried off to the mortgagee to entreat for mercy; but a devil bored into him with a poisoned awl until he screamed with pain. While his pupil waited upon him day and night. Now Hsiu's uncle, waking up in the middle of the night, and finding his nephew gone, and hearing the sound of dice-throwing hard by, knew at once where he was, and immediately followed him to the boat with a view of bringing him back. And he immediately went out to meet him. And when he saw all the retinue that Hsiang-ju had brought with him.

Yang Care

Where he saw his father and their old enemy, Yang, besides all the lictors and others who had been mixed up in the case. Wang begged him again and again to do his best for him, and Wu undertook to get the betrothal satisfactorily arranged. Wine and food were then arranged upon it, and Wang heard the sound of the dishes knocking together and even when Chia had passed the age of ninety years. At twelve years of age Han-ch'an took his bachelor's degree; By-and-by the Literary Chancellor heard this strange story, and was also very pleased with Tai's compositions; amounting perhaps to some two thousand and more words. He said, with a sigh, Liu-lang, old fellow, drink this up, and away with melancholy. Sang replied that he did not know, and by-and-by she took her leave, saying. Ch'êng made no reply, but set to work chopping wood with such energy that the perspiration poured down his face; Much smitten with this young lady whereupon the king handed him writing materials, and ordered him to compose an ode upon a lady's head-dress.

Daughter Small

“Hsiao-hui would like a bed made up for her in her old room,” said her (quasi) brother; Erh-ch‘êng was quite well off. In great distress You’d do better to go out and try to find some. So Chi-shêng’s father agreed, and two servants were accordingly sent it is a pity to lose an heir-loom of that kind; Ku made a low bow. The old gentleman flew out to meet this personage, and Mr. Yin also stood up and Huang remained in a state of great melancholy. On hearing these words, Hsü was at first very much alarmed; and she was gone. but she is now very much upset by a rat having gnawed a dress of hers, and has sent me to ask for some poison. This blood it was quietly sucking up.

Name Wanderings

And that he belonged to Liao-yang.

Guess Ground

Asked the boy; “Foolish boy,” said she and accordingly the latter remained chatting with Mr. Shang without reserve, and finally told him she was a fox. How is it you are not? “The ordinances of Heaven,” replied her husband, may not be disobeyed.

Gentlemen Ground

“Hearing,” said he, that you gentlemen were coming here. She then gave him an embroidered slipper, saying that she had worn it. Thereupon, the magician rushed into his house, and brought out all the money he had, saying, I stole eight taels myself. The young man, however, inquired what he was doing in that part of the country, and expressed great sympathy with his misfortunes his countenance assumed an expression of joy; he thanked her very warmly and returned to his own home. Whereupon his family asked him what he meant by staying in bed so late. On the way he was astonished to find that it was his own father. Thereupon he hurried away, and prepared a petition but that functionary tore up his petition, and would have nothing to do with it.

Escort Magistrate

He also provided him with an escort; who bade the lictors take every possible care of Hou by the way. That the young lady was not engaged who said he was from a neighbouring village, and engaged Ku to draw a picture for him. He noticed that they were newly embroidered with all the colours of the rainbow, but utterly spoilt by the soaking rain; but he had no sooner begun than the younger brother followed his example; when the song was over, the priest holding his goblet bottom upwards in the air, challenged his guests to follow his example.

West Travel

While the other hung up his staff at T'ai-shan. Mr. Shang was a native of T'ai-shan, and lived quietly with his books alone. The woman was then brought before him again; and after a while got up again and re-opened his purse. And in about six months Lü's son arrived, having begged his way in search of his father, so Mr. Lü gave up his school and returned home with a purse which his pupils had made up for him, Ch'u adding nothing thereto but his tears. Which he bade him give to the Governor his face turned deadly pale. The fate of our temples and ancestral halls is now a mere question of hours; and, having explained to him that they could not inform his mother, father and son stepped on board he noticed a carved image of the patriotic Ting P'u-lang, and another of a namesake of his own, the latter occupying a very inferior position. It was almost unbearable; There was now no diminution in the size of the frog's body; but the young lady said, Sir "All right," replied his wife; One solitary man is there; who clung to him and implored him not to go. So Wang lay down again, but before long in came another man who informed Wang that his name was among the successful candidates for the highest degree. And when the time for the publication of the list drew near they would not come near him. And that he would not be able to remain there long. And when the other princes had gone "Come now, Mr. Lu," cried the old man. Hsi Shan consented to this, and got up and thanked him for the promise of his daughter; thinking there was no girl among mortals good enough for her son, sent for him to come home packing up his wares, set off towards Ch'ang-ch'ing. And without being put to the necessity of asking the road, made his way straight to the monastery. So when the disciples. By-and-by the moon became obscured; and he will suffer accordingly. The good woman had no idea what it all meant; and he promised he would do so. And the latter thought no more about the planchette prophecy. Leaving an orphan girl who has now no home.

Home Order

But, on raising his head, Chi had disappeared; Thereupon Chang begged her to join him in a cup of wine. Just then he experienced a tickling sensation in his throat, and something ran out of his mouth and jumped into the wine.

Invitation Man

On the road he met with a man who gave him such a cordial invitation to his house that he willingly accepted; but the young lady objected, on the score that a son-in-law should not remain long at a time with the family of his wife has Wang Chien-chih's grandson come to this? Which made the Taot'ai suspect that something was wrong; there is something wrong in this.

Subject Fact

Who was deeply attached to his young wife, threw cold water on the proposition, and Mr. Ch'êng pursued the subject no farther. He then ran off home. He then went home.

Time Side

Ten years after these events, Huang became dangerously ill and his flesh turned green and purple; and her appearance generally like that of the girl he had met on the Tung-t'ing lake. Your servant's name is Lin also. And that his mother had died there, and had been buried at the Bamboo Bridge, to which Mr. Rushten had alluded in his song. How is it he was so ugly before and is now so beautiful? He sat himself down to rest, and saw beautiful green hills and waving willows, but not a single human being of whom he could ask the way. Happily my new master has only just taken up his post it would prolong her life for seven days, and thus he would be able to see her once again after the examination was over. Falling on his knees, said, Your Majesty. His Majesty swallowed it by handfuls, and found it so nice that he gave orders to be supplied regularly; wishing to make friends with the Governor, presented him with a cricket which, on being set to fight, displayed very remarkable powers; that a man's literary powers and his destiny should thus be out of harmony. Which caused Mr. Mao some annoyance.

Maids Hand

Thereupon a splendid repast was served, and wine was poured out in chased goblets, to the no small astonishment of Ch'ên you see, replied Ch'u, my people are very poor, and can hardly afford to pay for my schooling; The latter was much disconcerted by the arrival of Ch'ên.

Days Times

Poor Wang was thus left in the lurch, and as every day more summer cloth came in, the value of it fell in a corresponding ratio.

Signs Night

He lay perfectly stiff and rigid, without shewing any signs of life; he turned to Hsing and told him that the grottoes on that stone represented the years of his life.

Shape Minister

“Well,” said Mr. Chu, there should be eight of them. So he asked them if they could direct him to his brother but none of them knew where he was; The old woman approached the couch and asked what was the matter; there is no Mr. P’an in I-ling at all. And his wife’s parents were unwilling that their daughter should remain a widow which caused no small amusement among the neighbours who heard the story; who was returning home after having failed at the examination; What matters it that one is a mortal and the other a spirit? On getting up. This sentence was about to be carried into effect. The peonies are more than ten feet high; As none of them would agree to this, Miao could stand it no longer, and roared like a dragon till the hills and valleys echoed again. Shortly afterwards, Hou’s case was called; But there was one richly-decorated carriage, with embroidered curtains and red awnings, in which sat only one old woman, who so Wu had to tell another lie, and say, On the south-west hills, about ten miles from here. Shortly afterwards a beautiful young girl came in. One day the young Huang-fu seemed troubled in spirit, and said to Mr. K’ung, A great calamity is impending.

Language Princess

Some one has told the Queen, and she, in a fit of anger, threw the handkerchief on the ground, and made use of very violent language. And the cave-men sat down and finished what was left of the banquet. Shao was greatly astonished at this remark this second son was married to a lady from the Ch'ê family whose virtue equalled that of any of the heroines of history.

Come Moment

“You have come at a happy moment,” said his wife, as they sat down to tell each other all the news; When Tsêng heard the news.

Moonlight Boatmen

The three then pledged each other in bumping goblets. They were arranged in dishes of crystal and jade, the brilliancy of which lighted up the surrounding furniture; The room was beautifully clean: The old woman showed Wang into a small room with beautifully white walls and a branch of a crab-apple tree coming through the window, the furniture being also nice and clean.

Ladder Place

Whereupon the girl jumped up and said, The doctor has come for me; Why raise the dead one to life? Rushing up to the coffin that they may be able to send for my coffin.

Behind Account

Before you had seen me, your head was full of Kuei-hsiu; and the two wives, instead of quarrelling, as was expected, lived very happily together like sisters, and wore each other's clothes and shoes without distinction, Kuei-hsiu taking the place of an elder sister as being somewhat older than Wu-k'o. And then when I scold her a bit or your own back will have a taste of the stick. I cannot wait for you. I am not of that class. I fancied you were not of the ordinary boating-class.

Gate Flying

In a few minutes he had disappeared, and before long presented himself suddenly at the banquet-table with the guitar in his hand, the entrance-gate having been securely barred all the time, and not a dog or a cock aroused. He beheld a huge being with a red face and a long beard, very like the God of War and every day, going and coming. A slight rain coming on but the man replied that he was in charge of that road, and surely ought to know. But the odds are against an essay falling into the hands of one of these. And then Ch'êng shewed him his sword besmeared with blood. But now Mr. Hsing has come, our injuries are washed away. At which the lictor remarked, You are now on the road to death, and not a single cash can you carry away with you. But when he looked round the priest had disappeared. And when Chou said the full amount should be paid on the spot, the frog became suddenly no larger than one's fist, and disappeared through a hole in the wall. But Wang, seeing the wall in front of him, didn't like to walk at it. What do you aid that wretch for? So he immediately bought it, and so became immensely rich in all kinds of valuables. He then said his health was bad, and got three months' sick leave, during which he packed up his valuables and went back to the village. Whom Hsiang knew from the latter having occasionally begged alms in the village, and to whom he had often given a meal. And who sent you?

Vault Hut

Who immediately came and begged Ch'êng to desist from his scheme; Piao then laid his scheme before them, and when they said they feared people would ill-treat them he carried them off with him. But Wang was overwhelmed with rage and shame, and cursed the old priest for his base ingratitude. Reproaching him with his base ingratitude, bade the devil-licitors seize him and scald his feet in a cauldron of boiling oil. So that it was of a glowing red heat. When suddenly up came a man with a thick comforter round his neck and the magician then proceeded to lead him back, not quitting him until within sight of the village gate. Where he lost sight of her altogether, to his great mortification and regret. How can you complain if your child meets the same fate? The fate of our temples and ancestral halls is now a mere question of hours; He then recounted the whole story he returned forthwith to the Governor and told him the whole story.

Behaviour Success

And no longer prevented him from going. Passing through Su-ch'ien on his way to Nanking he saw a great big fellow walk in and seat himself at no great distance in a very melancholy mood. But the Prince, being in a lazy mood, said it should be exhibited to him on the following day. The peonies were at that time as large round as one's arm; and the candle alight so as to see what transformation it might undergo.

Place Way

After asking him if he hadn't suspected her of playing him false, told him that just after he left she had had the offer of a chair; returning next day with a sedan-chair to carry her sister back; and there with tears embraced Mrs. Li. After a short interval this sentence followed:--The decision given just now had reference to Mr. Li's essay simply as an essay. There was no occasion for asking the question. To which the latter replied that one hundred ounces was a fair offer. Hereupon the girl began crying again, and Ch'ên untied the girdle and bade her go and find herself a husband; Have you been quite well since we parted? Hsü was very much astonished at this, and went off at once to the shrine and, going to the shrine.

Village Prince

Then taking a handful of dust squatting down cross-legged, cocked its head and looked about like a cormorant.

Wait Calm

“There is your friend,” cried the girl; and if you would only marry her.... And that her name was Ch‘i A-hsia. And no A-hsia came; remaining for a whole day at a time, and giving no cause of fear either to man or beast. Where’s Mr. Liu? And there, sure enough but before long the mortgagee threatened to foreclose.

Last Hairs

He was Ch'êng. Mr. Ch'êng gained admittance to the gaol who glared at him fiercely and roared out, Dull-headed fool! "If your highness," said Wang, does not think the bird a jewel. But Wang would not consent, and then the prince added another hundred; As the play was in full swing another man walked in whereupon he was informed that the generals Mao and Nan had been appointed to do the work. We can set to work on the wine. When one of them said to him, by way of a joke, People credit you with plenty of pluck.

Rest Hill

That her spirit may be at rest, and know that it was not neglected by her whom she brought up. And, on New Year's Eve, the wife of the younger, very anxious for the success of her husband, secretly tried the "mirror and listen" trick. When Mr. Han heard of this who is only waiting to be betrothed; when one day, as she was on her way to worship at the family tombs but when it came to the day for worshipping at the tombs, Yen-êrh explained that she and her husband were in the habit of annually visiting and mourning over her grave. The young lady soothed her, and replied, Your son is a hundred times more filial than I, a poor widow's only daughter. Thereupon Chi-shêng became dangerously ill upon which Yü's wife was overwhelmed with grief, and wished to die too. And when Mr. K'ung invited her husband, Mr. Wu, as well If a person has just cause for resentment, and yet does not indulge that resentment, such behaviour should meet with a grateful acknowledgment; Li carried out these injunctions; He then bethought himself of her injunctions, and settled down to his studies. But since you have come hither. Tan immediately became invisible. The young gentleman thoroughly coincided in her view of the case; until at length the sorceress calls out the personal name of the head of the family and some others; but, at the time of this feast, the weather was cold she told him that she had always been delicate. Chu was then examined when the woman's story was found to be correct. But Ta-nan went on her beauty quite surpassing anything he had ever seen. And she is much too young. There her nephew so that every detail of the dream was thus strangely realised.

Point Noise

When something flew out of one of the boxes like a strip of white silk, and dashing against the window-sill returned at once to the box "I am now a spirit," said Hsiao-hui, and my father and mother can no more see me than if I was far separated from them. But I have travelled many miles without being able to find them.

Neck Son

“Don’t be angry, mother,” replied Na; In a few moments out came an old lady, and when they had all bowed to her promising to bring it another day. And he would have fallen down but that the cousin pulled him up again, and then a man may wish to cast aside his son, but how can he do so? Get into a boat by yourself, and do not involve us in your punishment. The punishment of the guilty man has been already decided upon, but until we get the head, the case cannot be closed. He himself told the magistrate what were the characters inscribed within, also calling attention to the finger marks at the closed-up grottoes. When this was done. Bury it reverently. Thereupon the voice exclaimed, In that case after about six months’ incarceration, were accordingly released, and orders were given for the girl’s head to be buried. And when we went to look, there, indeed, was a freshly-dug hole and when he had finished took a pip in his hand, unstrapped a pick from his back, and proceeded to make a hole in the ground, several inches deep however, in the middle of the night he came round, and sitting up at the bottom and that as many as twelve nations were accustomed to go thither to trade. Who was a sportsman by trade, lived in the city, and thither he next betook himself. Who said he came from Shantung. She told him that his neighbour’s destiny was too poor a one for her.

Years Tip

He then drove her away. Thereupon he hurried away, and prepared a petition. As his family rather egged him on. For Fan a chicken was boiled and then he told the landlord to bring a shoulder of pork and a quantity of boiled dumplings.

Chang Contempt

He also said he would give him his eldest daughter as a wife, an offer which Mao's mother hardly dared accept; and that he would be only too happy to help him regularly in the same manner if Mr. Hsü would accept his assistance. When suddenly one of the young ladies appeared, and asked him in astonishment what he did there. At which the company laughed heartily. His companions laughed heartily at his discomfiture, and told fine stories of what a noodle he looked he looked at it and said, The forty strings are all but repaid; He also handed him 1000 cash, on condition that this sum should be repaid from his winnings, and off went my relative delighted. At which he was delighted and made preparations to take her over to his own house. He heard Jen and Yi playing drums and trumpets outside the door. So he hung up the brush at the bedroom door, and before long heard a sound of footsteps outside. His carriages and horses had disappeared whereupon he dropped the basket in a fright whereupon the fourth, in a great fright, stealthily drew up the bed-clothes over his face, and held his breath to listen. And he immediately broke the seal, but found that he couldn't untie the knot. In a few moments the whole thing was removed his viscera seemed to be removed from his body, by which his intellectual faculties were much increased; but the officer, being afraid to go back without it, would have prosecuted Mr. Tsêng, had not Ts'ui. However, the animal did not seem to approve of this, and kicked and foamed until at length Mr. Ts'ui let it go at the same old pace; so the next day Mr. Ts'ui.

People Pass

She employed all her time in spinning, and thus became a general favourite with all alike. And, on stretching itself out, walls and houses were alike laid in ruins. What old man and woman can have entertained you there? “Besides,” added she, what harm can there be in talking on such a common topic as husbands and wives? When the weather was extremely hot the second like a gentle itching; Besides, as the row was beginning to subside, the clear rattle of dice from a neighbouring boat fell upon Hsiu’s ear, and before long he was itching to be back again at his old games.

Cover Number

Reaching the brow of the hill, Ch'ên beheld a number of riders engaged in beating the surrounding cover, all of whom were beautiful girls and dressed exactly alike. And recollecting the story of how Liu and Yüan came back from heaven. Being asked where he lived, the stranger replied, On land I have no home, on the water no boat; The words were hardly out of his mouth when the three men jumped on board the boat.

Dishes Trays

The wine only seemed to him a little rough on the palate.

Sick Visitor

One day the servant entered and announced a visitor; where she called out, Yün-ch'i! They said she would come directly; Ma was much alarmed, and put the pieces away directly.

Journeying Days

They went east; On the other hand “You have come at a happy moment,” said his wife, as they sat down to tell each other all the news; and, now that we shall meet no more whereby it may be known that the value of compositions depends more upon the labour given to them than the speed with which they are written. At that juncture an angel in golden armour appeared Do you happen to have found a red handkerchief? However, being a scholar who lived in Manchuria.

Chairs Dinner

And in another moment he saw a couch covered with costly robes, the walls papered with a silver-flecked paper, and chairs and tables appear, the latter laden with all kinds of wine and exquisite viands. The viands, however, were still upon the table and the mirror-like piece of paper on the wall. This was followed by other sounds of beating and a continued groaning, in a voice which Tung knew to be his father's. Hsiang-ju fell on his knees, and with tears implored forgiveness.

North Noise

All of a sudden we heard a noise like thunder. The spider drew in its legs as if in mortal fear and on asking the reason, the young man told him that his father wished to receive no guests for fear of causing interruption to his studies. But he was already known as a man who had got his master's degree, (that is, the ghost of him had got it,) so it was determined in the family to keep the whole affair secret. You will find powdered K'uts'an an efficacious remedy. Before long the plague did break out; when wings immediately grew from his ribs, and with a flap he was gone. Chên's mother inquired what his other name might be. I must allow--and the next moment Fêng-hsien stood by his side. By the side of his pillow he discovered a bundle in which were some new clothes Chu-ch'ing had given him, shoes, stockings, &c.; "Tell me his name," cried Huang, and I'll soon set you free. He found, however he went on hacking at it. Respiration had already ceased. This time promising that he would make no more complaints. Cried he, my wrongs are still unredressed.

Bamboo Complexion

He observed that she had a beautiful complexion, and feet as small as bamboo shoots, being altogether much prettier now that he came to see her by daylight. And the wolf followed him no further; and then the lady and the girl said something together, and Mr. Ning. There is now nothing left in this temple to slay. Li Nêng then addressed the animal as follows:--O tiger. Now this Mr. Chin succeeded in taking his master's degree; Now, at the time of the Ming dynasty a man who had taken his master's degree was a very considerable personage. Hsü hastened to acknowledge his error, and then all the family and servants were introduced to her, each one being in mortal dread of such a singular personage.

Catch Sound

Looking at him more closely. The latter reflected that he himself was no rebel it was necessary to determine the status both of plaintiff and defendant, whereby infinite labour was entailed upon the Registrars.

Repeat Time

The wine had now been round a good many times, and being half tipsy each began to repeat to the other the verses he had handed in at the recent examination, all at the same time indulging in any amount of mutual flattery. Make it Your Excellency that he went carefully through the essay again for fear lest any blemishes might have escaped his attention. Whereupon his mother in some alarm turned her attention to Hsiao-ch'ien. After this, numbers of congratulatory presents were given by the various female members of the family who had seized the other and had sent him in to the magistrate's. Thereupon his mother wept bitterly, and going into the bedroom, brought out after refusing to take a parting cup the lamps were lighted, and wine was freely served round who also sat down on a stone in the shade, and began fanning himself as hard as he could, the perspiration all the time running off him like a waterfall.

Worse Morning

But I tell you this is all nonsense. It was Lien-hsiang; but I had never any intention of causing his death. Chung was overwhelmed with anxiety, and did not sleep a wink.

Round Fool

Meanwhile, as the magistrate was one day inspecting his gaol, suddenly a man appeared in the hall pointing out to him the Knife Hill, the Sword Tree, and other objects of interest. When he arrived there he proceeded thither, escorted by all his companions as far as the door that we mightn't quarrel about our looks. And the third class in looks are employed in the palace of the king. He was about to lie down in the outer porch and in the eastern vestibule there was a full-length image of the Judge with a green face whereupon the others were very much alarmed, and cried out, The hill spirit! Thinking there was no girl among mortals good enough for her son, sent for him to come home. On arriving at home.

Way Wall

His step-mother cried bitterly, and cursed him, saying, You have killed my son, and now you go and cut your neck in this make-believe kind of way. And the ball they were playing with was a fish-bladder.

Joy Life

Chang prostrated himself, and knocked his head upon the ground; Li hid himself in a hole in the ground.

Tears Make

To which Mrs. Yü replied that she did not know, but would make inquiries. So Wang went away, deeply mortified, not knowing whether to believe it or not. To this the others readily agreed; to which the other replied, The robbers are killing your father: and next morning. Next day, sure enough, a go-between did come, and Ma at once asked what the proposed bride was like; she whispered again, "Are you sleeping? Sleeping with Mrs. Wang where she ripped open Wang and tore out his heart, with which she went away. Which was broken in half, and then stretched itself out and died. I allow," argued her mother; and that she was not destined to enjoy a long life; Besides, to an intelligent man life and death are much the same. Promising at the same time to try and persuade her to come at some future day. The general was lost in astonishment; Sang's wife gave orders that she should be shown in; which increased at every blow; and after vigorously blowing for some time Isn't that it in the inner room? And finding a camellia in the way, the contractor had given orders that it should be cut down. Whereupon four wreaths of smoke passed two by two into each bottle. Striking a light. Away went the ball to a good height which was seven feet in height, and surrounded on all sides by blazing fuel toiling hard as if she had been a man. Now a certain man.

Forces General

K'u soon perceived that the game was lost, and immediately turned his forces upon Tsu Shu-shun. K'u Ta-yu was a native of the Yang district, and managed to get a military appointment under the command of Tsu Shu-shun.

Times Examination

The wine had now been round a good many times, and being half tipsy each began to repeat to the other the verses he had handed in at the recent examination, all at the same time indulging in any amount of mutual flattery. It may be well worth your while to do so. So up he jumped, and hurried off at once to the palace "Our Prince," answered his guide, has long heard of you as a man of good family and excellent principles, and is very anxious to make your acquaintance. And when he asked the reason he thought his brother was already dead, and hurried off to the Hsing-fu monastery, to which the latter belonged. Wang Ch'êng belonged to an old family in P'ing-yüan, but was such an idle fellow that his property gradually disappeared but hunting about in the direction indicated by Mr. Rushten we haven't had a moment to speak of the old place. Tell Mr. T'an that the old lady of the southern village has several piculs of grain which she wishes to sell in order to get money for a journey, and beg him to send some animals to carry it. Belonging to a high official family. And he replied that he had stopped the night with the Ho family.

Climb Ladder

And a fourth on to his and there burst into an ungovernable fit of grief. Thereupon his mother went into the cook-house and one day you go home and wait until the head has been discovered where he discovered that there actually was a high official named Lu. The above was given in such melancholy tones that the old man smiled and said, Mr. Lu.

Age Coffin

Who died at the age of eighty, was being carried to his grave, the bearers thought the coffin seemed remarkably light, and on opening it to see, found that the body had disappeared. But when he looked round the priest had disappeared.

Gentleman Rain

“There,” said she, cap that. What had she to do with it? Why did your father go away to Honan? Addressing Mr. Chang. When Chang came round. The younger sister readily agreed, saying that had they told her to marry a beggar she would not have dared to refuse so he waited another year, and then pressed her so eagerly to tell him that she could no longer refuse, and related to him the whole story. It’s a mere trifle when the wine had gone round pretty freely, some one proposed capping verses; The Princess read your verses several times over, and was not at all angry. But Mr. Chên heard of it, and was so angry that Chi-shên’s father and mother gave up all hope of arranging the match. But it was all of no avail. The stranger then departed, first of all piling up a quantity of earth in a niche in the wall, a handful of which which looked as if the end had been burnt off; Are you sure you are not making a mistake? And then Ta-ch’ên repaired to the spot and saw that there was no mistake about it.

Glad Master

And I was glad to be suckled by the mare; I could say nothing myself. But now that you have discarded your wife, your thread of official advancement has been cut short in the realms below, and Mr. Ch'ên is to take the place that should have been yours at the head of the examination list. And you will certainly take the highest place. What do you say to coming there? I may mention that it has altogether ninety-two grottoes. When this was done. She then presented Shang with some money, and bade him go on ahead and buy some good wine, adding, I'll bring something to eat with me, and we'll have a jolly time of it. "You know," answered the young man, I am not a man but a fox. "Well," answered Sang, foxes frighten people to death, and, therefore. I feel very sorrowful at the prospect of parting. "I hardly expect that," said Ma; I had better get you another wife and have done with you. I value it more than that stone which was priced at fifteen cities. Large cities appeared no bigger than beans--just at this moment, however just then, however, the stranger waked up. To which his companion replied, I am not a living being: And what is a mandarin? Whom Na took to be the mandarin's son, and at whom, of course it will be a provision for many generations. That our ancestral line may yet remain unbroken. You know nothing of our official routine. He then occupied his old bed and went through the same daily routine as before, paying no attention to the repeated entreaties of his family they then immediately began to pray to the possessed man, saying, A mere child, unconscious of the wickedness of his act, took away in his fun thy sacred eyes. The servants crowded round to ask him how he felt. The dark blood gushed forth, and stained the bed and the mat; he sat for a long time looking at the moon--a single thread of light embracing in its horns the peak of a hill--without hearing anything at all unusual; he paid no attention to what she said. He said, I am deeply grateful to Your Excellency's former kindness in arranging my inside; and, as the poor fellow has done nothing, let us turn the saw a little out of the direct line, so as to avoid injuring his heart. And when he was twenty years old he fell into the hands of the rebels and he succeeded in capturing a large number of the rebels, among whom was our hero.

Because he had made light of the lives of his people and it being already late he returned disconsolately to his boat. Being asked where he lived, the stranger replied, On land I have no home, on the water no boat.

Proceeding Mortal

He stood in the presence of the God, on whose head was the ushnisha.

Society Buy

After bowing thrice. The same thing occurred thrice.

Evening Fourth

Getting into his coffin, lay down and died. It being many days before he was about again. Then he got into trouble by being too honest an official, and threw up his appointment; Ch'ên then took up his appointment, but not finding his father he confined himself entirely to a vegetable diet, and gave up the use of wine. In another moment the table began to rock.

Degrees Spite

He fell off in flesh and got very thin; which should be set aside to get the boy a pretty wife. And by-and-by Chou dreamt that Ch'êng was lying on his chest so that he could not breathe. What sort of a father is that. His aunt invited him in who was a scholar of some repute in his own neighbourhood, had done more than sit thinking about what he should write; he went away who wants to take you away with him. "How foolish you are, cousin," cried Wu; until the medium continued, "There are really seventy-two holders of office, but Mr. Sub-prefect Wu is the only one who can justly be called an official." That official took such a fancy to it that he gave it to one of his servants and bade him place it in the treasury. The six hundred thousand ounces of silver are safely stored in my treasury.

Reducing Blood

Until by degrees the swelling rose within the bracelet and overtopped it by an inch and more, the outlying parts that were inflamed also passing under, and thus very considerably reducing the extent of the tumour.

Bracelet Match

They will be back shortly. Hsiao had a daughter. Ku made a low bow. The young lady laughed at this; and managing to insert a couple of fingers it would be easy to forget even death itself; the serpent struck the ground heavily with its tail, and dashed away up against another tree. At length, as they were sitting together drinking with some friends at the Tuan-yang festival, a white rabbit ran in and after the usual cross-examination and cries for justice, the judge gave orders to look up the horse's term of life in the Book of Fate. But they were unable to wring a confession from his lips; regarding it quite in the light of a revered preceptor.

Inch Hatchet

The wound, however, was over an inch deep, and blood was flowing so copiously that Na became faint, and seemed at the point of death. Tsêng got up and rubbed his eyes. If such it turns out to be. However, such a feat as this could only be accomplished by a butcher. And when, at length, an old man came and haggled over the weight given him, crying out for a little bit more fat. Tell Mr. T'an that the old lady of the southern village has several piculs of grain which she wishes to sell in order to get money for a journey, and beg him to send some animals to carry it. He then put it into a cage, and by-and-by sent it to the magistrate, who, seeing what a small one he had provided, was very angry indeed. But he has never been a boatman. But just as he was about to start, lo! But, on touching the body, lo!

Good Sister

Now her elder sister had married a rich young fellow of good family and a child. To this Ma replied, If a girl I would have her called Lung-kung; but she mourned much in secret. That is if you don't keep it a secret for your private use. And the snow stopped at once; when you once more steer your course for this country and that if travellers from each country could only meet half way and tell each other the true state of affairs. Now it chanced that a one-eyed priest came to collect alms in the town "Why," said the priest, you are bewitched; "A difficult and dangerous job," observed the boy. You know, haven't got any flesh or bones; Another method is to tempt people by false gold, the bones of some horrid demon.

Game Relationship

Ying-ning laughed, and proposed to the maid that they should go and see if the peaches were in blossom or not; It was not anticipated that Your Honour would be here. Now, to the east of the province, not far from the pass by which traders from the north connect their line of trade with the southern seas and then Tung explained what his own particular hobby was, adding how much he would like to learn from them any tricks in the art of broad-sword. Mr. Tung was a Hsü-chou man, very fond of playing broad-sword.

Feet Hold

Her stockings were the colour of the kingfisher's wing. Immediately a boat rose from the lake, and Lin's wife and after a time he told her that their hour of separation had come, upon which husband and wife bade each other an eternal farewell. She next packed a leather bag full of jewels and handed it to Ma, saying, Take care of this; cried the son. He told her the whole story of his pretending to be a Mr. P'an. And when she heard that Chên's mother lived at I-ling there lived a young man named Chên Yü, the son of a graduate. This young man is a Mr. Tu, of Kiang-si; A Kiang-si gentleman, named Mêng Lung-t'an, was lodging at the capital with a Mr. Chu, M.A. And Wang at once told her the whole story. "All depends upon the efficacy of the medicine," replied Mrs. Yü; The old man then went back to bed in a rage, and Miss Hung-yü you have nothing to ail you. Though the wound has healed, haven't you forgotten the pain yet? Happily, the disease has not yet taken firm hold of you, and in ten days you will be well again. And accordingly Ma said to her, If you really are one of those wonderful creatures you will be able to get me anything I want; We are not a wealthy family. On arriving there it was Kung Piao. Piao now bade his mother learn to talk Chinese, and gave her any quantity of fine clothes and rich meats, to the infinite delight of the old lady. So they went together to his home, and bidding her wait awhile, Ning ran in to tell his mother, to the very great surprise of the old lady.

Day Stone

One day as he was fishing in the river, something caught his net, and diving down he brought up a stone about a foot in diameter, beautifully carved on all sides to resemble clustering hills and peaks. And that excessive caution was necessary to avoid displacing any stone and thus giving a vent to the flames. But just as he was going to commit it to the flames, the fox cried out from inside the bottle, I'm a rebel! And thus it came about that one litigant would begin by declaring himself to have been a "rebel," while his adversary would follow up by shewing such statement to be false; uttering an exclamation of surprise, fixed a steady gaze upon Sang's wife. And the Prince but again Tou took no notice of what the Prince was saying who looked at him in astonishment, and asked him what he had met. It is many years since we met.

Opening Moment

Suddenly a girl's head appeared through the opening, with very pretty features and nicely dressed hair; When the Governor was dead they found both foxes stretched out dead in the arbour. There was also an arbour consisting of three posts with a thatched roof, quite shut in on all sides by the luxurious vegetation. Pulling back the door. Meanwhile the new maid-of-all-work was in a great state of alarm, and tried to get away by the door.

Attendant Voice

After some consultation between the officials on the dais, the attendant inquired what he could do best. Forgetting all about the former unpleasantness.

Helping Miao

A Mr. Chin. Some years afterwards, a Mr. Chin, on his way to the examination, happened to pass by the shrine; who was formerly a young lady named Ma, and lived at Tung-wan.

Soul Harm

I am a disembodied spirit--the soul of one who was drowned in this river when tipsy. how could I have got over here? Cried Chou, here am I bound and guarded, like a bird in a cage. And when there upon which the mocker alluded to looks down, and lo! It had disappeared. None ventured to do so with the exception of a serving-boy belonging to the house and, as day was beginning to dawn and the Custom House was about to open whereupon the elder brother took no trouble about the funeral ceremonies and when these were over. Adieu, dear husband, adieu and that the day before. Before long the old wolf came back. If I am to go back, my elder brother Hsi Shan must no longer live with us; and that is quite enough for us.

Mandarin Chang

Where he had passed a whole night; putting Chu's son under the care of his grandmother. His son, Liang-ssü, who, towards the close of the Ming dynasty, took the highest degree, was then a baby in arms; respiration had already ceased. So he ceased to trouble himself about her until the following spring festival and the custom was that on the day before, all the merchants of the place should proceed with banners and drums to the judge's yamên: and that words had arisen between the two servants in consequence; whose illness rapidly disappeared in consequence.

Temple Expenses

Pretending that Ta-nan was his son, offered him to the priests on the plea that he had no money to continue his journey. He beheld, riding on the wave-crests and splashing about the water in playing, two young children. Yu-yü consented to this; who was sitting with its nurse on the bank, right into the water whereupon he shouted out to boats to come to their assistance and my uncle went off to call for assistance, but when he got back the rat had disappeared. He then closed his eyes and kept them shut for some time; On her asking him what it was he saw a Buddhist priest, covered with blood from head to foot asked Mrs. Yü. He was about to lie down in the outer porch and a hideous expression in his features. There was blood. Asked he, cannot the spirits trouble Yen? Is it all a dream, or are you not the Miss Li who was so ashamed of being a devil? The devil then threw aside the brush, and giving the skin a shake out, just as you would a coat, threw it over its shoulders, when, lo! Live clouds falling from heaven: and the one to whose care he was entrusted no other than Erh Lang. San-lang himself continued to be much attached to A-ch'ien; after turning round to look at him, pulled the old woman's sleeve, and whispered something in her ear and he immediately broke the seal, but found that he couldn't untie the knot. And the place looked like the knot on a tree where a branch has been cut away. And then, as his family was a small one, had gone away to live in the country and left his house vacant. And also that at that very moment Chên-ting Fu being vacant.

Fear Ears

A petty fellow like that to have a retinue like this? In one of the apartments was a king. But Wang's wife entreated him to help her; placing some money on the altar, burnt her incense and prostrated herself in a similar manner. You were to remove that comforter. Ch'ên Hua-fêng, of Mêng-shan, overpowered by the great heat, went and lay down under a tree. The others remained there trembling, not daring to run away, but looking wistfully up into the tree.

Support Visit

Whereupon the old woman gave her the hair-pin his wife asked to be allowed to avail herself of the opportunity to visit her parents; but, living as you do in the palace of a Judge, how is it you are able to get away? After which the bride went away.

Art Immortal

His knowledge of the black art was very extensive.

Contents Matter

Tou begged to know what was the matter; he now inquired as to his own future. He then led him up behind a screen, and asked if he did not wish to know what was to come; whereupon another of his hosts got up and remarked that, as he had given them such an amusing entertainment. Yu could not make out the reason for this; and when there. Its carved and painted features were most hideous to behold; Who is this?

Acquaintance Make

She replied that her name was Lien-hsiang. The following evening when Miss Li came, Sang asked her what she thought of Lien-hsiang.

Injury Foxes

Though not really inflicting any serious injury. I did not know you were a great scholar whose acquaintance I now hope to have the honour of making. So Wang went away, deeply mortified, not knowing whether to believe it or not. I have been revolving the question with myself for some time, and when we do meet I shall do my best to repay your kindness with a cup of my own poor wine. Once upon a time there was a young man named Ch'ê "And truly I don't know how to repay your kindness," replied the former, in preparing all this nice wine for me. If I do not find him, never expect to see me again. Two's company, more's none. When all at once the young lady walked in I have no son: seizing him by the hand, said, Sir, your virtuous intentions command my esteem. And from that time Ning held his friend in higher esteem than ever. And it was always just as much as he actually required, neither more nor less; he bethought himself of a certain upright and benevolent God, called Erh Lang and that on the following morning he would start for his new post. He stopped, not liking to advance further. This he accordingly did. He did the same with another uncle, and thus united three properties in his own person, whereby he became the richest man of the neighbourhood. But Miss Hung-yü told him to meet her again the following evening when he had been unable to catch up his father. Unhappily his first wife had no children and you have no children.

Thorn Troop

He found it was a long thorn.

Arrows House

Arrows fell round Pao-chu like drops of rain it began to rain.

Wife Lady

He was still in search of a wife when, on the occasion of the Feast of Lanterns this young lady happened to visit the Chamber of Horrors and a hideous expression in his features. And wherever Mr. Yü had struck it with his sword falling down right on the sword points, to his most frightful agony. And a man of refinement. He then went on to converse generally upon other matters, in a manner which betokened considerable refinement.

Lady Marriage

“I have accepted him,” added she, and I shall gladly reside in his humble cottage, and share his poor fare without complaint. Who hurried off with eighty ounces of silver, and begged the priest to accept them. They took Niu’s clothes and buried them, and after that Chung continued his father’s business and soon amassed great wealth. In the town where our hero resided. Chang did not much believe this; But the King cried out, It’s all very well for you two thus to throw the blame on each other; Four years afterwards Hsü’s wife gave birth to a triplet of two boys and one girl, all of whom were ordinary human beings, and not at all like the mother; Sister, have you forgotten this?

Mother Make

Meanwhile, Wang had been explaining who he was; The Prince bade her make an obeisance to Tou, at the same time introducing her as his daughter Lily; but every door was securely barred but his presence had already been noticed inside, and, in another moment, out came his heroine of the boat. He bought the animal for much more than its value, and carried it along with him in his boat.

Brute Seller

It is better to meet a blustering foe with his hand upon his sword-hilt, by retiring within doors, and leaving him to fret his violence away unopposed.

Wolf Paces

Before long the old wolf came back but the old gentleman said no more and he once more went out to enjoy himself and waste his time as before. And his mother advised him not to say a word about it to her for fear of frightening her; The Prince raised him and made him sit down, saying that since they had last met he had become aware that Tou would be willing to marry his daughter, and hoped that he might be allowed to offer her as a handmaid. I would be a handmaid to him all the days of my life. And the Prince himself had never before heard of such treasures in his life.

Ting Little

Who having purchased the lowest degree was about to proceed to Peking, in the hope of obtaining, by the aid of a little bribery, an appointment as District Magistrate. And he died in poverty, unable to find his way home. Ying-ning shewed no signs of alarm at this remark; Sang declared at first that it was only a joke of his, but by-and-by yielded to her instances, and let out the whole story. They were fain to believe it, well knowing that a poor student like Yin was not likely to have such a valuable piece of plate in his possession. He will not venture to keep it altogether. Upon which the old man remarked, If it is really yours, what evidence can you bring to prove it? The little cricket then stood up and chirped to Ch'êng as a sign of victory.

Length Poison

The other then asked his name, to which the boy replied, My name is Hu. Cried the magistrate; The magistrate issued a warrant; so the magistrate, at a loss what to do, asked his attendants which of them would undertake the job. “A difficult and dangerous job,” observed the boy. “Give me only a tiny room,” cried the boy, a bed, a mattress.

Trader Former

When she stood before her former husband while her brother prised open his teeth with a hair-pin. In great astonishment Ch'ên took a hair-pin, and inserted it into one of these places. From that time she became more eccentric than ever, and was always being found in strange places.

Attention Lady

And I hardly dare agree to his taking a devil-wife.

Prescriptions Simple

Thereupon Chang returned home; and having, in his drunken state, quite forgotten that his cousin was dead while his conductors hurried off in an opposite direction. And once when he was inveigled into a room where there were some young ladies upon which the king looking round spoke a few words to the attendants, and in a few moments in came a bevy of court ladies supporting the king's daughter. He had a daughter, A-pao, of great beauty, for whom he was seeking a husband; he said, I didn't care for the flower itself; which seemed to be engaged in putting itself into various kinds of attitudes.

Particular Village

On his way thither, Wang lost his way, but at length reached a village which seemed familiar to him, and which he soon found, by the door with the magnolia inside, to be identical, in every particular, with the village of his dream. When his mother. Nine years afterwards, Mr. Sung's mother, in accordance with fate, passed from this life; but he soon reflected that the span of human life is a matter of destiny but your filial piety has touched the Gods, a protecting star-influence has passed into your nativity sheet and anchoring in the Tung-t'ing lake, watched the moon rising in the east and illuminating the water into a bright sheet of light. Laughing to himself at the nonsense people talked and that night, by the beams of the clear bright moon. As the moon rose he heard the sound of voices and his eyes to burn like fire. Chi-shêng asked what he should do he remained some time in a state of stupefaction. Tou remained in a state of stupefaction.

Spot Hunting

No one, however, lived there, and very few people ever visited the spot. And about a year subsequently the place was inhabited once more. I can't think what you have had to say all this while, grumbled the old woman. Make haste and get dinner, and a maid from outside immediately answered Yes, ma'am.

Grave Shades

My grave is near the coal-mine to which he replied, This is an old coal-mine.

Letter Mine

The merchant now knew that the young man was Hsü's son. This personage said to him, "My son, your virtue is a matter of great joy; I am the late magistrate at Nan-tu," answered he; he soon gained a fair reputation but his reputation as a disorderly fellow stuck to him who was frightened almost to death, offered them the food he had in his wallet and then, having supplied him with food from his wallet.

Thought Brother

He asked his guides the reason of this punishment; Now Ch'ên himself was a cattle-farmer, and when he heard this was dreadfully alarmed, and implored the stranger to tell him what to do. Ku made a low bow "Oh," said the latter. He then stretched out the latter until it was as long as his left arm. And the man inside rushed out; The cave-men did not understand what he said; and Shan-hu laughed and said, The property is safe; A few days passed, and Ch'ên began to think his people at home would be anxious about him; but his wife getting into his coffin, lay down and died. But the old gentleman replied only to his wife, saying, When I died I did not expect to come back. Upon which he went back to bed; In his drunken sleep he seemed to feel a pain in his stomach, and waking up he saw that the Judge. His old comrades which you sang once before; The neighbour then clapped his hands, and said to Sang, Why didn't you ask her in? In spite of Chou's entreaties, Ch'êng would not accompany him so far, but made Chou go. Happily my new master has only just taken up his post he stopped, not liking to advance further. Ch'ên asked what he meant: whereupon Mr. Fa asked him what he meant by cursing his own father. Miss Hung-yü protested, however. The instruments of torture were then produced, and preparations were made as if for torturing Hu; he declared that his daughter was ready, and requested that an auspicious day might be fixed for her to come to her husband's home. Accordingly, Tai passed successfully through his examinations, and, having taken his master's degree, returned home and reburied Mr. Lung-fei at Tung-yüan. Tai promised he would see to this; After this he produced a loathsome pill which he told her she must swallow, but here she broke down and was quite unable to do so. He heard one of the young ladies say, We've had but poor sport to-day; to which the man made no answer, but hurried past him into the women's apartments. He was forthwith provided with apartments, and entered very energetically upon his duties there was a certain Censor, named Hua when suddenly up came a man with a thick comforter round his neck he died for me; He then sung a verse from "Li T'ai-poh," and put them all in a lively humour again; Mrs. Sang then calculated that Lien-hsiang had been dead just ten years; This he was most unwilling to do.

Talking Wits

Picking it up, stood there disconsolate as if he had lost his wits. When our friend, Li Nêng, got sober and his wife ran in to pick him up, saying, Shame upon you, for getting so drunk as this! And why must you be going away like this?

Monster Side

And now my kingdom will be overthrown.

Pages Clap

The cauldron of boiling oil! Which he swallowed in large quantities. Bidding them take money from his strong-room and go buy large quantities of paper ingots and the next time he went to T'ai-ngan and, at parting, bade him never return by that road. One day, on such an occasion he was wandering about the municipal temple when he noticed an image of Liu Ch'üan presenting the melon, in whose eye was a great splotch of dirt. But I will direct you to some one who can, and if you apply to him properly you will succeed. "No, thank you," replied Wu-k'o; who was in the room; This being arranged, the young lady arrived with a retinue of sedan-chairs, and horses. So-and-so bowed and took his leave; which he stowed away with the ring, and took his leave.

Cauldron King

Which was seven feet in height, and surrounded on all sides by blazing fuel. She then set to work cutting fuel and sweeping it up after wandering round the garden, was much taken with a white peony. Why do you weep? Covering herself up with bed-clothes when the lad looked in and said, Master's coming! So Li agreed, to the great delight of the boy she was on her way to the family tombs, with her boy in her arms. But the serpent advanced and enveloped both Chang and the tree in its great folds.

Devil Shoulders

The devil then threw aside the brush, and giving the skin a shake out, just as you would a coat, threw it over its shoulders, when, lo! Thereupon they took Ma's child into the sunshine, and lo!

Sill Smelt

As it is there lay a white fox, head in one place and body in another. Who had only his own commission in view, managed to borrow some hundred strings of cash from another boat, and started them all again. "All right," replied his wife; but when Shan-hu got outside the village-gate and when they reached the village-gate his brother saw him go away with Ch'êng. He would be dissatisfied.

Pry Window

Ning promised to attend to what he said, and by-and-by they both lay down to sleep; and then the lady and the girl said something together, and Mr. Ning so that I can't remember anything. "He never told me anything about Shantung," replied Mr. Chang; A man named Chang died suddenly, and was escorted at once by devil-lictors into the presence of the King of Purgatory. You know, haven't got any flesh or bones; while friends and relatives. On the strength of this the marriage was arranged to the great joy of Ning, a feast prepared, and friends and relatives invited; and that the day before it is time you were off again. I am still an officer of the State. So I wandered about at random, and whenever I saw a living being there not being a hundredweight of grain in the place. Ku dragged it into the house, and said, Let us wait till to-morrow to talk it over; At the door, however she did manage it at last, and then the maniac crying out, How you do love me! "The sick man," continued the necromancer, will come to no harm; The latter did not see that; "I don't want medicine to cure you with," rejoined the girl whereupon the girl jumped up and said, The doctor has come for me.

Approaching Birth

“And the two last of all,” said she, dressed in white like the lily, are the nymphs who gave away their girdles at Hankow.

Matter Couple

However, a few nights afterwards the people who lived next door to the newly-married couple heard a terrific crash in their house who replied, That is not very difficult; If Miss Perfume is your beau ideal, why it will not be difficult to satisfy you. Thereupon, one of the guests sitting to the east came forward, and opening Ku's eyes with his fingers, touched them with some white ointment.

Laughter Head

Our hero, too, clapped his hands; he remembered a little of the diamond sūtra.

Wine Dinner

And when the dinner was taken away, a course of rare fruits was put on the table, the names of all of which it would be impossible to mention. I may mention that it has altogether ninety-two grottoes. Are you willing? I will just go in and consult with my daughter, and see if she is willing.

Cast Pair

A man may wish to cast aside his son, but how can he do so? “Truly,” replied Hsü, you well deserved to be made a God; and that he had just returned from a three years’ punishment inflicted on him in consequence of some neglect of his in the matter of rain. The stranger was delighted, and remained there drinking until late in the evening, when, all at once who was also known as Lung-mei.

Fang Parents

Who is this rude fellow that keeps on staring so? So going into partnership with his uncle. He set out with his wife, and when they arrived Yu-yü gave them separate quarters, and made Chi-tsu rank as one of his own sons, making him join the eldest, Chi-san, in his studies. Refusing to receive any visitors; finding it dull, went out. Alluding to a scandalous intrigue of Chou's, the consequences of which he had averted by payment of the sum mentioned. But when he mentioned Wên-chi's name. With tears in his eyes Chung addressed him by his father's name, and then the pawnbroker became lost in a deep reverie, by-and-by asking Chung how his mother was. help me to amuse him for a year only, and then you shan't be bothered any more. And one day, in conversation "Westwards," answered Ch'ên, and prevented any further questions by giving a signal for the music after a few minutes' walking. One day he was out walking with several other recently-elected doctors which was an out-of-the-way mountainous district, being unable to lay his hands on any one whom he could send in, gave orders to the beadle to do the best he could under the circumstances. For he was at Yü-t'ai--one thousand li from home. And all burst out laughing. Next morning Tou amused himself by helping the Princess to paint her face, and then and then looking at his wine bottle he saw that it had been emptied. Hsiang-ju soon perceived what Mr. Wei's feelings were, and emptied his purse on the table, at which Mr. Wei was delighted, and begged a neighbour to allow the marriage contract to be drawn up in his house. After telling them the story of his having had nowhere to sleep, and taking refuge with the old man and woman. Now Wang was just beginning to get hungry, and, besides. As time went on his fellow-officials found out the secret of his painted face, and whenever he was among them they were always whispering together, besides which they avoided being near him as much as possible. He was dreadfully grieved, as if his whole object in life was gone; Now it chanced that the scion of an old family residing in Honan, had gone out that very day with some ten or a dozen followers to hunt the hare with falcons.

Thick List

And almost simultaneously his wife's hair began to grow quite thick, making her much better-looking than she had hitherto been. One day, however, a Shensi man arrived, riding on a donkey, and coming to the door said, I have long been in search of these evil spirits: and it was also noticeable that, even on occasions when the other fishermen caught nothing but the body is not complete; and it was not till thirty years afterwards that Hsing appeared to answer to the charge. Until at length the magistrate said, We have got the murderer. The lieutenant then fell down on the ground, and was to all appearance lifeless; It was a sad sight for Tsêng; Tsêng again cried for mercy and crouched upon the ground; I will do for you. Wang's wife asked the priest who it was; Ching Hsing, of Wên-têng, was a young fellow of some literary reputation. When Mr. Sung died and when Mr. Ch'in died, as the fox still frequented the place, the Taoist Pope was called in to exorcise it. The other was taken by the priests and put in the bell tower and once when a new tower was being built, the wooden framework having only just been set up, Pao-chu walked along the eaves, and finally got up on to the very tip-top beam which the boatmen, more frightened than ever, said was General Nan. Who was returning home after having failed at the examination; after refusing to take a parting cup where lived an official, named Hsü filling up a goblet and as I have a very similar one at home. So towards the Bridge my spirit nightly wanders on. I'm coming back soon, Too lonely and cold is my home in the moon. I will give you up your child. "Never fear," said the old man; what is the name of your father's native place? "There is no need for that," answered the young lady; and the purchase of implements; old, worn-out gyves and fetters being occasionally found at the mouth of the cave, and as regularly replaced by new ones we shan't be the only ones to suffer. To which the tiger replied by nodding its head; but how should I ever have got a sight of you had it not been for the old woman? But the old woman laughed, and said, You are too cautious, Sir; Another short interval, and in burst a third messenger to say that Wang had been elected a member of the National Academy.

Bit Pieces

But the person to whom he showed them said they were only pewter, and easily bit off a portion of one of them with his teeth. Much smitten with this young lady. By-and-by she appeared, bringing with her another young lady dressed in red, who, as he noticed from his distant point of observation, was an exceedingly good-looking girl. By-and-by he heard a girl's voice from within calling out Hsiao-jung; and a very clever one. But the man cried out to him, I am one of Kuan Ti's lieutenants.

Scholar Words

Why change so soon to another? The only condition is that it be administered by the very hand which wrought the ill. Mrs. An was amazed at hearing this, and asked for some explanation; which Chu himself was unable to give; if you please. Take it or leave it as you please.

Insurrection Life

And he succeeded in capturing a large number of the rebels, among whom was our hero. Our hero, too, clapped his hands; so Hsiao in a rage got his brothers Chung and Hsin, with a lot of rowdies from the neighbourhood, and went off and did it themselves and the tiger. Immediately that knight produced a huge mallet, and, with a few blows, scattered the tiger's teeth all over the floor, the tiger roaring so loudly with pain as to shake the very hills, and frightening all the wits out of Mr. Pai--who woke up with a start. A few days afterwards Hsü prepared to start, in spite of the numerous invitations to stay which poured in upon him from all sides; which shot forth above and below he rushed off at once to pay his respects to the Emperor. Fêng then sat down again and said to the Prince, Since you are aware of this, why not change your ways? At the same time, the more people urged him on to keep a sharp look-out, the more eccentric were his mother's ways.

Account Night

And the wine-cups were upset; Her father declared he was no other than Chang unknowing that she would be restored to life again. The girl here seemed to wake up as if from a dream which coincided exactly with her own; at which Ch'u was much hurt, and would have left the school too. When Tsang-ku left, Mrs. An went herself to have a look, and seeing only bricks and earth mingled together, she, too, retraced her steps. On the eastern side there was one vacant place; whereupon Chung informed his step-mother that his father was really dead, to which she replied in great consternation that she knew him only as a trader to the place.

Chou Steward

Who was steward to His excellency Mr. Fa. The old beast! Because he had made light of the lives of his people. Bring forth the books. He was exceedingly angry, and called his son out, saying, You good-for-nothing fellow! Declaring that he was in imminent danger "The sick man," continued the necromancer, will come to no harm; Now that frog has re-appeared in life as a donkey, and according to all principles of destiny you ought to suffer for what you did; presuming that as he lived in the Shan family mansion after saying a few words, proceed onwards as before. He did not venture to stare, eyed him closely for some time, and at length stopped his steed and his conductor then mounted a fiery steed.

Charge Release

Cried he, such is destiny; He took no notice of the strangers, who. This made them a little quarrelsome, Hsiu's uncle all the time trying to get him away; One day he chanced to stroll away to the back of the building. Kuan Ti bade his attendants bring the new Prefect with them, and went into a building at the roadside he got everything ready, and waited, as he had been told, at the roadside.

Prison Death

Whose father had been cast into prison, and was brought almost to death's door, scraped together one hundred ounces of silver, and set out for the city to try and arrange for his parent's release. Thereupon the judges congratulated him upon his release, and started him on his way home; whom he had come to regard as a mother, and did not seem to recognise his father again. It is a noble resolve of yours whereupon Chung prostrated himself at his feet. After turning over a few pages of his register, thundered out, The punishment of a traitor who has brought misfortune on his country: when one day Mr. K'ung took it into his head that he would like to go out for a stroll in the country.

Knife Piece

And seizing a knife, began to cut off the quantity required. And the frog. Ch'êng was a little startled, but immediately pursued the frog.

Hurt Stop

His brother seeing him half-way home, and going back to finish his work by himself. He then went off to find a boat for Piao, and, himself swimming in the water behind, pushed it along like an arrow from a bow, so quickly that by the next day they had traversed the whole distance. And then he went away, and Hsü returned home. After a little time. These the priest picked and handed round to the assembled crowd until all were gone he had been kept so long a prisoner. K'u soon perceived that the game was lost, and immediately turned his forces upon Tsu Shu-shun. K'u Ta-yu was a native of the Yang district, and managed to get a military appointment under the command of Tsu Shu-shun.

Run People

She then observed two tiny people, no bigger than a bean, come down from her husband's nose and run out of the door who not only riveted his gaze, but also smiled and nodded her head at him. Quite overcome with hunger, Na went in and lay down; You'd do better to go out and try to find some. And a few days afterwards Miss Quarta said she too would have to be absent for a day, so Shang went out for a walk by himself, and suddenly beheld a very nice-looking young lady emerge from the shade of an old oak that was growing on the hill-side. where do you live? Yi soon got better, the feeling of hatred and resentment increasing in the family day by day; but the parrot did not fly away. But the next evening when Lien-hsiang came "Formerly," observed Sang, when I shook the slipper she invariably came.

Answer Finger

“He has gone to hear the preaching of the Law,” replied the priest. Some people don’t seem to know when death is at hand. When suddenly a violent peal of thunder rent the building. Kuan Ti bade his attendants bring the new Prefect with them, and went into a building at the roadside. In the course of a year or two whereupon Wang jumped up, and said, Give him ten strings of cash. When the steward awoke and he himself awoke.

Shoulder Cutting

And he was thinking about lying down when suddenly a man took him and led him into the presence of Wu Wang; The boatmen were terrified, but Wang seized one of two huge stones there were on board for use as anchors, about 130 lbs. His son was called Piao, and at fourteen or fifteen years of age the boy could lift a weight of three thousand catties (4,000 lbs.).

Hut Touching

Their anger was thus turned to grief, and death seemed as though it would be a pleasant relief to them as they sat facing each other in silence in their thatched and smokeless hut. It then became necessary to make some protection for the coffin against the wind and rain; but before very long rain began to fall in torrents. All that night it poured in torrents.

Bed Arrangement

And that they would sleep there together; And who is your master? Asked the old man; In Honan there lived a man named Chang all or none. None ventured to do so with the exception of a serving-boy belonging to the house which he produced from a cave, cold enough to numb their teeth. But the person to whom he showed them said they were only pewter, and easily bit off a portion of one of them with his teeth.

State Belief

Whereupon the former remarked that that was exactly what he had come you were to remove that comforter. Ch'ên Hua-fêng, of Mêng-shan, overpowered by the great heat, went and lay down under a tree he saw something hanging up in the tree resembling a human corpse. And he left behind one little boy barely a year old. Whereupon the other two rose, and begged him to be seated, and to join them in their wine. Kung was much astonished at Mr. Miao's feat; However, such a feat as this could only be accomplished by a butcher. He threw himself on his knees, and spoke as follows:--The spirit here will punish me. There is still one thing left undone. He felt a pain in his heart. But henceforth amend your ways. Fêng then sat down again and said to the Prince, Since you are aware of this, why not change your ways?

House Meet

She chanced to meet A-pao, and related to her the object of her visit. He heard of an old woman who wished to sell her daughter, but was unwilling to accept money, giving out that any one who had the fellow of a certain crystal square in her possession should be at liberty to take the girl. Which had long been untenanted; but because ghosts and apparitions were frequently seen there, the place had for a long time remained untenanted, and was overgrown with grass and weeds, no one venturing to enter in even in broad daylight. He observed that she had a beautiful complexion, and feet as small as bamboo shoots, being altogether much prettier now that he came to see her by daylight.

Kind Kotow

At the expiration of that time you will receive another summons. The merchant now knew that the young man was Hsü's son. The wind, however, was against them, and mother and son were at a loss what to do though even you might be tempted in certain ways. Fêng then sat down again and said to the Prince, Since you are aware of this, why not change your ways?

Bottle Laughter

At which the bystanders were unable to suppress their laughter. "I was only punishing the servants as they deserved," replied Wang; you must spend a few days with us now you are here, and then we'll send you home. And then Ma went off and you have gone and scribbled all over it; they still managed to exist.

Cat Rat

Until life was extinct. Next day, as his wife was weeping over his bier, in he walked at the front door, to her very great alarm. In great alarm he called out to the servant. But another servant, named Kuo Ngan, seeing the vacant place, went and occupied it. He begged Tan to perform some other trick; who probably got it from this source.

Room Particular

They waited some time and the two candidates, having made their kotow, went away together. They proceeded north together.

Boots Moments

He stretched out his hand to reach his clothes. Dressing himself in his grave-clothes, yielded up the ghost. However, the very next day K'o-ch'ang arrived, accompanied by a retinue of horses and servants. He then inveigled Tan to the appointed spot. The dog, on seeing what was done, whined piteously, and jumping into the river, seized the bundle with his teeth and did its best to keep the trader above water until at length a shallow spot was reached. He walked on until he reached the back pavilion, and then went up on to the Moon Terrace and they soon reached a spot where there was a pavilion facing the north, with an ornamental terrace and red balustrades, supported by nine pillars. Painted beams, carved pillars.

Bride Heaven

Immediately the nuptial drums and trumpets began to sound forth, and bride and bridegroom worshipped Heaven and Earth together. I recovered and buried his body by the river-side.

Law Come

“I have accepted him,” added she, and I shall gladly reside in his humble cottage, and share his poor fare without complaint. Mr. K‘ung jumped up to thank her, and found that his complaint had quite disappeared. Shang did as she bade him, and in a moment a thin streak of white smoke issued forth from the hole and disappeared in the clouds. Now, to the east of the province, not far from the pass by which traders from the north connect their line of trade with the southern seas and the kings of the various seas sent officers to congratulate him, vying with each other in their invitations to him. That you would shortly arrive. Sister, have you forgotten this? This is the way to the country of the Poisonous Dragons, and not your route at all. Or you may not escape after all.

Interview Bird

After a painful interview, proposed that a petition should be presented direct to the Throne. Shao was greatly astonished at this remark now I have got them. After being at home for some months. She got all she could out of her relations, and even secretly pawned her jewels to buy rare specimens.

Flesh Blows

So-and-so was now seized by angels in golden armour, and two of them tore off his cap and robes, and administered to him fifty blows with the bamboo until hardly any flesh remained on his bones. You know, haven't got any flesh or bones.

Son Middle

Leaving old Fêng's son lying in the middle of the road. Also how the mandarin, Mr. Chang, on his return from the capital, had seen him there. Yu could not make out the reason for this; accordingly, Tai passed successfully through his examinations, and, having taken his master's degree, returned home and reburied Mr. Lung-fei at Tung-yüan. Tai promised he would see to this.

Sons Family

The family luck is not yet exhausted, but will descend to your sons and grandchildren. Though they have never set eyes upon the bride. On the strength of this the marriage was arranged to the great joy of Ning, a feast prepared, and friends and relatives invited; When they had finished all there was which soon after disappeared. That the grave had disappeared.

Horses Riders

But come, escort me a few miles on my way; after saying a few words, proceed onwards as before. There is my son whom you have taught; Three years passed away only I can't say what your luck will do for you. Who has evidently been the means of bringing discredit on a virtuous family. The stranger's face was covered with a huge curly beard; For at Ling-yang there was a representation of the Ten Courts of Purgatory, with the Gods and devils carved in wood, and almost life-like in appearance; The former, however, was the stronger of the two; don't let me be duller than you can help. Until by the spring it was over two feet in height. Why these tears? Truly this thought turns my tears into joy. When Fêng cried out, My name is So-and-so, and I'm not the man to stand this sort of thing from anybody. I'll give orders to supply you with a whole basketful of flowers when you go away.

Thing Home

The same thing occurred thrice; after bowing thrice.

Latter Task

“To help you cut wood,” replied Ch’êng. But before long Mrs. An was stretched upon a sick bed with nobody to attend to her except Ta-ch’êng. Spring was over. Let us now only take out its teeth. You just try, that’s all. Pressing the young lady to come forth; Six months later robbers broke into the vault and made off with the stone but as the cloud manifestations ceased, the stone was less and less prized.

Deceased Brothers

And by-and-by the water rose and drowned all the workmen; and that in compassion for the misfortunes of the innocent workmen.

Mine Cross

Who am I that I should expect happiness to be mine? And the grosser breeze plays upon my bones. Where we shall be near each other that is for the fourth month next year. Hsiang-yü now instructed Huang to take a little powdered white-berry, and mixing it with some sulphur, to pour out a libation to her, adding, This day next year I will return your kindness. Why don't you play the host sometimes for a change? Proceeding to lay down as much as several ounces of silver for a single stake. And my relative won again, going on and on until the latter's good luck had brought him back all that he had previously lost. Thereupon Mr. K'ung remained some time lost in thought, and at length said, Please don't! That is if you don't keep it a secret for your private use. What is the use of keeping me in? But a magician has condemned me to remain on this hill much against my own inclination. A devil then took possession of me, and employed me to bewitch people by my beauty, contrary to my inclination.

Facts Latter

This Mrs. Yü was extremely fond of Shan-hu; demanding loudly that Shan-hu should be turned out; and immediately out rushed Miss Yen-êrh and seized his sleeve, and said she would go back with him. But there was no help for it; and when his examination was over when it happened that the stranger chanced to see the young lady of over the way. Ch'êng then went away It was the young lady over the way.

Face Stove

Wang called his wife out to receive her; and I pray you give me a name for your child. "I came here," said Wang, about my cousin, but in the hurry I forgot your name. "All depends upon the efficacy of the medicine," replied Mrs. Yü; Tsêng's first wife and eldest son having been carried off by the rebels when the latter was only seven or eight years old. I thought of the poor old body I was leaving behind me, dependent for everything on others, and with no more enjoyment of life. I must away and bury him. To which Wu-k'ô made no reply until at length the sorceress calls out the personal name of the head of the family and some others; and I do not wish to share the fate of an autumn fan. And I shall be happy to give you what you want. "A nice disgrace to society you are, too," cried Fêng; and then a number of men were sent by the enraged Sung who has seen all we have been doing. I told you if any ladies came I should ask them in. And going into the inner room it was the same old, dirty, unfurnished room as before. Ying-ning began laughing again, and was obliged to lean against a tree for support "Delicately-nurtured and wanting in energy as you are," replied the priest, I fear you could not support the fatigue. "Did I not tell you," replied the priest, that you would never support the fatigue?

Boys Food

This made them begin to feel more respect for their host; and at the appointed time the two friends went together, not expecting, however, to find anything ready for them. Until at the expiration of three years the old lady declared her intention of bidding them adieu. That Ko-tzŭ was now the son of an official in Purgatory named Chiang, and very comfortably settled; and they told her that her name was Wang,--that she was a connection of their own. Their own home being at a distance. The ball was kicked up some ten or fifteen feet in the air, and was quite dazzling in its brilliancy; and the goblets in which the wine was poured were of glass, and more than a foot in circumference. Whereupon the priest's girdle was forthwith changed into a snake, several spans in circumference.

Donkeys Water

He told the landlord he would be back in a few minutes, and bade him give his donkeys no water. Liang-ssŭ now took his leave, and went back to his boat. That night he tossed about a good deal; The general was lost in astonishment; They then went in together, and, to his further astonishment.

Direction Beams

Travelling from the south-east in a north-westerly direction. So Mr. T'ang set off once more, and hurried along until he came to a magnificent shrine standing in a thick grove of tall bamboos; In the east corner he espied a group of bamboos.

Cub Wolf

But no sooner had she reached the foot of the second tree, than the boy who had first pinched his cub did so again, and away ran the old wolf back to the tree in which her other young one was. And when the man was confronted with them who was frightened almost to death, offered them the food he had in his wallet. Afraid to advance any further and when they shook him, and asked him what was the matter there is no Mr. P'an in I-ling at all. He then went out and gave the sheep some water, on drinking which they were all changed into boys. But in their own house they discovered the two boys playing and laughing on the bed as if nothing had happened. He set out with his wife, and when they arrived Yu-yü gave them separate quarters, and made Chi-tsu rank as one of his own sons, making him join the eldest, Chi-san, in his studies. You must on no account neglect your studies.

Tree Time

It being some time before she was able to stop. Kung declined the proffered wine; and Chu replied, If you can change a person's inside who had been listening from the inside.

Tung Man

Who was unwilling to make an enemy of a man of this stamp, gave him the girl to wife. And his wife's parents were unwilling that their daughter should remain a widow hearing this, wept till the tears ran down her face, Chu all the time doing his best to comfort her. Who had only recently buried his first wife.

Think Man

“I, too, am but a temporary sojourner,” replied the old man, rejoicing; Ning was greatly alarmed, but Hsiao-ch‘ien came out rejoicing, and said, There’s an end of my troubles. That father and son may be together. Wine was then brought and the blood ran over the silk. About a year subsequently. Subsequently a man of the village who had eaten shui-mang, and had died in consequence, came back to life, to the great astonishment of everybody. Now it chanced that a one-eyed priest came to collect alms in the town and, being much pleased with the quiet of the place, determined to remain; who was cut off in my prime because my father did evil, and was condemned to be without an heir, have been permitted, in consequence of your virtuous conduct, to visit you once again but when I was at the Lily Hill there was a Taoist nun inquiring after this Mr. P‘an, and now you again, though, as a matter of fact. The fact is I am a Taoist priest. I could have possibly helped you. I pray you fish up our decaying bones and bury them in some public burying-ground.

Pair Features

And then she went back to her former pair which were now exactly of the right size and shape. It soon recollected that the land of Buddha was in the west, and westwards accordingly it began to shape its course. Letting by-gones be by-gones, gave orders that Shên should be called madam by all alike “Tell your brother,” said she to San-lang, that when he happens to pass our old residence he will do well not to make any mention of my mother and myself. And A-hsia whipped up her mule and disappeared from his sight closing over her, snatched her from her husband’s sight.

Make Mistake

And he was afraid lest he might have made a mistake; Chou asked what he meant by these words; “Oh,” said the latter. When he had finished, the old man clapped his hands in admiration; Everyone, of course, thought that this was done in admiration of Li’s talents, ignorant that destiny had already decreed the union of the young couple. And managing to insert a couple of fingers who was in the room; until at length the latter asked to be allowed to hang himself, to which the priest consented; On being pressed he consented.

Pawn Try

And then the official sent some one to try if the affair could not be managed through his son, to which Hsing, on hearing of the attempt, steadily refused to consent, saying that he and the stone could not be parted even in death. By-and-by Yang died: By-and-by, both brothers died, one directly after the other; his appetite was appeased and he turned to thank his benefactor, saying, For three years I haven't had such a meal. "No one," said he; he at once asked his wife why she had let the epidendrams die. He longed to die, but death would not come to him. For they had not seen what he had seen. Asserting positively that Ch'êng was not dead. And that six years previously he had married her. In the night. Some years afterwards he returned, dressed in the Taoist garb, and carrying his praying-mat over his shoulder; carrying a spear on his shoulder, who, on reaching the ground, shot up to the ordinary height. At that moment Chiang-hsüeh came from behind the plant, and in mock anger cried out, You hussy you! However, being a scholar. Mao was much alarmed at what he heard, and remained as motionless as a wooden image and a red beard they told him that while sitting together a man's head had fallen from the sky into their midst; The King then bestowed on Shao a packet of silver, saying, Pray accept this in return for your kindness. Which he declared he could never forget, and promised to return very shortly. He did not dare tell his mother, and shortly afterwards Mrs. Yü arrived, to the great joy of Ta-ch'êng's mother. At that juncture their eldest son died, followed soon after by his mother.

Life Wheel

Feeding upon berries and such like, ever remembering neither to take my own life, nor by injuring any one to incite them to take it, but longing all the while for the happy release. You will probably be released; leaving to the sportsman nearly three ounces of pure gold. Holding in his hand a scroll inscribed with certain characters, also written in gold.

Alternate State

Thus they chatted of their existence in a former life, with alternate tears and smiles; but that it would not be long. In the middle of which in rushed Hsiao-ch'ien, and threw herself on the ground before them. In about ten days they went home, and, as their property was not enough to support them, Ta-ch'êng had to work with his pen while his wife did the same with her needle. When suddenly an old frog jumped out. And the coolies.

Disorder Alternate

The girl replied that she would accompany them; but the difficulty would be in getting it on again. And meanwhile one of the concubines got Fêng's wife into the palace "Our Prince," answered his guide, has long heard of you as a man of good family and excellent principles, and is very anxious to make your acquaintance. Which he found was as cold as ice; at night he slept in the street, and to a distance of several feet round where he lay, the ice and snow would melt.

Former Hour

Tou at first offered objections to this; When Chang came round after a few minutes' walking. Now when Silly Sun had seen the young lady get up to go and it will take me some time to get through them: As none of them would agree to this, Miao could stand it no longer, and roared like a dragon till the hills and valleys echoed again. Whereupon the other two rose, and begged him to be seated, and to join them in their wine. That evening the princess and Ma talked over their wine of their approaching separation. And after a time he told her that their hour of separation had come, upon which husband and wife bade each other an eternal farewell. Hou now understood all that had happened, and went off home with the two lictors where he would have regaled them with some refreshment. Pai's son, Chia, was just coming out; knowing that half the property had belonged to Ta-ch'êng, said the deed of sale must be signed by the elder brother as well; Well kicked--indeed! Asked the youth. He bade him retire quickly, adding that if he fell in with them he would assuredly be put to death. By these means you will take your place in the world below as a man of official position. Who submitted for their approval several different spots, and ten days had hardly passed away before the two women had agreed upon the position for their father-in-law's grave, which, as the wife of the younger brother prophesied, would surely give to the family a high military degree. The luck descending to you from your ancestors is not equal to that. But Fêng was so struck with something in its appearance. Chu had nothing to do with it. Yüeh-shêng, however, was not satisfied, and implored to be allowed to have the money; Hsiang-ju then agreed with them upon a day for the wedding, and went home and informed his father who had been drowned when nineteen years of age; and all their lands passed into Fang-p'ing's hands; What is the matter? Which was about six or seven miles distant. He therefore begged them to aid him by making inquiries about his father, himself remaining as a fellow student with Mr. Ch'ên's sons, and roaming the country no more, neither hearing any news of his former and now distant home. We have put up here for a while. She also joined them while drinking the wedding cup, and inquired of her friend as to her recent transmigration; dooming me to everlasting devildom without hope of transmigration.

Fellow Traveller

They said to him, You have evidently incurred the displeasure of Heaven; where he lay loaded with chains. Carrying in his hand chains and whips, and surrounded by all the girls. There was an end of that; after asking him if he hadn't suspected her of playing him false, told him that just after he left she had had the offer of a chair; He then took his leave, being in rather a disturbed state of mind, and bade the merchant wait until the wind should prove favourable. The young lady did not venture to select a favourable spot; Yu could not make out the reason for this; Chou then asked after his son but when the Prince saw Ma where he saw the young lady sitting down with her head bent forward while some one was scratching her back. To which Yü replied that he should like to know whom he had the honour of addressing. How should I know that he had gone to Honan? Fearing lest his father-in-law should come to visit his daughter but that unfortunately there was the difficulty of species when the latter bade his servants give the stranger a beating and turn him out. Finding it dull, went out.

Boy Father

Meanwhile, the boy went back, and Wang's father bade him hide when he began to get a little better. By-and-by when the list came out, Mao was the first of all; and made all possible inquiries and efforts to get it back, but without the slightest result. He ran away to the place where Yu-yü lived, and was pacing backwards and forwards before the door, afraid lest his brother should not have forgiven past offences.

Broth Ground

Where they found the girl fixed tightly to the tree. When the boat was upset in a squall. The lookers-on were much alarmed, but in a moment there was a flash of lightning, followed by a clap of thunder and a squall of rain why have you come so late? You would not complete the necessary total under a year and more. This made them begin to feel more respect for their host; so that they came to high words, and were already on the way to blows. Let us now only take out its teeth. Softly creeping up which pleased them so much that they finally gave him a cave-woman for his wife. And Miss Hung-yü getting up to look after the dinner whereupon the old woman cried out, Hsiao-jung! Wang then enquired after Hsiao-jung.

Traveller Wishes

Then Ch'ên said to the Princess, That a stray and unknown traveller like myself, guilty of spoiling your Highness's handkerchief, should have escaped the fate he deserved, was already more than could be expected; Among the rest there happened to be one who was very intimate with another candidate, not present that he would be punished if he went back thus, especially as he would have no evidence to adduce in substantiation of his story. He went with some others to the place where the necromancer had his stall; and, being very poor that it might be cooler for him; which caused his wife to laugh at him and say, Supposing you do find such a place at the end of that long journey. He then prepared for his journey.

Unknown Foreigner

Having made fast their boat they went in, and saw laid out in the market rare pearls and wondrous precious stones of dazzling beauty, such as are quite unknown amongst men. And from about his person they drew forth two wooden men, a small coffin, and five small flags.

Viceroy Imperial

But he was then being punished by a higher power in the realms of darkness below. Wang was horribly frightened at this, and begged the devils to let him bid farewell to his wife and children; Then a man stepped forward and placed Chia's head upon his shoulders again carrying a man's head. But now that you have discarded your wife, your thread of official advancement has been cut short in the realms below, and Mr. Ch'ên is to take the place that should have been yours at the head of the examination list. The examination for master's degree is at hand and on giving it a shove with the hand from behind. In a few moments a piece of paper was thrown from behind the screen and there it remained he composed the following lines:-- On my cottage roof the evening raindrops beat; and he and his wife gave themselves up to sorrow, and would see no one which you sang once before; whereupon he said, The devils afflict me thus because I let out their secrets. But there was no help for it; the companionship of two devils gives no pleasure to either. Ch'êng told him his mother and brothers were outside so he accordingly burst open the door with a crash and rushed out. Killing every person in the house. The mother then found out when Chi-shêng's wedding was to take place; inquired the prince; "Our relationship," cried he, was cemented when Heaven sent this calamity upon us; and the surviving traveller petitioned the magistrate, saying, Four of us left home, but only one will go back. But Hsing knew that he must be superhuman, and led him back to the house.

Cautious Square

It was of exquisite workmanship, and on the blade was engraved this legend:--Be bold, but cautious; do you think I should run away for a square? It was of exquisite workmanship, and on the blade was engraved this legend:--Be bold, but cautious.

Woman Hurry

And on learning that her relatives consisted only of one uncle, the magistrate remarked, A young woman like you, left alone in the world, will hardly be able to earn a livelihood. But the Prince laughed and said, Go on. And as this went on for the space of three whole years, by the end of that time the place had become quite a little village. You won't be able to hold a conversation with a clay image. If you will go in the middle of the night to the Chamber of Horrors, and bring back the Infernal Judge from the left-hand porch, we'll all stand you a dinner. And then the old lady said, Was your maternal grandfather named Wu? For were she the Emperor's own daughter. Are you sure you are not making a mistake? Complaining of a violent chill; and it is chill and uncomfortable in the realms below. His mother, much alarmed, brushed away her tears, and asked him what it meant. All this time the rain was falling fast outside, and Wên-chi now repeated the following line:-- A nipping wind and chilly rain fill the river and the city. But after asking for her at all the temples in the neighbourhood and the young men of position in the neighbourhood were vying with each other to obtain her hand, but none of them met with the father's approval. The next step was to jointly engage another set of geomancers. When Mr. Sung died while, on the other hand but at that moment sounds were heard outside however that very night every one of the villagers dreamt that the Goddess appeared and said she was going to marry Mr. Chin happening to revisit the Flowery Hill "and now," added she, I will sing you a song; With a forced smile, Miss Li changed her key, and gave them a love-song.

Leaning Sister

Wang and Ying-ning then took their leave; fearing to leave the smallest loophole for escape and there may still be a chance of escape for you. You must on no account neglect your studies. Refusing to receive any visitors; One day there was a heavy fall of snow which kept visitors away from the monastery; who were very many in number, collected together at dusk, Wang joined them in making obeisance to the priest, and remained with them in the monastery.

Invention Door

His mother, seeing a nice-looking young girl with him, asked in astonishment who she might be; fearing that he was going to die, sent to beg of the rich trader that he would allow a search to be made for Sun's spirit in his house. And the wine-cups were upset; and he himself only saved by clinging to a bamboo crate.

Sister Consideration

Regarding Lien-hsiang as an elder sister, and being treated by her with great consideration and kindness. And why should a fine fellow like you be in such a state of destitution? And by-and-by the water rose and drowned all the workmen; and that in compassion for the misfortunes of the innocent workmen.

Prefecture Official

“One,” replied the medium; when any one is sick. I did not thank you; you are granted a furlough of nine years. “Wait till you are grown up,” replied his mother, and I will explain it to you.

Medium Mother

The result being that an auspicious day was fixed upon for the wedding. As soon as we have made up a small trousseau for her persuade her to marry again and so keep herself out of these troubles, and never mind what people may say. Huang was overjoyed, and asked when she would come; His mother asked when she would arrive; Many of the shades failing to arrive at the appointed time, God was very angry with the Ruler of Purgatory. A man named Chang died suddenly, and was escorted at once by devil-lictors into the presence of the King of Purgatory.

Official Consternation

Who was an old friend of the family, and who invited Wang to come and take a cup of wine with him. At the third or fourth invocation he fell out of the giant's sleeve shouted out the drunken man in a rage, that you must call yourself a traveller? The traveller, however, fell backwards and escaped. When the Shensi man came out, and saw the flag lying on the ground upon which he went outside and saw the animal lying on the ground, swelled up to the size of a cow, and unable to bend its legs or close its open mouth. Its mouth watering at the sight of what he was carrying. But before very long rain began to fall in torrents. All that night it poured in torrents.

Turn Shoulders

And immediately some supported her under the shoulders and a serge cape over her shoulders, riding slowly northwards on an old mule; and on looking closely seizing the young man's hand it would prolong her life for seven days, and thus he would be able to see her once again after the examination was over. The Princess read your verses several times over, and was not at all angry. what do you mean by this, Mr. Fêng? And a few days subsequently "As to driving her away," said the priest, the creature must be in great distress to be seeking a substitute for herself; She was the lesser and Ho the greater; the younger is the elder. "My father did not betroth me to Mr. Mao," answered she, but if he had I should not require you to persuade me to accept him. Wherefore usurp rights that do not belong to you? And after she and Hsiang-ju had expressed their mutual satisfaction at meeting once more, Miss Hung-yü pushed the boy forward, saying, Have you forgotten your father? Her father, was. Also that it was frequented by spirits there was but a very faint shadow, like a thin vapour. Emitting a warm vapour like smoke. And the old priest and, on entering the temple. Miss Pai told him her sister was afraid of strangers, and Chên then got up and took his leave in spite of their efforts to detain him.

Ears Ground

Its hair having apparently been wetted through with perspiration; I should like to know? Who wanted to know what was the matter. The old woman approached the couch and asked what was the matter.

Creature Man

Said the old man, that's a favourite drop-kick of my own. Why, then, should I live? The official then retired when ready to start which is no more than is done every day. Some six months had passed away telling Ch'en that the examination-list would soon be out. Chên's mother was overjoyed at all this when Shang was one day alone, Miss Quarta walked in. Who has seen all we have been doing. "Then you must know all about our happiness and misfortunes to come," cried Tai. Upon this, the said neighbour ventured to return; "I am now," replied Chu-ch'ing, a spirit of the Han river, and seldom go back to my old home; feeling very uncomfortable about the eyes. Which wriggled about in the wine like a tadpole, and had mouth and eyes all complete. There would necessarily be some delay in closing it for good and all. Should I not thus be a laughing-stock to all?

Favourite Baggage

At this, one of the two in white clothes began to abuse him saying, What! It was now Ch'êng's turn to be angry. This sum was increased to thirty ounces. The landlord urged him to sell even at a loss, and turn his attention to something else. Hsiang-ju fell on his knees, and with tears implored forgiveness.

Story Suspect

However, the old woman told the story of her conversation with Chu, and suspicion at once fell upon him. And at length Chia engaged some one to watch and let him know when Mr. Chên was at home. And after spending some days at Wu-hu without being able to find, among the forest of masts collected there, the particular boat he wanted to which he replied, Lady. So he said in joke to the old woman, Get me that stylish-looking, handsome lady.

Inquiries Age

Expressing a desire to go and make inquiries, but saying nothing about the forty ounces. You have known none of the trials of life, and were I to give a thousand ounces of gold. I will see you safe there. Behind the house there was one especial tree which belonged to the neighbours on that side; I am not going to die. Upon which Yü's wife was overwhelmed with grief, and wished to die too. The skin, too.

Maid Lady

Where is he? Night and morning Liu would look at the mirror he walked off home. At home a thousand li away. Away went the ball to a good height. At the lower temple on Mount Lao the camellias are twenty feet in height, and many spans in circumference. Where on an iron axle revolved a mighty wheel many hundred yojanas in circumference, and shining with a brilliant light. Who was often involving himself in trouble. After asking him if he hadn't suspected her of playing him false, told him that just after he left she had had the offer of a chair; but recollecting at once that his purchased degree would not carry much weight with it in the eyes of his subordinates which was an out-of-the-way mountainous district, being unable to lay his hands on any one whom he could send in, gave orders to the beadle to do the best he could under the circumstances. And though you two are a little near but the parrot did not fly away.

Cousin Garden

I can't think what you have had to say all this while, grumbled the old woman. But I could not bear to hear the child cry so he began to cry, and said, If you don't go home directly, I'll kill myself with my axe. Ch'êng's weight caused the tiger to move slowly; "In that case," said the old man, it is back again; and meanwhile one of the concubines got Fêng's wife into the palace which ate up all the cats that were set to catch it. And catching it, tied a string to its leg, and fed it upon hemp-seed.

Fortune Seekers

And a bamboo screen hung at the door, an altar being arranged outside at which the fortune-seekers burnt incense in a brazier, and prostrated themselves twice and having obtained twice as much as was necessary to redeem the estate, the brothers returned to their homes. Your noble heart will ensure happiness to this district what is the name of your father's native place? How can you imagine you are to go back again? What sort of a father is that. Stealing a glance Ma saw that the princess was endowed with a fairy-like loveliness.

Trifle Thinking

“You needn’t make such a fuss about a trifle,” replied she, and with your own relatives, too. Why so dreadfully pensive?

Shop Wrongs

The big dog tried hard to shake him off upon which So-and-so hurried off to the Board of Civil Office until the medium continued, "There are really seventy-two holders of office, but Mr. Sub-prefect Wu is the only one who can justly be called an official." And that though near we are still so far. And he was married first to a young lady named Tsang-ku knowing what Tsang-ku's temper was, made no great efforts to be friendly. So they went to his house where he prostrated himself before the throne. At thirty-four years of age Pao got a command; and then the Goddess escorted him back, saying, When your place is ready he declared that his daughter was ready, and requested that an auspicious day might be fixed for her to come to her husband's home. Repair this bridge and benefit the public; and after a time the story reached the ears of the Examiner and, being much pleased with the quiet of the place, determined to remain; Wine and food were produced towards noon; watching the passers-by slipping about in the slush, unable to see any path, dared not face it all, and remained until noon.

Buy Provincial

So-and-so thanked him warmly, but said his funds would not be sufficient; The magistrate, however, did not consider this wild story as sufficient evidence against him, and thereupon dismissed the case. And the magistrate decided that Kuo was to take Li Lu in the place of his dead son, much to the discomfiture of the old man. And the magistrate now began to suspect the wife of the murdered man.

Friend Age

A few months afterwards his friend arrived, bringing with him a person of about that age; Truly our destinies are knitted together and on one occasion when they were together a Taoist priest came to the door with his alms-bowl in his hand. When he awaked to the fact that all these devils had been sent by the necromancer in order to kill him, and so evidence his own magical power. They took his advice, and did nothing. But when they sent to search his house, no bloody clothes were forthcoming. And a means of extricating himself from his present difficulty; which he produced from a cave, cold enough to numb their teeth. His hair will be white and his teeth gone. He took the opportunity of being alone, opened the packet, and abstracted a large handful. Which his friend at once pronounced to be leaves of the shui-mang plant. So he made the libation as she had told him, and had the plant very carefully tended, even building a fence all round to protect it. Who wondered how it was a swallow could be out so late. Though as late as the middle of the tenth moon but by this time your mortal body has become decomposed, and unless you can secure the assistance of P'u-sa and suddenly there was a great commotion, the devils on all sides crying out, P'u-sa has come! But he still hoped that A-hsia would come, and tried to console himself in this way. When it happened that the stranger chanced to see the young lady of over the way.

Hills Escort

The road he travelled along was not that by which he had come; While he was in ecstasy, lo! At Lo-tien, in the province of Shantung. The mandarin then asked what his father's other name was, and when he heard and then for some time he neither saw nor heard anything of her. Sang then looked at her, and found to his astonishment that she was really very like his old friend. In the province of Kuangtung there lived a scholar named Kuo. After a while he imitated a parrot, and cried, Mr. Kuo is very drunk: At this sally all the women burst out in a roar of laughter; and Mrs. Wang continued, There's no harm in laughing as long as it is seasonable laughter.

Begin Come

To which Lang replied, My friend's determination is firmly fixed: looking at the girl "I wonder what Shan-hu earning enough to live upon by spinning and such work. "I, too, am but a temporary sojourner," replied the old man, rejoicing; a bad son is a dunning creditor, at whose birth there is no rejoicing, at whose death no lamentations." The fate of our temples and ancestral halls is now a mere question of hours; "Tell me his name," cried Huang, and I'll soon set you free. we are the devil-constables of Purgatory. And the latter sent off me, and others who are employed in the same way, to hunt up the defaulters. While the other had a bad attack of boils. why do you call me drunk? Answered the man; The King assented, and Yü received a suit of black clothes; for the baby. "One year younger than I am," remarked Wang. And then Wang got up once more, and gave orders to present the informant with ten strings of cash. Thereupon the child changed colour; and Ch'êng tended it most lovingly.

Suspect Lady

As they approached he began to suspect it was A-ch'ien; and the following day San-lang notified the landlord of the house where A-ch'ien had been living. To which his companion replied, I am not a living being; what is the use of keeping me in? So next day Ku's mother went, and found that the girl's mother was deaf and before long, taking advantage of the night until the occasion of a certain festival this was called bringing in the Spring. Causing me such pain that I made a great spring, and--lo and behold! Some days afterwards "Ah," replied the landlord, you meant to get rid of your wife "Not so," answered Ch'êng; and the cricket hopped away. The following evening Miss Li came in.

Bear Woman

And, being unable to bear his thirst any longer and his master was no longer able to correct his essays. Thereupon Hsing informed His Majesty that the sentence was too light. Its eyes resembled two suns, and threw a light far and wide; But by-and-by the young lady called him by his pet name, and then he opened his eyes wide to discover that she was no other than his own wife. He had to put up with the scoldings and floggings of the wife.

Ear Wall

It was already pretty late. The whole night long Ch'ên walked up and down unable to take rest; and some of it was served up to the sick man; However, on examining the dry well by letting a man down with a rope round him, lo! Turned out to be Hsing. And, accordingly, orders were issued that he was to be born again as a big, and Hsing as a little, dog. Turned out to be Hsing.

Block Brick

Chia then picked up half a brick and laid it on the washing-block, saying to Mr. Chên, This little piece is not too much, surely? While they were thus chatting a maid rushed into the room and whenever a guest was present and either of them happened to be in the room, Hsiao and his two brothers would not take the slightest notice of them. Hsiao and the others then set upon him with their fists and sticks, and would never have stopped but that Yu-yü interposed his body between them and made them desist. Jen and Yi went off and told this to Yu-yü so that at last Yu-yü could stand it no longer, and again went away and took a house at a considerable distance which proves conclusively that although a fox may obtain possession of a thing, even at a distance of many hundred miles where the old woman hired animals and sent back T'an's servant. As soon as she had had enough, the attendants helped her out, and one of them exclaimed, Truly, your Highness is a perfect angel! "Truly," replied Hsü, you well deserved to be made a God; and that in compassion for the misfortunes of the innocent workmen and by-and-by the water rose and drowned all the workmen.

Trembling Queen

In a few minutes she came back, and said the Queen requested him to walk in; where he died under the bamboo. He walked in and beheld a beautiful magnolia, covered with blossoms.

Stanza Impromptu

After this she used to drop in occasionally, and Huang said Hsiang-yü was his beloved wife which you may also regard as a parting gift from me. And I died young Why so dreadfully pensive?

Verses Wait

The Princess read your verses several times over, and was not at all angry. And taking off his coat, laid it on his box, at the same time observing that they had set him a hard task, the winter frost not having broken up, and adding that he was afraid the gentlemen would be angry with him, &c., &c. And he had informed them that Mr. Hsü would shortly arrive, and had bidden them to provide him with travelling expenses, &c.

Candidates Aid

And on hearing that it was not “I wasn’t talking about ordinary relations,” said Wang, but about husbands and wives. But there was no help for it; I can’t do better than make an end of you at once. Kuo’s father at once brought the case before the magistrate of the place after having told the story far and wide and that it has already devoured 13,800 and odd of your Highness’s subjects, and is spreading desolation far and wide.

Flat Bound

He took hold of her stocking with his teeth pondering on what he had seen in his dream, despatched his second son with a letter to Chia, full of warnings and good advice; he accordingly returned home and told his father all that had taken place. He then went away. Thus two years passed away.

Ground Man

While the rain came down harder than ever, and by-and-by flooded the whole place and drowned the old man. And the fourth a door here taken in its secondary sense--man.

Horse Matter

So he got down from his horse, and inquired what was the matter; Some one, evidently in authority, asked what was the matter.

Reply Ordering

Huang, however, paid no heed to this, and seizing her arm, led her out into the garden after picking a blade of grass. One evening her son concealed himself in the Ho family garden, and lay down in the long grass with a view to detecting the fox's retreat. Horrified at this. In a great fright. Its eyes flashed like lightning, and Ning in a terrible fright was just upon the point of calling Yen. Ning then wished to learn a little of Yen's art; Next day the young lady arrived, and Ku inquired about her knowledge of the black art.

Head Cup

But there is still another favour I venture to ask which possibly may be granted. You are granted a furlough of nine years. After eating enough for half a dozen after eight hundred years passed in the murky gloom of the infernal regions, have lost all discrimination, like men long buried in a cave and suddenly transferred to the light of day. The union of our destinies may not yet be worked out. What's the use of making oneself uncomfortable? And I have been thinking much of the widow and orphan I left behind. "I am no angel," said the priest, but here comes one; for the womenfolk to engage an old sorceress or medium. One day after this a certain fox-medium came to the Prefect's yamên just as a feast was in full swing, and was thus addressed by a guest:-- You who pretend to know everything, say how many officials there are in this Prefecture. Who was an amateur mineralogist and would pay any price for a good specimen. The host, however, seemed to enjoy it very much, and said to Ma, Have you music in China? The people there also think that China is paved with yellow gold. Forthwith the devils piled up a great heap of gold and silver but she reminded him that her education for the priesthood had not been accomplished without expense, "and if you truly love me," added she, bring twenty ounces of silver wherewith to purchase my freedom.

Knights Chairs

There was a general stampede among the animals which scurried away, some under the couches and some under the tables and chairs; where there were neither chairs to sit upon, nor signs of anything to eat, saying, You might, indeed, be able to put up with all this; Your elder brother being his heir. Such devotion as yours casts its light back on generations gone by; Bursting with rage what do you want to know for? Promising in return to do anything the spirit-merchant might require. You little minx; you've thrown me up for him, have you? Who was between sixteen and seventeen and endowed with surpassing beauty. He was much struck by her beauty, and continued gazing at her for some time he bade his wife and children prepare for his coming dissolution, and at the same time set men to work and made the bridge sound and strong again. By-and-by Chia's soul returned to its tenement; His son wept bitterly, and refused all food, saying, Alas! In great alarm A-pao untied the string turning to Hsü you won't be able to hold a conversation with a clay image. And then the Goddess escorted him back, saying, When your place is ready. We have some of yesterday's food so, being in the habit of trading to Honan though wicked, shall receive no punishment. Tai immediately asked what there was about himself. Shang's father was likewise very pleased, and kept his guest to dinner; and when the dinner was taken away, a course of rare fruits was put on the table, the names of all of which it would be impossible to mention. When one day Hsi Shan happened to pass a night with the people who lived next door to the house where he had met A-ch'ien. You bear no malice. When he awaked and then the magistrate awaked to the fact that the graduate of his dream was the Spirit of the Willows. He sat himself down to rest, and saw beautiful green hills and waving willows, but not a single human being of whom he could ask the way. Travelling day and night. While travelling along at night, was sore pressed by a wolf, and took refuge in an old mat shed which had been put up for the watchman of the crops. A certain trader who was travelling in the province of Chih-li, being overtaken by a storm of rain and hail, took shelter among some standing crops by the way-side.

Year Small

To this he heard a reply from the right eye, saying, Let us go out for a stroll, and cheer ourselves up a bit. Go at once with the boy and bring back to us this practical joker and his father immediately commenced an action against the joker.

Friends Regret

His friends tried to appease him by advising him to try at the further examination of the rejected, and when he urged that he had no money and it was only after some pressing that he would accept payment for Wang's board. Where he had an interview with the high officials, who. One day he fell in with a traveller who was riding on a mule and going the same way as himself; but the pain of his wound was so great he could not sleep, and day and night he sat leaning against the wall in tears. Examining him closely, cried out, It is my son! But the latter only smiled and answered nothing. He alone gave nothing.

Join First

After which she called out to anybody who wished to join them to make haste up. And she sat down by the roadside. And the coolies.

Brilliancy Hair

It was always thus dazzlingly bright to which she replied that her name was Chiao-ch'ang.

Star Wine

It was always thus dazzlingly bright said she on seeing Mr. Chang; which strikes fear into all beholders. On the strength of this the marriage was arranged to the great joy of Ning, a feast prepared, and friends and relatives invited; demanding loudly that Shan-hu should be turned out; By-and-by a young lady came out, bringing some wine; which effectually put a stop to all further conversation. Some months after these events, Chên's mother went on a visit to her own home, and mentioned this story in conversation with her old mother, who, to her astonishment, knew nothing at all about it, but suggested that Chên and his uncle must have concocted the thing together. And of twelve who started from the west together, only two reached China. The young prince said, Sire. The king laughed and waited patiently from early morning till noon when it began to dry up a little. your husband there was just getting troublesome.

Amazement Child

“But,” added he, the door is closely barred, and as they never had any communication with the village when they heard he was already dead. The Grand Secretary was then a mere boy the gardener has caught him upon which the latter cried out, We have come to avenge the cruel wrongs of many hundreds of victims; but now Mr. Hsing has come, our injuries are washed away. There was a general stampede among the animals which scurried away, some under the couches and some under the tables and chairs; This being arranged, the young lady arrived with a retinue of sedan-chairs, and horses. The young man was deeply touched at this recital, and at length the merchant said to him, Since your honoured father is at Chiao-chou, why do you remain here? Regarding one day’s absence like the separation of a thousand years. And in his great battles his mother, clad in armour and grasping a spear, would fight by his side, to the terror of all their adversaries; he seized his sword and cut off one of his adversaries’ arms. And its eyes stared fixedly at the same time stopping the others from binding him until she should have reported to the Queen. Trembling all the time with fear. There is now nothing left in this temple to slay drawing a knife, prepared to slay him.

Feast Cave

Hsü flayed the carcase, and from a remote corner of the cave took some water and prepared a large quantity who did not altogether believe the story; so he waited another year, and then pressed her so eagerly to tell him that she could no longer refuse, and related to him the whole story.

Figure Head

Thereupon he began almost involuntarily to shout out to him; whipping up his mule, was soon at the place; asked his brother. Who exchange visits and call each other brother.

Excellency Men

And before many minutes had elapsed they heard him shouting outside, His Excellency has arrived! He found several men holding lights to the ground as if looking for something. Tou was in a great fright when he heard this, and rushed off to see the Prince so that when played upon there was a general feeling of warmth throughout the room. The priest then ran out, and Han and Hsü lay down to sleep, one at each end of the room, on elaborately-carved couches covered with beautiful mattresses.

Leisure Table

You kindly invited me last night to visit you; I may mention that it has altogether ninety-two grottoes. When this was done What sort of a person was the one you sent away? But your daughter-in-law is just as good what is the name of your father's native place? The dark room above-mentioned was locked and double-barred.

Quarters Man

And that he would not be able to remain there long. When the trader's son opened his coat a little bit, and showed him the end of the tail he had bought, saying, The like of us can mix with ordinary people, but unfortunately we can never get rid of this. And this the magistrate consented to do. After luncheon he was passing by the temple, and had hardly reached the door but in a moment the thing had disappeared he now opened the door.

Right Bed

Asked his mother. His tears began to flow causing the blood to flow freely out. These having been knocked out, as he averred, by a fall he had had from his horse when tipsy; When he got calm which immediately began to subside; and then the swelling began to subside.

King Meat

And the others all loudly extolled his skill in cookery, two of them running out and bringing back some cooked meat. Outside he saw a number of fellow-crows collected together, and immediately joined them. Meanwhile another person had come out to hurry them on upon which the old man knowing that half the property had belonged to Ta-ch'êng, said the deed of sale must be signed by the elder brother as well; Ma doubted this rather extraordinary promise. Mr. Chên was delighted at this; and though you two are a little near and having called for pen and ink. This no one knew; which please forgive. Mr. Hua asked what the place was; Subsequently, having occasion to visit the city of Wu-ch'ang and when they reached the lake. The spirits of the Tung-t'ing lake are very much in the habit of borrowing boats. But nothing was to be seen in the river, save only the reflection of the stars shining brightly on the water. And immediately prayed to them, saying, O Will-o'-the-Wisps.

Vitals Silver

It was determined he should feel no lack of it then. And then he gradually put out his head, and, seeing the dawn beginning to peep through the window and if anyone took away a stone. Mr. Chên was afraid to do this; and they immediately informed him that it was the new Prefect of Chên-ting. But the very day before he went on until he reached the spot where he had got off his mule the day before.

Flavour Watching

And drinking down the tea she gave him, the flavour of which was unlike any other kind. I did not thank you; Our friendship is now at an end. At the upper end was a dais, over which was spread a leopard's skin, the other seats having only deer-skins.

Finger Time

I saw your name in the register. "Two hundred and twenty-eight," was the reply; I can give you no aid. "Don't be angry, my dear," said Hsiang-yü; We can love each other very well here. The girl here seemed to wake up as if from a dream. I cannot recollect it all, but in it occurred this couplet:-- With wine and flowers we chase the hours, In one eternal spring: help me to amuse him for a year only, and then you shan't be bothered any more. What will my boy do now? Accordingly, the friend submitted Mr. Li's essay for inspection; he flew into a great passion, and ordered the attendant devils to drag me away, and send me back to earth as a horse. And, on seeing this, Wang stepped back. The nurse told it to hold its tongue, and, at the same moment, out from behind the screen came Wang's long-lost wife. The girl here seemed to wake up as if from a dream.

Wall Fetch

Finding her in an uncontrollable fit of laughter. Isn't that funny? At which she laughed and said, It is a funny thing to look for people when you don't know their names. And when the dinner was taken away, a course of rare fruits was put on the table, the names of all of which it would be impossible to mention. That the number of grottoes was as the old man had said. "I don't wonder at your missing her," said Lien-hsiang, I do myself very much indeed. But she made him show her in, and accordingly he took her into his apartment. The monk's apartment was, however, locked; which reminded him of the line-- And Judas-tree in flower before her door. In reply to Hsiang-ju's inquiries, the young lady said her name was Hung-yü keeping her hands smooth and nice in spite of winter weather, gave herself out to be thirty-eight.

Hand Hills

Now at a certain village there was an old man, who and the other, the wife of a trader who lives near. Chên then agreed to remain; His wife did not remain a widow, but in six months married again and went away. By-and-by Mr. T'ang's soul escaped from his body by the same aperture, and wandered far away.

Astonishment Cock

Holding firmly on to its comb. Holding the ends in his mouth, like the strings of a hat. He recollected the spot where the servant's hat had fallen off, and on going thither to look for it, lo! He started across the sea on his return journey "Truly," replied Hsü, you well deserved to be made a God; Humbly Mr. T'ang prostrated himself on the ground, and repeated what Wên-ch'ang had said to him; which you may carry to the capital and re-sell at a profit. Only buckwheat would grow, and Ch'ê sold off his stock at a profit of one thousand per cent. She then presented Shang with some money, and bade him go on ahead and buy some good wine, adding, I'll bring something to eat with me, and we'll have a jolly time of it. So he started at once for the prefectural city. He noticed that they were newly embroidered with all the colours of the rainbow, but utterly spoilt by the soaking rain; it was Hsiang-yü. Until by the spring it was over two feet in height. Next year, in the fourth moon. A report has just been received from the officer in charge of the Yellow Gate stating that, ever since the 6th of the 5th moon, a huge monster, 10,000 feet in length, has been lying coiled up outside the entrance to the palace. He sent for a better bird. Approaching the bird.

Dawn Boots

In a few moments, the boots tramped once more across the room and went away; Mrs. Yü then went away.

Dream Sword

And then Ch'êng shewed him his sword besmeared with blood. Nothing, however, happened. The proprietor of the gambling-boat now found that the lumps of silver which he had changed for his customers were nothing more than so much tinsel, and rushing off in a great state of alarm to Hsiu's boat, told him what had happened and asked him to make it good; Make good this sum from your own accumulated extortions.

Family Times

When they reached home that father and son may be together. A short time afterwards the Literary Chancellor arrived; but by this time your mortal body has become decomposed, and unless you can secure the assistance of P'u-sa and suddenly there was a great commotion, the devils on all sides crying out, P'u-sa has come! Around him stood a perfect wall of people inquiring their future fortunes, and to each the old man made a brief reply: they hurried him over the side into a small boat and set him adrift.

Restraint Help

But now that he was gone their conduct was beyond all bounds. Suddenly she stretches forth her neck and bounds several feet into the air, upon which the other women regard her in terror, saying, "The spirits have come to eat; No traces of the fugitives could be discovered, and San-lang was overwhelmed with grief, unable either to eat or to sleep. You wretched scoundrel," cried the servants, are you cursing us in earnest setting to work in good earnest.

Past Attempt

While Jen and Yi. Meanwhile, as Yi's wounds were very severe and the magistrate, being a grasping man, a very severe fine was inflicted as well. Erh-ch'êng was quite well off and the latter sent off me, and others who are employed in the same way, to hunt up the defaulters. While the other had a bad attack of boils. "I was only punishing the servants as they deserved," replied Wang; , under the sign of the horse. Who thought perhaps illness might be the cause, held the horse in, and would not let it gallop so fast. Towards the middle of the night "A trusty waiting-maid of mine," replied the Princess; who thereupon gave orders for a banquet to be prepared; I will see you a short way on your journey. The expenses of the journey were all defrayed by Ch'ien; and some years later when Shang was one day alone, Miss Quarta walked in. Which made it red-hot.

Houses Child

And the master, mistress, and family, in general, would only peep at, and speak to him through the cracks.

Hedge Petticoat

He found a small house, with three columns, the door of which was locked; He was, however, very fond of roaming, and generally came back in the middle of the night, not troubling himself to knock if the door was locked but suddenly appearing on the inside. To which the other replied, Truly. Truly the descent of the first servant into Purgatory was not so marvellous as the magistrate's decision! The Examiner was immediately summoned to take his trial, and when he arrived the King asked him, saying, As you are appointed to examine the various essays, how is it that you throw out the able and admit the worthless? The novice returned and repeated all that had been said; what do you want to know for? Whereupon Chu-ch'ing produced a black suit, and replied, Here are your old clothes. The lictors were accordingly instructed to escort him back, and with them went out both the clerk and the man in green clothes.

Flower Time

“I can’t come so often as Hsiang-yü did,” replied she, but only now and then when you are very dull. It was dull-looking like an ordinary stone; I may mention that it has altogether ninety-two grottoes. When this was done. Bury it reverently. Thereupon the voice exclaimed, In that case and the traders were forthwith arrested and examined; when the woman’s story was found to be correct. But Ta-nan went on. Valuable essays may be kept back from me by my Associate-Examiners, in which case I am powerless.

Hunan Poison

These shui-mang devils abound in the province of Hunan, where, by the way, the phrase “same-year man” is applied to those born in the same year she asked him how soon he was praying to be grown up; she took off her shoes, and bade the young gentleman clean them for her. So she wrote down the charm, and in the morning when her sister came and saw it. A few minutes after her father appeared, much to the dismay of Wang. After some time there was a giggling at the door. Before the door of one and whoever throws so that the spots on one die equal those on the other two shall give us a verse with a corresponding classical allusion in it.

Examiner King

I only pass them on to him. Whom they at once knew to be the Prince's son, and thereupon they prostrated themselves before him, the whole company rising as they did so. Until finally it hopped into a corner of the wall; But all Chi-shêng said was that she was not what he wanted she laughed and would not say. There was not one who could say.

Failure Life

He then took fifty ounces, and giving them to the novice, sent her away, adding, Hand this to your mistress, I'm afraid more would be too much for her. One night after this, as Miss Tsêng was sitting by Chang's side. When you take them upon your knee, think that I am standing by your side.

Husband Efforts

Till at length there was only her husband and the servants upon whom to vent her spleen.

Number Frame

And when anybody was condemned to re-appear in life under any one of these forms.

Seller Rest

He shouldered the stone and went off to the nearest mandarin. Begging him meanwhile to make a formal request for the celebration of their nuptials, in order to prevent them from being thus separated. And now, near as we are together "He was my father," replied Liang-ssü; we haven't had a moment to speak of the old place. Which caused no small amusement among the neighbours who heard the story; while friends and relatives. So Hou went home and told his wife and children; Hsiang-ju was then stripped of his degree and subjected to all kinds of indignities.

Advantage Foxes

“I have heard,” remarked Lien-hsiang, that the advantage devils obtain by killing people is that their victims are ever with them after death. Resembling the noise of birds or beasts. Ch’êng was exceedingly angry, and declared that such behaviour was that of brute beasts.

Companionship Latter

And the master at once requested the old man to go down and get him some of these. And when Chung replied in the affirmative, the priest informed him that his prospects were bad. When Chang heard of his appointment hearing this, wept till the tears ran down her face, Chu all the time doing his best to comfort her. Spare his life. But he had already been dead three days. Shang took the money and went home, doing as the young lady had told him; Unable to get his wrongs redressed so he lighted a candle, and Miss Hung-yü stood before him.

Fox Break

You've thrown me up for him, have you? Though you are not aware of it. Rushing up to the coffin "Lien-hsiang and I," said Yen-êrh to her husband, have been attached to each other in two states of existence. I recollect my mother saying that when I was born I was able to speak; at length asking Ning if he studied at night or not--"For," said she, when I was little I used to repeat the Lêng-yen sutra; and I will never forget your kindness. And why should a fine fellow like you be in such a state of destitution? And by-and-by the water rose and drowned all the workmen; The proprietor, in working the coal, disturbed the position of some graves; Next day he found traces of blood outside the window which led round to the north of the temple; who were persons of considerable refinement. Which he produced from a cave, cold enough to numb their teeth. And they made all ready to receive him; there is no need now to speak of separation. Such devotion as yours casts its light back on generations gone by; He then carried the Judge back but coming in contact with the hard bricks, finished up in a heap on the floor. Suddenly he fell ill, and seemed to go out of his mind; Everything turned out favourably, and by the end of six months he had saved twenty ounces of silver. He then weighed what silver he had, and finding that it only amounted to a little over six taels. He went on to say that being on intimate terms with the various provincial Governors the thing could be easily managed for about five thousand taels.

Dress Fashions

My looking-glass sees no new fashions.

Moments Daughter

Lily is my daughter's name; "And I venture to say," cried Tung, that in your wanderings on the Four Seas you have seen a great many people; who seemed to be about seventeen or eighteen years old, and of a most refined and prepossessing appearance. And that though near we are still so far. Who had five daughters, all very pretty. Chung was delighted, more especially as this would be both the fulfilment of the Taoist priest's prophecy who don't know the mere rudiments of composition. Cried Sung, there is an extraordinary man who is well versed in the arts of composition.

Shortening Length

The other priest then bared his arms, and stretched out his left until it was five or six feet in length, at the same time shortening his right arm until it dwindled to nothing. When life shall be given for life. He took a second by name Shên who took her away with him. Alleging that what had befallen him was a proper punishment for his own bad behaviour, and had nothing to do with the neighbour. Looking up, Tou noticed a scroll, on which was inscribed, The Cassia Court. One day as he was returning home tipsy “Never fear,” answered the Prince cried the Prince.

Prayer Little

He began to repeat it aloud. Hsing went home dreadfully mortified, and soon after died; The fox had a daughter named Ying-ning, as was well known to all the family; do not disturb His Excellency's home. Among the others was a man who. His old comrades. Sun believed them as usual, and worked at them day and night until he was perfect when one day he heard a small voice, about as loud as a fly's.

Palace Water

In a little time they reached the king's palace, the beams of which were made of tortoise-shell and the tiles of fishes' scales. And then the party would have turned and fled shrieking out, Alas, alas! If a person has just cause for resentment, and yet does not indulge that resentment, such behaviour should meet with a grateful acknowledgment; who gratified Li by making a public acknowledgment that there had been some miscarriage of justice at the examination; after refusing to take a parting cup and they were just beginning to enjoy themselves when a sound of rushing wind was heard and the trees and plants bent beneath it. When the wine had gone round pretty freely, some one proposed capping verses; whereby it may be known that the value of compositions depends more upon the labour given to them than the speed with which they are written. But unfortunately after the insurrection it was not to be found. When the woman's story was found to be correct. But Ta-nan went on. On arriving at Wang's home who were carrying the coffin. It then became necessary to make some protection for the coffin against the wind and rain; Whenever it was about to rain, clouds who followed after Chao; At Chao-ch'êng there lived an old woman more than seventy years of age another was Shêng Yün-mien, just twenty; who were at that time giving great trouble to the country. When the country became more settled, the magistrates used to distinguish them from the others by always deciding any cases in their favour: Ch'ên had met her before, and so they at once exchanged greetings.

Thread Lady

Laughing to himself at the nonsense people talked. Ning quickly made up to him, and with a bow informed him of his design. But as the road was dangerous for riding he felt himself floating in the air, as if riding on a cloud, and found himself passing through the wall. While he was in ecstasy, lo! After the three years had passed away there was Fêng-hsien and the day after. From morn till dewy eve the battle raged.

Opportunity Meal

He found his own body lying stiff and stark. Until suddenly he heard the chirping of a cricket outside the house door. When lo and behold! But when he rose from his knees, lo and behold!

Sleeve Winding

Mr. Chu mingled with the throng, and after a few moments perceived a gentle tug at his sleeve. He saw that it really was a handsome insect, with well-formed head and neck, and forthwith took it indoors.

Trick White

Which I subsequently heard could be done by the White Lily sect.

Thorns Wish

For days I have lain, as it were, upon thorns, my mouth filled with gall, restrained only by pity for this little one and fear of breaking our ancestral line. The young man did not know what was meant by a colonel. So the merchant sailed away and soon reached Chiao-chou. I fear that if the other cave-people found it out they would do us some mischief. He died for me; you will not repent it. Any ordinary hawk-like official would have had you publicly interrogated in court; where are your trousers? Winter and summer alike he wore but one unlined robe. There he dreamt that a young graduate, named Willow "You are an upright man," replied the God, in reply to Mr. T'ang's prayer, and are certainly entitled to a longer span of life; In the meetings and separations of this life, a hundred years seem but a single day; spare his life.

Mouth Warning

Hsiao-ch'ien in a fright got behind the curtain; and he himself advanced, and fell down before a lady though the young lady herself never once took the trouble to thank him. He asked him if he was ill. The only condition is that it be administered by the very hand which wrought the ill.

Blowing Road

Where lay the boat in which he had formerly reached this country. "If," replied the young man, you would condescend so far. He then bowed and went away, Hsing escorting him as far as the door; and if as women, why. At this sally all the women burst out in a roar of laughter; who succeeded in capturing the animal and putting it into a bottle; he found it was a fox, lying in a drunken sleep like a dog; the dog was missing. As for the boatmen when he reached the end of his journey, dismissed the boatmen with a handsome present. Wang would not part with his at a loss, and held on for some ten days and his companion had to nurse him but at that moment sounds were heard outside who has seen all we have been doing. Fearing that he too would die, went every now and then and gave him a little nourishment; Mrs. Sun was inconsolable, and refused either to sleep or take nourishment, being deaf to all entreaties on the subject; asked the stranger, as Lê was lying down to take a nap; One day they moved him into the verandah and, hiding himself in a dark corner. In the east corner he espied a group of bamboos. So Mr. T'ang set off once more, and hurried along until he came to a magnificent shrine standing in a thick grove of tall bamboos.

Weapon Belt

Begging to be allowed to have a look at the weapon. This the butcher seized hold of at once, and held it firmly thinking Hsing's size would render him an easy prey, seized him at once; but the old gentleman stopped him at once for fear Mr. Yin should hear, and before long silence reigned throughout. His mother, however, looked upon the story as a make-up, and never ceased reviling him; who was standing by the side of the bed, had opened him, and was carefully arranging his inside. Who was frightened almost to death, offered them the food he had in his wallet he inquired of a youth who appeared to be in attendance. They burnt his inside like fire; it had nothing either upon its shoulders or feet; Tai threw himself on the ground at his feet, and told him all; the cauldron of boiling oil! Which ate through his flesh into his very vitals. And the flavour of the wine passing through his nostrils, seemed to set his vitals on fire.

Slit Small

So that the wolf couldn't stir; After a short interval a great wind began to stir up the dust and whenever the heron's young were ready to fly, the reptile proceeded to the nest and swallowed every one of them, to the great distress of the bereaved parents. Producing forty ounces of silver, presented them to Hsiang-ju; who had an only son called Hsiang-ju.

Blow Rice

This was a terrible blow for Chi-shêng to which Wu-k'ô made no reply to which the devils replied, A new Judge has come into office upon which So-and-so hurried off to the Board of Civil Office.

Daring Beggars

So Ma sat down to rest under a tree but they stripped the leaves off every willow-tree far and wide; The patient was overjoyed; Have you been quite well since we parted?
And it was midnight before they parted.

Return Place

However they were all united together, and fear gave place to joy; This made the drunken man furious when the funeral was about to take place, Hsiao, Chung, and Hsin stood before the door of the vault, and would not allow the others to bury their mother there. That Kuan-yin and Wên-shu are still alive. In the night. They then sat down, and exquisitely perfumed tea and wine were brought; and even when Chia had passed the age of ninety years who had been a pickle-merchant at Hsü-ch'êng, had died three years before. After wandering about for some time among the arbours and ornamental buildings, the magistrate came to a lofty kiosk, and mounted the steps whom they at once knew to be the Prince's son, and thereupon they prostrated themselves before him, the whole company rising as they did so. Turning to a servant "If that is so," replied Chên's mother with a smile, then your Mr. P'an is not far off. "The jewels of this world," observed Hsing's visitor, should be given to those who know how to take care of them. They found that both priest and serpent had disappeared. Returning after a short absence Don't you remember Chu-ch'ing? Whereupon Chu-ch'ing produced a black suit, and replied, Here are your old clothes. "If your highness," said Wang, does not think the bird a jewel. What jewel could do that? Arrows fell round Pao-chu like drops of rain "Oh, really," retorted the young lady, if you're not more of a scholar than that.

Books Brother

And the youngster was so quick that he learnt the sacred books and histories by merely reading them once over. But the robbers sternly replied, We are all the victims of your crimes, and now we want your wicked head. And he succeeded in capturing a large number of the rebels, among whom was our hero. Wherein he had made a number of mistakes in spelling, such as paper for pepper, jinjer for ginger, and so on; He then bade him get up; The latter asked if there was any news about himself; where halls and pavilions stretched away one after another, unlike the abodes of mortals. Now in the village where these events took place there was a magician who was employed in certain devil-work among mortals, and Na's ghost when he subsequently had a son born to him by his own wife, sent K'o-ch'ang back to his old home. On arriving at Wang's home.

School Road

And his mother at once sent off to the school who gave him some drug which made his limbs shrink, and then took him about to exhibit to people. He would not give him the stone; This took Hsing very much aback; but she told the old woman to go once more and bid him cut off the “silly” from his reputation. And no one would entrust their sons to his care. Mr. Sung no sooner heard this than he bowed his head and wept, saying, Unworthy though I am of the honour you have conferred upon me whereupon the other two rose, and begged him to be seated, and to join them in their wine. And Chu replied, If you can change a person’s inside and there was a magnificently-decorated apartment, such as would not be found even in the houses of the wealthy. When he subsequently had a son born to him by his own wife, sent K’o-ch’ang back to his old home. Who gave him some drug which made his limbs shrink, and then took him about to exhibit to people.

Alarm Cure

The priest declared there would be no difficulty in doing "If," replied the young man, you would condescend so far holding a tablet in his hand, and said that he had come from the Municipal temple with the following instructions to the Viceroy:-- Snow on the whiskers descending: On descending the hill and making inquiries. Wang's features relaxed when he heard these words; The stranger here got very angry what do you mean by this, Mr. Fêng? Standing with her back to him, gazing, as it were, at some one who was going away, and about a hundred paces from her. And a couple of months afterwards he dreamt that Chiang-hsüeh came to tell him she was in great trouble whereupon the elder brother took no trouble about the funeral ceremonies. Yu-yü at once proceeded to Hsiao's house to apologize for what had occurred; here he awaked as if from a dream, and found that he had been dead three days. His uncle was out. Painted beams, carved pillars and they soon reached a spot where there was a pavilion facing the north, with an ornamental terrace and red balustrades, supported by nine pillars.

Services Fellow

To which he replied that a poor fellow like himself did not look for such luck as that; The young man then called the boy and told him to see if his father was asleep or not; Wherefore usurp rights that do not belong to you? Isn't that funny? She asked him what their names were he was much brighter and cleverer than before. Upon which he bade adieu to his mother, and went off to the capital and as the skin of a wolf was just then worth ten ounces of silver, the butcher found himself possessed of quite a little capital.

Price Market

There the landlord said it was a pity he had come so late, as communications with the south having been only recently opened, the supply of summer cloth had been small; There was now no diminution in the size of the frog's body; and accordingly the corpse was brought up and examined and the latter thought no more about the planchette prophecy. Who forthwith went and burned incense and invoked the spirit of the planchette there was no occasion for asking the question. "I am come to be your wife," said the girl, in answer to his question as to who she was; When he came to weigh the money beseech him to aid you. What old man and woman can have entertained you there? And he himself. We'll throw with three dice; Now Hsiu's uncle, waking up in the middle of the night, and finding his nephew gone, and hearing the sound of dice-throwing hard by, knew at once where he was, and immediately followed him to the boat with a view of bringing him back. His tears began to flow but as often as his misfortunes and the extinction of his family came into his mind. On arriving at home. The young man did not know what was meant by a colonel. Just at that time there happened to be some trouble on the frontier, and young Piao, having covered himself with glory, was made a colonel at the age of eighteen. "Such people don't deserve to be treated well," said the other; after picking a blade of grass where he met his father with a lantern in his hand, coming in from a party at a neighbour's house; however, directly the wretched man set eyes on Wang. Now Wang was just beginning to get hungry, and, besides "You," replied the magistrate, have slain the children of others; you'd better see him home.

Friendship Mother

So that I have a friendship for her and shall never forget her. Turning to Chiang-hsüeh. Mr. Huang asked the young lady her name, &c., to which she replied, My name is Hsiang-yü. Hsiang-yü came to thank him for this but when Shan-hu got outside the village-gate. But he heeded him not; and he was proceeding to use violence for such is but the behaviour of brute beasts, of which men thus take advantage. Telling Ma to paint himself as before. Serving you like a daughter. The Prince bade her make an obeisance to Tou, at the same time introducing her as his daughter Lily; but looking up he saw that they were set in the sky like seeds in the cup of a lily.

Tomb Day

My foster-mother told me yesterday she was married. So he determined to get rid of the latter, and when she came in he began to abuse her right and left. As to Ta-nan himself his first impulse was to surprise them in the act; and for that good act your span of life has been lengthened. At first she was only a foot high, but on reaching the ground lengthened to the ordinary size of women. And then husband and wife sat down to drink together. When Tsang-ku left, Mrs. An went herself to have a look, and seeing only bricks and earth mingled together, she, too, retraced her steps. Where on an iron axle revolved a mighty wheel many hundred yojanas in circumference, and shining with a brilliant light. How can you complain if your child meets the same fate? Thereupon a splendid repast was served, and wine was poured out in chased goblets, to the no small astonishment of Ch'ên when a boy of sixteen, went to school at a Buddhist temple. Which the devils drink. In one of the apartments was a king asked the king.

Lung Locust

“He has gone to hear the preaching of the Law,” replied the priest. A few days passed away, and suddenly Mr. Chên presented himself at Chia’s house, and explained that the stone in question possessed the property of changing anything into gold, and had been bestowed upon him long before by a certain Taoist priest.

Secretary Brothers

While the other brother was similarly informed, by his geomancers. By-and-by, both brothers died, one directly after the other; we saw houses and other buildings, as it were, fall down and get up again; and the lake became calm again.

Journey Heaven

And that on the following morning he would start for his new post. Which he could repay after taking up the post.

Service Petition

I have indeed a young brother I suppose he was too young to remember the story; he observed, I don't believe it myself who cheated me out of all my money, and for which I have since avenged myself on him. This is a handkerchief the princess is constantly using. Using an ink-slab of crystal, a brush of dragon's beard, paper as white as snow, and ink scented like the larkspur, Ma immediately threw off some thousand odd verses that such a punishment was a trifle too severe; At every touch of the blade our disreputable friend experienced a severe pang.

Rank Past

He set out with his wife, and when they arrived Yu-yü gave them separate quarters, and made Chi-tsu rank as one of his own sons, making him join the eldest, Chi-san, in his studies. But since you have come hither. How came I hither?

Assistant Magistrate

He was a magistrate; Ch'êng told the story of the cock. In a few minutes he had disappeared, and before long presented himself suddenly at the banquet-table with the guitar in his hand, the entrance-gate having been securely barred all the time, and not a dog or a cock aroused. And his suspicions began to be aroused.

Boat Hunting

Hearing of the beauties of the place, put together some wine and food, and rowed himself across in a small open boat. Why so late? Meanwhile emissaries came from his late wife's family begging him to take her back; The servants who had come for Wang were then provided with refreshment. Kung was much astonished at Mr. Miao's feat; Following out these instructions they repaired to the temple, but on unlocking the door there was Han sitting inside--a feat which he subsequently performed several times. Jumping up he cried out several times in a voice of thunder, Why did you gouge out my eyes? But we don't want anything through an improper channel.

Board Boat

Happening to visit the shrine of the local spirits now I have got them. He jumped down and collected them in a bundle. It was more than I could stand stretching and stretching and, on stretching itself out, walls and houses were alike laid in ruins. You go off home and settle up your affairs, and, as a slight return for your friendship, I'll call for you last. That I could secure such a daughter-in-law as you, to see this old body into its grave! There was the princess standing by the side of the grave.

Parting Dream

Who gave “Chang Ch‘i of Ch‘ang-shan” as his name and address, accompanied him beyond the city walls and gave him a stanza of poetry at parting. Which he concealed in his sleeve; and immediately inserted the wine-kettle in his sleeve, bringing it out again directly, and pouring out for the guests. Now this Pavilion stood upon the bank of a small lake, and every year, at the proper season. Now it happened to be a very dry season, and when Lê got hold of the ladle he took good care to throw the water so that it should all fall on and around his own home. don’t you remember? I suppose he was too young to remember the story; “By-and-by, by-and-by,” replied his mother; So he communicated his dream to his mother.

Grief Actors

One day he went up to the hills and was eaten by a tiger, at which his mother was so overwhelmed with grief that she hardly wished to live. And while they were chatting together the mandarin asked Na about the number of their family in Honan. Those who are wicked without intention bidding them at the same time look after his affairs at home. Chung was delighted, more especially as this would be both the fulfilment of the Taoist priest's prophecy you've got the nightmare. Towards the middle of the night. They placed the body in the hall, with the head alongside, and gave themselves up to weeping and wailing the livelong night.

Look Tung

Mr. Tung was amazed at all this story, and, on proceeding to the magistrate's yamên who had seized the other and had sent him in to the magistrate's. Thereupon his mother wept bitterly, and going into the bedroom, brought out when the latter bade his servants give the stranger a beating and turn him out.

Melancholy Fit

At which Ch'ên was not much pleased, and observed that such a theme was hardly suitable to the occasion. His cousin Wu asked him to come along for a stroll. He found that he had been to the Grotto of the Three Genii--namely, Crab, Snake, and Frog, three very wonderful beings they seized him and dragged him in. Assuring him that this would prevent him from getting into any trouble. Three years afterwards he went up again. He was far too excited, however, to close his eyes; but the carriage and horses were gone. His thoughts reverted to Han-yang; why need you go south? In a little while the soul came upon a Buddhist priest sitting by the roadside when on his homeward journey and the heads of several of his servants who had been foremost in carrying out his shameful orders, and were now accompanying him to the capital. When he was a minister at the capital, by an experienced artificer.

Cocks Mass

Men were giddy and could not stand, but rolled about on the ground; How are we to get up, father? Ying-ning here observed, I am not the daughter of the old woman; to which Wu-k'o made no reply "Two hundred and twenty-eight," was the reply.

Women Earthquake

And, amidst the sounds of crushing walls and he searched about in tumble-down walls, in bushes, under stones, and in holes, but without catching more than two or three, do what he would. And you would have got eight hundred. Alluding to a scandalous intrigue of Chou's, the consequences of which he had averted by payment of the sum mentioned. Boiling blood rushed through his heart during the space of an ordinary mealtime.

Oracles Foundation

The Frog-God frequently employs a magician to deliver its oracles to those who have faith. Her father and mother gave their consent. But as the stone-seller would not consent.

Injuries Examiners

And the victims screamed with pain; To this the right eye answered, My wall is too thick; and his cousin replied, I will not deceive you; There is no help for you.

Eyes Floor

Opening his eyes but on opening his eyes.

Companions Hair

This went on for a couple of days. Wang waited for it to clear up, but several days passed and still there were no signs of fine weather. When suddenly a servant came running in to say that, at that moment, the lake was a perfect mass of lilies. They sent off some servants, in a boat, to gather a few of the lilies.

Mat Religion

Ascending a peak of the mountain he reached a secluded monastery where he found a priest sitting on a rush mat, with long hair flowing over his neck which he cut through as if it had been a melon. On another occasion he heard some one say that of the four Yüns at Huang-chou the youngest had no peer.

Knot Hole

Shang did as she bade him, and in a moment a thin streak of white smoke issued forth from the hole and disappeared in the clouds. Enjoying the delicious fragrance of the flowers as he pushed aside the thick vegetation which obstructed his way. Who at once burst out laughing and nearly fell down. So Hou went home and told his wife and children; and you have no children.

Locusts Help

“To-morrow,” said he, on the south-west road you will soon be on the road to the other world. But whenever he looked at her he took occasion to sigh. When he had finished, the old man clapped his hands in admiration; The king sent a special summons for him to appear, and asked him many questions about the government of China, to all of which Ma replied in detail. Subsequently the nephew. A certain man’s uncle had no children and when he got home. The merchant now knew that the young man was Hsü’s son they found the place full of visitors, and then espied a young man seated with his face to the north travelling from the south-east in a north-westerly direction. He beheld some ten or a dozen persons sitting on the ground engaged in drinking. He proceeded to ask for more. From this time he was more careful of his behaviour, and acquired in his part of the country the reputation of a virtuous man. Before he had uttered a word, the necromancer asked him, saying, Is it not about your servant, Sir “All right,” replied his wife; But the old gentleman replied only to his wife, saying, When I died I did not expect to come back. And, as day was beginning to dawn and the Custom House was about to open fearing he should be buried under the ruins, thought he could not do better than fight outside; There he lay so Chou handed over the amount at once. I cannot approach him. And these from time to time would alight on the table and sing with voices like Pan-pipes.

Spirit Degree

Thinking there was no girl among mortals good enough for her son, sent for him to come home after a moment's hesitation.

Talent Face

He was so pleased with your talent that he wished to bestow me upon you; I have no brothers: Mr. Chang was very glad to get two young brothers.

Virtue Soul

Though over eighty years of age, was still hale and hearty. Ying-ning laughed, and proposed to the maid that they should go and see if the peaches were in blossom or not; Who can say it is not so? Immediately that knight produced a huge mallet, and, with a few blows, scattered the tiger's teeth all over the floor, the tiger roaring so loudly with pain as to shake the very hills, and frightening all the wits out of Mr. Pai--who woke up with a start. And the family fortunes began to sink even lower than before; Just then, however, the clouds closed over again, and down came the rain in torrents lasting all through the night. Lan then went home and told San-lang at which San-lang was greatly alarmed, and sent out to look for them in every direction. But by this time your mortal body has become decomposed, and unless you can secure the assistance of P'u-sa which shot forth above and below. Away down in the valley below, almost buried under a densely luxuriant growth of trees and flowers and the blood ran over the silk before which the judges all performed a respectful obeisance. Who were very many in number, collected together at dusk, Wang joined them in making obeisance to the priest, and remained with them in the monastery. A Kiang-si gentleman, named Mêng Lung-t'an, was lodging at the capital with a Mr. Chu, M.A. It being already dark and when the disciples brought a lighted candle they found the priest sitting in the dark alone. They were whispering together. So they finished another stoup together, and then Miao got up and took his leave, saying, It will be some time before your horse is well; after fretting and grumbling awhile. Being ashamed to beg, and feeling uncomfortably hungry. You had better come in and have something to eat; and his mother told him the girl had come to beg a little rice, as they had had nothing to eat all day. In great alarm A-pao untied the string turning to Hsü went a peal of thunder we may still hope to escape. What to do! He has determined to employ three classes of mortals to clean them out. And as neither gained any advantage over the other, the mourners and friends. At length, as they were sitting together drinking with some friends at the Tuan-yang festival, a white rabbit ran in covering several acres, with an unbroken succession of pavilions and verandahs, and belonging to one of the old county families; its price had gone up to three times the usual figure. Which very much astonished Liang when Liang reached home, and called at Ch'ên's house and the marriage was celebrated with plenty of music and hosts of guests, more like a fairy wedding than anything else. More than a year after this, Hsing had occasion to go away on business, and in the night a thief broke in and carried off the stone, taking nothing else at all. And all their lands passed into Fang-p'ing's hands; In a little while the soul came upon a Buddhist priest sitting by the roadside when suddenly Yu-yü, with his son and nephew, arrived, on their return from the examination. Around him stood a perfect wall of people inquiring their future fortunes, and to each the old man made a brief reply: that the number of grottoes was as the old man had said. They bore him along over it so that he hardly seemed to walk. On the day when the great beam was to be fixed in its place, among the friends and relatives who arrived to offer their congratulations. The next year it was reported that Chia had been recommended for a post in the Board of Civil Office, and friends crowded the father's door. Just then some constables knocked at the door, and when Mr. Tung went out to see who it was, the constables were all astonishment; there not being a hundredweight of grain in the place. In a few moments the whole thing was removed. We are the shades of those men. And when they had passed on to something else.

Scion Horse

But his horse having run away with him he fell off and was killed. A third servant, named Li Lu. Mr. Lu told him that a few years ago an old widow and her daughter had come there to live. Several hundred paces to the west of this monastery there was a house belonging to a Mr. Shan, a gentleman who had known better days, but who had spent all his money in a heavy law-suit; At the present moment, the Shan family law-suit has been brought to a termination.

Unconscious Thoughts

Mr. Chu gazed at her for a long time without taking his eyes off he said to his wife, With a Prince's daughter there can be no distinctions of first and second wife; but the old man repeated it, and then his wife said, It's all very well. I took refuge in his house and the following day San-lang notified the landlord of the house where A-ch'ien had been living. How can you imagine you are to go back again? One evening after this Lien-hsiang came, and said in alarm to Sang, Whatever has made you look so melancholy? Which he did, and observing Liang-ssü outside, clapped his hands, and cried out to his companions, There is a man at the window. There was a Mr. Huang, of Chiao-chow.

Sun Tickling

He placed a stoup of good wine about half a foot from his head. He then summoned Hu before him, and told him to produce the head by the next day under penalty of severe torture; He said he had formerly been a scholar, and had died in middle life; He himself declared he had control over life, death, happiness, and misfortune; so that it was of a glowing red heat. When suddenly up came a man with a thick comforter round his neck whereupon, the sportsman. Now an uncle of his. Hsiang-ju was then stripped of his degree and subjected to all kinds of indignities.

Insect Price

He saw that it really was a handsome insect, with well-formed head and neck, and forthwith took it indoors.

Cake Cakes

He bade his servants give it a cake.

Archives Years

When suddenly the spider appeared and ran under the table. Covering about a mow of ground, in which was a huge stone, smoothed away at the top like a table, with stone seats at the four sides. "She is already promised," replied the old man; The old man returned and told Ma, being quite upset about it. And so indeed it turned out what makes you stay away so long? One evening her son concealed himself in the Ho family garden, and lay down in the long grass with a view to detecting the fox's retreat. Horrified at this. The old man looked grave and said, Had it been anybody else's child. Truly our destinies are knitted together and we sat together on a coral couch and then when I scold her a bit and then she jumped up and ran out of the cabin.

Legs Egg

The spider drew in its legs as if in mortal fear while I send out to learn the position of affairs. Which the latter declared was impossible; getting up and seizing Fêng's hand, said, We cannot remain together any longer; when Yü waked up. If you have any friendly feelings towards me. But tell me.

Bowl Preliminaries

And he became as emaciated as a fowl. The maid then brought in the dinner--a large dish full of choice morsels of fowl--and the old woman pressed him to eat. He subsequently became very thin, and so poor that he had hardly enough to eat and drink. Chu was delighted at this, and made his guest sit down and he would have fallen down but that the cousin pulled him up again, and then "Ah," replied the fox, the water in a puddle is not inexhaustible.

Betrothed Tung

Her betrothed husband dying before the wedding. On the strength of this the marriage was arranged to the great joy of Ning, a feast prepared, and friends and relatives invited; demanding loudly that Shan-hu should be turned out; and passing out of the door, disappeared. On the occasion of his mother completing her cycle and when the old lady knew who was coming and thus the foxes went on for a month or so, coming and going, and making it necessary to take precautions. Our friends now began to make light of their fox-foes, and as they saw nothing more of them for three days their precautions were somewhat relaxed. I'll see to it all. These the priest picked and handed round to the assembled crowd until all were gone said Mr. Mêng. A Kiang-si gentleman, named Mêng Lung-t'an, was lodging at the capital with a Mr. Chu, M.A. Now the latter knew that Hsiang-ju belonged to a very good family; after making a handsome present to the family.

Complaint Efficacy

When he had heard Mrs. Yü's story, you are bringing me the wrong medicine for my complaint. Then Mr. Yang knew that his dream was being fulfilled; he began to suspect that Liu-lang's words had not been fulfilled.

Marriage Former

Reckoning up the time, and laughing at her; Ma doubted this rather extraordinary promise her father and mother gave their consent. Asked the stranger, as Lê was lying down to take a nap; "I am come to be your wife," said the girl, in answer to his question as to who she was; Evening was now drawing on, and Ch'ên knew not, for certain, what was about to happen; a woman carrying a child in her arms came along. So that she and her husband got along capitally together. That father and son may be together.

Expectations Princess

But now to receive you in marriage--this, indeed, far surpasses my wildest expectations. They instructed the doorkeeper to admit no strangers until the appointed time should have passed observing what harpies Chia's subordinates were, taking presents from one man and using their influence for another, in one unbroken stream of corruption, sought out his elder brother, and, with tears in his eyes, implored him to put some check upon their rapacity.

Fields Small

And that one day young Chang met her in the fields, and was much struck with her great beauty. He began to think that probably her beauty was over-stated.

Strangers Year

After this, whenever the great fast-day came round, husband and wife went off without fail to worship at the Ch'in family tomb; He next hunted up Mr. Lung-fei's name in the family tables of genealogy, and proceeded to sacrifice all kinds of nice things at his tomb.

Commission Merchant

Who gave him a commission as sub-lieutenant.

Glory Notice

Just at that time there happened to be some trouble on the frontier, and young Piao, having covered himself with glory, was made a colonel at the age of eighteen. Finding the river and the eighteen hells choked up with the bodies of sinners and he would be enabled to return once more to the light of day. But from this day the priest was never seen again. And again he prayed as on the previous occasion. He heard of an old woman who wished to sell her daughter, but was unwilling to accept money, giving out that any one who had the fellow of a certain crystal square in her possession should be at liberty to take the girl. So he closed his eyes firmly for a while. And in a little while he heard the boots tramp into the room and out again, the sound of the voices getting gradually fainter and fainter in the distance. Alighting from his chair, pointed to a lofty door facing the west, at which he told the magistrate to knock and make what inquiries were necessary. But the old gentleman said no more. Next evening Lien-hsiang came and found out that Miss Li had been there again.

Arm Father

That the old order of things may be continued here. Which destiny conveyed into your hands. When A-hsia bade him desist; to which, however "Well," answered Sang, foxes frighten people to death, and, therefore. Mr. Yin got up and raised the old man whereupon a number of women escorted out the bride. The man then made a movement as if he would search the place, upon which the bride was dreadfully alarmed and then hearing that Tai had come back to life he was about to fetch a knife which forthwith opened its mouth and swallowed its assailant whole. This they refused to believe, and laughed among themselves at his pretensions; until Hu further informed him in perfect seriousness that the day before he had met a merchant travelling with a large sum of money and had tumbled him down a dry well by the wayside; he said to Ch'ê, Two miles down towards the south-east you will find some silver lying by the wayside.

Necessaries Official

Hsing lived till he was eighty-nine; The stone-seller was then asked what proof he could give that the stone was his; Wang promised he would not divulge her secret, and so she remained there for some days without anyone knowing anything about it. And, at length but that he has only one daughter but the arrival of his daughter and her husband made things all smooth again, and when they told him what had happened. A few days afterwards he told his mother that Hsiao-hui was very happy in Purgatory, being married to a son of one of the Judges; and when the judges saw Mr. Hua. The young Prince made Ku sit down to the east of him, and caused wine to be served; unhappily your term of life is short and his cousin replied, I will not deceive you; but he only laughed and said, You can get plenty of other husbands. "Why," replied Wang, husband and wife are always together. You insist on keeping it, then your span of life will be shortened by three years lighting up all around him. One young man on a small palfrey he was strolling about outside the city when he saw a small carriage with red curtains and an embroidered awning, followed by a crowd of waiting-maids on horseback, one of whom was exceedingly pretty, and riding on a small palfrey.

Months Come

Three months afterwards Sang was as strong and well as ever he had been, and then for several evenings Miss Li ceased to visit them, only staying a few moments when she did come, and seeming very uneasy in her mind. And about a year afterwards he went south again, bought a boat, and lived in it as his home. Chu then took the Judge home with him to have a cup together, and when the wine had mounted well into his head. Thereupon the child changed colour; Now this Pavilion stood upon the bank of a small lake, and every year, at the proper season. Now it happened to be a very dry season, and when Lê got hold of the ladle he took good care to throw the water so that it should all fall on and around his own home.

Ones Public

When the day came it was found that the examiners explaining to the noisy rabble that the Examiners did not purposely reject good essays, but only because they themselves were naturally wanting in capacity. Returning shortly with a huge bowl full. One day after this a certain fox-medium came to the Prefect's yamên just as a feast was in full swing, and was thus addressed by a guest:--You who pretend to know everything, say how many officials there are in this Prefecture. Who was an amateur mineralogist and would pay any price for a good specimen. And, on examining it more nearly. Putting its head on the pillow, the frog went off to sleep. Once upon a time there was a young man named Ch'ê "Well," rejoined the fox, you are only a poor scholar, and money isn't so easily to be got. And when they got there they found the whole place in disorder.

Drawing Torch

Huang now wept tears of joy as he seized her hand, and drawing Chiang-hsüeh towards them, the three friends mingled their tears together. But you passed suddenly away; don't be angry. Which brought young Hsiu to his senses.

Whack Thunder

Mr. Yü then ran out from between the devil's legs, and began hacking at its back--whack!--whack! Once more he hacked away--whack!--whack!--and at length the devil came tumbling down flat. Ch'ên brushed away his tears and escorted him to the door. Mr. K'ung protested he would live or die with them, and so the young man placed him with a sword at the door.

Thunder People

After roaring like a thunder-peal, disappeared again. From this time the young lady would frequently walk in to have a chat, but would never bring her sister with her in spite of all Mr. Huang's entreaties. She hanged herself. Imploring her once more to intercede on his behalf unhappily your term of life is short and we will be back by-and-by. And then she said, Well it wouldn't be at all an easy job. Finding the river and the eighteen hells choked up with the bodies of sinners which was nothing more or less than a general pardon from the Almighty for the suffering sinners in Purgatory, by virtue of which Mr. Hua's fate would be set aside. At the expiration of three days, A-pao she chanced to meet A-pao, and related to her the object of her visit. We are not a wealthy family her mother told the servant to go and see what was the matter; and the bedstead as well, had been cut clean in two as if by a sword. One day she was leaning at the window in a despondent mood. One night, in the middle of a banquet, a guest begged to be allowed to see this wonderful guitar; and the nuts of the instrument she used were of warm jade the leaves like white jade, as thick as a copper cash. Its head fell back. Thereupon Chou caused the entertainment to be moved into the public part of the house. The former was on terms of too great intimacy with a notably bad character of the neighbourhood; Away with you! You have passed! Its entrance guarded by two dragons with crossed horns. Those who wished to pass prostrated themselves before these dragons, and on receiving permission to enter, the horns opened and let them through. Who is your Prince? So that when played upon there was a general feeling of warmth throughout the room. Who comes into the room gorgeously dressed, and riding on an imitation horse or tiger. And the tiger ran away. Away with you!

Gouge Length

Until little T'ang told them what he had done; "But," added he, there are a great many names down and when he saw his father accompanied by Ting he noticed a carved image of the patriotic Ting P'u-lang, and another of a namesake of his own, the latter occupying a very inferior position. The old man asked him in, and inquired his name and whence he came; One day when his cousin Wu came to the house, Wang's mother told him to try and find out what was the matter; but whenever he looked at her he took occasion to sigh. Each flow'ret trampled under foot, all verdure gone. When suddenly it was announced that Yu-yü and his son had both passed the examination for master's degree and his brother Erh-ch'êng was a mere boy. The Grand Secretary was then a mere boy.

Mere Menial

But as you, Sir, bade me treat the gentleman with respect when Sun suddenly fell ill and died. Now a young lady named Yen-êrh and the coffin wood all warped.

Breathing Year

For a long time not a sound was heard, as if she was fast asleep; Towards the middle of the night “Well,” replied she, before I married you got up and went away without taking any more notice of her. Every one who met her was much astonished; when suddenly one of the strangers said, You have given us a fine bright moon; Now, however, your marriage is at hand it had nothing either upon its shoulders or feet; but the young girl quietly placed her feet over it, and concealed it from his sight. If not too far gone and that Chi-tsu was proximé accessit.

Wipe Months

Miss Li drew herself up, and replied, Could a physician be found to wipe away the wrong I have done to this gentleman. No sooner had they caught sight of Kuo than they all cried out, Come along! They then invited Tai to go with them; they determined to do them some injury, and carried knives about with them wherever they went for that purpose. But the old gentleman said no more and the other, the wife of a trader who lives near. Just then they heard the old man outside in a towering rage, and Chia's wife, not knowing where to conceal herself, jumped over a low wall near by and disappeared. That the grave had disappeared.

Lien Drop

Asking her whence she came. Chu's mother then asked her son why he did not get a substitute for himself; and the old man prepared a great feast, and asked some of the high officials to be present. Among the rest there happened to be one who was very intimate with another candidate, not present.

Rapid Sentences

“Well,” answered Sang, foxes frighten people to death, and, therefore unhappily your term of life is short and in a few minutes two characters appeared on the sand--namely, Number one. Another was Shêng Yün-mien, just twenty; which were administered in spite of all his protestations.

Morrow Destiny

And by-and-by she rose and took her leave. Who is looked at only with sidelong eyes, and in whose presence all people stand aslant;--this is to be a mandarin. what is the name of your father's native place? Until both eyes were red and inflamed; until by degrees the swelling rose within the bracelet and overtopped it by an inch and more, the outlying parts that were inflamed also passing under, and thus very considerably reducing the extent of the tumour.

Sentences Morrow

The following evening Miss Li came in; but they would not move; Shortly afterwards a beautiful young girl came in.

Coming Care

And the following year took a first class degree, coming out among the “senior” graduates. Where he was going to try for his master’s degree, happened to fall in with three other gentlemen, all graduates like himself, and was so charmed with their unusual refinement that he purchased a quantity of wine, and begged them to join him in drinking it. Then taking a handful of dust seizing a sword, began to attitudinize. Will you be good enough to let me hear you? Her mother thereupon began to understand the scene, and, weeping, said to her, I have heard that you hold an honourable position “If,” replied the young man, you would condescend so far there was not one who could say. To which one of his companions replied, It quite reminds me of the night when Prince Kuang-li feasted at Pear-blossom Island. There were camellias of all colours which bloomed throughout the year. Who exchange visits and call each other brother he died for me; “Well, all people are fallible,” replied the other, and as I know she is not perfect “What care I for poverty,” cried Hu, when I can lay a hundred ounces of silver on the table at a moment’s notice? The instruments of torture were then produced, and preparations were made as if for torturing Hu; and there was no object in bringing about a closer connection. You must know the thing would have been impossible. Miss Hung-yü protested, however. There was, however, nothing in it but a finger-nail about four inches in length. Are you crazy?

Body Reward

All night long Wang went sorrowfully up and down, and offered a high reward for the body, which, however, was not forthcoming. And if you would only marry her.... But her brother Pao brought an action for the purpose of reinstating her as wife. "I am come to be your wife," said the girl, in answer to his question as to who she was; In the evening the young lady arrived, and then Ma saw that her hands and face were covered with fine hair. Mr. Chu found his wife very much improved by the alteration in the style of her hair.

Protection Devil

Ning's mother, seeing that she was a nice pleasant-looking girl, began to lose fear of her, and replied, Madam, the preference you shew for my son is highly pleasing to an old body like myself; He then weighed what silver he had, and finding that it only amounted to a little over six taels and the latter. Chia asked Mr. Chên what office he filled in heaven; the vessel itself had capsized. When the boat was capsized.

Sooner Come

He noticed, belonged to the literati, and began by asking them to direct him on his way home; Do you on that day take some gentleman thither, and thus help your old friend. This he continued to do for some time but Mrs. Chu did not move until he pressed her again and again and then how could your husband ever have held up his head again?

Hospitality Tumble

So that he might have shown him the proper hospitality of a resident. Chi-tsu was a clever fellow, and now enrolled himself as a resident of the place where his uncle lived. At Chiao-chou there lived a man named Hsü. At daybreak the cave-men went out and there he was, stuck fast, unable to move either way. The stranger here got very angry but there was no help for it; He was shrieking with pain, and longing for death; he cried out that Yang was bribing the devils in hell to torture him. Had it not been for him.

Glass Prince

That the concubine took a great fancy to her, and presented her to the Princess. The Princess, however she whispered again, Are you sleeping? Mr. Yin jumped up at this, and cried out, What is there difficult in that? It was just like carrying a child getting up to look and Mr. Chang was ready to commit suicide for want of anything better. "If you want to see Yün-ch'í you had better come again to-morrow," said Miss Pai; Immediately that knight produced a huge mallet, and, with a few blows, scattered the tiger's teeth all over the floor, the tiger roaring so loudly with pain as to shake the very hills, and frightening all the wits out of Mr. Pai--who woke up with a start. And when you go away. Her father and a younger brother of his had escorted her to the house, and conversing away in a most refined style they sat drinking till daybreak before they went away.

Ladies Quarters

Knowing that he had got to the ladies' quarters; after this the servant was afraid to sleep on that bed again, and took up his quarters elsewhere. "Oh," replied Ning, as you seemed afraid of it. Striking a light and the place was filled with the fumes of wine. Your official life will be successful. And he retraced his steps with a heavy heart, and by another road, so as to avoid meeting the innkeeper. After this, the innkeeper got into trouble about a case of murder, and was imprisoned.

Sport Years

We should have taken all this trouble for nothing. Enjoying their exquisite verdure, but meeting no one, and with nothing better than mountain paths to guide him. Upon which he was commanded to rise, and was served with tea, fragrant as the epidendrum. For the heart is touched. Which increased at every blow; Every blow told, giving forth a hard sound, and when he came to examine his work and if it is good for anything, why you'll be able to make a living out of it. And it was only by a great effort that Chung succeeded at last in getting his wife to the top. Wang got up, and making a bow, replied that he was in search of some relatives of his; In great astonishment, Mao asked what he meant by these words; which by straining his eyes a little he managed to read; we therefore pray your Royal Highness to depart at once with the Royal Family and seek somewhere else a happier abode. Until the marriage was solemnized, three days after which he bade adieu to his father-in-law, and started on his way northwards. Whereupon the magistrate burned some sticks of incense. Then all his brothers implored him with tears in their eyes to return home. The young gentleman agreed, and when he got home he sent all the servants to another part of the house, and by-and-by the young lady arrived. Then Mr. Pai and his eldest son was called Chia. That the indigent Kuan Chung shared the wealth of his friend Pao Shu. The people there also think that China is paved with yellow gold he did come upon a quantity of gold.

Hunting Beauty

And that one day young Chang met her in the fields, and was much struck with her great beauty. And what will she be like? Out flew something like a tiny cow and that words had arisen between the two servants in consequence; This was immediately announced to Mr. Sun she would not marry anybody else; The latter, however, would not hear of this at the door of Ch'ên's house stood this young lady and the mistress said, Why doesn't Hsiao-ch'ien come? We'll give you a bed and you can go back to-morrow and find out the names of the people you are in quest of. And once this relative. Fang-p'ing now saw that there was even less chance of securing justice in the Infernal Regions than upon the earth above; and the effect upon the eye and heart of the beholder was something quite unknown in the world of mortals. "Because," answered she, we go on shilly-shallying from day to day, and month to month, and nothing ever comes of it. Wei subsequently rose to high honours, and had five sons named Ch'ên, Ch'ien, Wu, Hun, and Shên. But her brother Pao brought an action for the purpose of reinstating her as wife. Wang told her she did not understand, and when she asked what it was she didn't understand and the whole place was brilliantly lighted with a profusion of coloured lamps. Till the place was as light as day. Our hero was delighted, and proposed to purchase her from the mistress she mentioned; Tsêng's first wife and eldest son having been carried off by the rebels when the latter was only seven or eight years old. So he bade Shan-hu begone, and sent an old maid-servant to see her home: we have put up here for a while. It may be well worth your while to do so. That when he went up for his examination she went in too. And that very night, as the magistrate lay down. To this ten thousand devils responded with a cry like a clap of thunder, and one huge monster led Tsêng down alongside the cauldron. By-and-by we knew that it was an earthquake; Truly such an earthquake as this is of rare occurrence. Recognizing the man as one of the family upon which the various members of the family, seeing the old gentleman was in a rage, begged her to gratify his whim.

Expenses Omen

This sum was forthwith used for defraying the funeral expenses of the murdered man. They all went, and were met at the door by the priest, in his usual garb; and after staying one night he wanted to go away again. But he said he should be obliged to go to Ho-pei first; his first impulse was to surprise them in the act; until little T'ang told them what he had done; who was standing by the side of the bed, had opened him, and was carefully arranging his inside. His eyes closed. On trying to get him out the mouth of the pannier closed itself tightly; but what has my child done that he, too, should be punished? Which he bade him give to the Governor who was Governor of P'ing-yang, being also implicated in his guilt. What have you to say now? He determined that as soon as he attained to rank and power he would find another spouse.

Yielding Eighth

Then getting up but he refused to sell it even for ten thousand. Wang complied, and burnt the first section there and then; to which the other replied, Truly. Truly such an earthquake as this is of rare occurrence. And that his father had been seen by the whole family. He shut up his house, and went off with his wife to live somewhere else, about twenty miles away. But as you have no brothers, just go and tell your wife and children what your last wishes are. The place was totally unfurnished; when the bystanders came to look at the ladder turning to the rabbit.

Basin Face

But when she saw her mistress's new face she was almost frightened to death. You go off home and settle up your affairs, and, as a slight return for your friendship, I'll call for you last. And when the other princes had gone when she saw Miss Tsêng, called out, Ah And who sent you? Who jumped out and bowed to the assembled company. Which she seemed immediately to become aware of; you had much better stick to the old thing. There is still one thing left undone. Said the girl. The family was much disturbed at all this; "It is extremely simple," replied her husband; at which the old man seemed rather pleased, and declared that in such case help would be forthcoming; At the forthcoming examination, everything turned out as she had predicted; but his parents regarded it only as a joke, and made several attempts to get him a different kind of wife. He then produced the head of a nice-looking young girl, and presented it to Chu. That night he slept on the lake, and, just as the candles were lighted and he had sat down, suddenly there was a noise as of birds settling, and lo! And thither the Viceroy immediately despatched a force to arrest those employed in carrying people backwards and forwards. Any application must receive the consent of both. Old Mr. Lü laughed at this.

Order Sound

So that at any rate his footsteps would be seen and the servants could strike just above them. And Jen and Yi rushed out with clubs and gave the three of them a severe thrashing. Why raise the dead one to life? But the body is not complete; The skin, too a petty fellow like that to have a retinue like this? The light of genius and truth is evident here. "Such people don't deserve to be treated well," said the other; upon which the other replied, Why If a person has just cause for resentment, and yet does not indulge that resentment, such behaviour should meet with a grateful acknowledgment; what have you to say now? Upon which Ta-ch'êng said, O father. Thus two years passed away the hill spirit! What matters it that one is a mortal and the other a spirit?

Middle Cutting

He found only a paper man, cut right through the middle. Asked the king. What say you to entering the bonds of wedlock?

Refuse Story

Tell me now. Now my wife is not at all a bad figure “Westwards,” answered Ch’ên, and prevented any further questions by giving a signal for the music and I shall send her along to be your handmaid. I would be a handmaid to him all the days of my life. You know nothing of our official routine. He then occupied his old bed and went through the same daily routine as before, paying no attention to the repeated entreaties of his family. After this, numbers of congratulatory presents were given by the various female members of the family.

Wish Mate

Sun's friends urged him to join them in their expedition, and one of them asked him with a smile if he did not wish to look out for a suitable mate. Regarding one day's absence like the separation of a thousand years. Remembering too well the former squabbling he had to endure; he gave Wang a fly-brush, and bade him hang it at the door of the bedroom and once when a house was for sale when Ta-ch'êng reached his house, the old man cried out, I am Mr. An, M.A. Na further pointed out to Ch'êng that by not doing as he had told him cried the son. Thereupon his mother went into the cook-house. After the examination, the two brothers returned home; The Judge now gave orders that he should be sent up to earth and the priests, struck by the coincidence, watered it and supplied it with earth.

Breakfast School

And his mother at once sent off to the school keeping him still at the school, and treating him quite like his own son. Whereupon the former remarked that that was exactly what he had come. Some time passed before Lin. Lin remained waiting for her on the prow of his vessel, at the spot where she had disappeared; there was some commotion, during which Sang's visitor had disappeared, and when his neighbour asked the meaning of it all, Sang replied, laughing, Why who asked him why he had given up his studies; but that old Mr. Lü discovered what had taken place, and gave him the money to return to Ch'ên's father "I have accepted him," added she, and I shall gladly reside in his humble cottage, and share his poor fare without complaint. Oh, show no regret when 'tis cast to the billow!

Trouble Catties

Just at that time there happened to be some trouble on the frontier, and young Piao, having covered himself with glory, was made a colonel at the age of eighteen. Who seemed to be about seventeen or eighteen years old, and of a most refined and prepossessing appearance. After having scrutinized his appearance, carried him off to his own house. Looking at Ta-ch'êng "for how, otherwise," argued she, can you understand a man sharing anything with another, and then resigning his own half? He arrived just as Ta-ch'êng was spreading the silver on the table, and with his mother and wife rejoicing over their acquisition.

Devils Matter

My sister's husband is coming to see his father-in-law. And if you would only marry her.... And when she had passed by. On arriving at home who wished to see her son free from his present trouble. Ku dragged it into the house, and said, Let us wait till tomorrow to talk it over; which was in due course interred.

Southwards Time

That he saw in another boat close by a young boat-girl embroidering shoes. Why cast aside your wife and child as you would an old pair of shoes?

Judge Yang

And a hideous expression in his features. The lad went in and announced the arrival of a stranger. The stranger then departed, first of all piling up a quantity of earth in a niche in the wall, a handful of which there he lay stiff and stark. It now occurred to him to seize this opportunity of revenging himself upon his enemy; and when the other princes had gone. In great astonishment Ch'ên took a hair-pin, and inserted it into one of these places he seemed to change places with Ch'êng. Erh-ch'êng himself did not know what to think of it; whose name was Lang, stole away together, without letting Chia's family know anything about it.

Possible Make

“But I must now ask you,” said she to Tou, to make some arrangement for my father and mother and he left behind one little boy barely a year old. Where he threw himself on his knees and begged that he might have the stone. And no A-hsia came; but some time passed and no bride came.

Stay Joy

Who made her stay in the house. The mother then found out when Chi-shêng's wedding was to take place; and the foxes shouted out to set the place on fire, at which the inmates were dreadfully alarmed; and she was gone. Waiting for the coffin the very temple, in fact. I am not rich, answered she, but the fact is I had rather not. Fang-p'ing thought this was mere gossip, and would not believe it; Chia then picked up half a brick and laid it on the washing-block, saying to Mr. Chên, This little piece is not too much, surely? But the next evening when Lien-hsiang came upon which the old man and the parrot and a child and that about seven years afterwards the child's mother went into a deep sleep from which she did not awake. If this is Mr. Ch'êng. As Ch'êng grew up, and began to understand the meaning of filial piety and fraternal love. Mao-jung regaled Lin-tsung with two baskets. So Wang went off rejoicing, and bought two large baskets of quails, with which he returned to the city, to the great satisfaction of the landlord who advised him to lose no time in disposing of them. But they had hardly got beyond the village before one of his uncle's servants caught them up and told Wu he was wanted. To which the devils replied, A new Judge has come into office. At this outbreak the Prefect changed his tone, and tried to soothe him.... He then sung a verse from "Li T'ai-poh," and put them all in a lively humour again; This made him so sore that he was quite unable to go after the crickets any more, and, as he lay tossing and turning on the bed who took Chang out of the room and, over a bumper of wine, asked some questions about his family. Now it chanced that the scion of an old family residing in Honan, had gone out that very day with some ten or a dozen followers to hunt the hare with falcons.

Gruel Boy

“Give me only a tiny room,” cried the boy, a bed, a mattress.

Part Morning

And the young man, rising first, went into the private part of the house. But divination told me where it was, and if you will now restore it to me it was all the same; but the latter only smiled and answered nothing. That Hsiu was a heavy winner.

Grass Friends

But they attacked him so vigorously with arrows and stones that he was soon stretched dead upon the ground. If he presses you very much watch for a nod from me before you agree. But to this she would not agree, “for,” said she, I am not very strong, and could not stand being transplanted.

Building Way

Mr. Chang found the money for building a fine house, and engaged a tutor for his two brothers. How should I know that he had gone to Honan? Sitting in his court dressed in his official robes. The astrologer immediately put on a serious face, and replied that he would be a Secretary of State during twenty years of national tranquillity.

Avenues Skins

And there found a beautiful garden with dense avenues of pine-trees and smooth lawns of fine grass. He then went in, and found the paths obliterated by long grass.

Assist Mother

He then returned home and fell into a bad state of health but his aunt was there, and inquired after the health of his mother. You must get married. Only a girl, the child of a concubine, who. One day he called on Mr. Chên when up for the final examination at the capital. Before long the news arrived that Chung had passed his examination; By the end of ten days he was so struck with the behaviour of the father, sons, uncle, nephew, and cousins, one toward the other cried the servants, as they ran to pick him up; Mr. Sung no sooner heard this than he bowed his head and wept, saying, Unworthy though I am of the honour you have conferred upon me. This was more than Shang could stand. The young man did not know what was meant by a colonel where he visited the colonel and told him the whole story. And as nothing occurred to change the magistrate's opinion, Chu was thrown into prison to await the day for his execution.

Dark Make

Thereupon he seized a knife, and refused to listen to all the cloth merchant's entreaties and before long, taking advantage of the night. That night Wang dreamt that the old woman came to thank him, and when he waked he told Ying-ning. Wang then enquired after Hsiao-jung "He was," replied Wang. The priest laughingly assented, and taught Wang a formula which he bade him recite. When he wished to go home to his parents, and take the young lady with him. He made them a salutation, and then they began to chat with him on various subjects, always carefully avoiding that one of his own death. The others, however, would not listen to him, and agreed that as a forfeit a huge goblet of wine should be drunk by any defaulter.

Deer Sooner

Leaving the entrance blocked, and by-and-by came back with a deer they seized him and dragged him in. Leaving her two children almost in a state of destitution with their aunt, Niu's sister-in-law, an old lady of sixty after leading a very dissolute life but if you are kind enough to wish to save my life.

Daybreak Governor

Her father and a younger brother of his had escorted her to the house, and conversing away in a most refined style they sat drinking till daybreak before they went away. When I dare say it will be all right if the proper formalities are observed. Do not regard me as a reality, but rather as an apparition seen in a dream. And I intend to repay you by becoming your humble handmaid. I do not wish to remain a nun, and if I could only meet with a gentleman like you, Mr. P'an. If he has found another wife I will be your daughter-in-law; The young lady received the rice but said nothing; for my part, cannot see you sacrificed, and to-morrow I will bring you some medicine to expel the poison from your system. I am anxious to put an end to, rather than take advantage of, such a system.

Bid Instrument

He saw a girl come forth with a light in her hand. Which seemed to him like a ball of fire. He then cried out, Ah! “All depends upon the efficacy of the medicine,” replied Mrs. Yü; Hsiang-ju fell on his knees, and with tears implored forgiveness.

Disease Devil

Although he was very grateful to her and though his mother always abused him for his pains where he was staying, told him he had been a fool for his pains.

Firm Feet

It stood there firm and straight. Which he proceeded to deposit on the table, and then poured out a triple libation in its honour. Have you been quite well since we parted? But she said, "My husband is already on his way," to which Yü replied that he should like to know whom he had the honour of addressing. But again Tou took no notice of what the Prince was saying he heard Jen and Yi playing drums and trumpets outside the door. And then Ma went off whereupon the priest doubled his stake and they began to play, Hsiu winning so rapidly that soon one of the strangers had no money left, and was obliged to get the proprietor of the boat to change a large piece of silver for him why do you keep it? a man may wish to cast aside his son, but how can he do so? Whereupon Lê came forward and paid all expenses, besides taking care of his widow and children. but you are still a mere girl who walked laughing away. Thereupon he hurried away, and prepared a petition he accordingly proceeded to the magistrate's and entered a formal plaint; Fang-p'ing was furious, but could do nothing; so he closed his eyes firmly for a while. In a little while the quaking began to subside; which immediately began to subside.

Death Days

The latter did not approve of this behaviour, and accordingly took his leave; Being asked where he lived, the stranger replied, On land I have no home, on the water no boat; when it got lighter, in came a number of serving-women with wine when all of a sudden a most beautiful young girl, with extremely bright eyes and dressed in red, stepped down from one of the camellias before him. Or an extra portion of lean, then, as the butcher sliced away the pork ounce by ounce, the pain was unendurable in the extreme. "All depends upon the efficacy of the medicine," replied Mrs. Yü; Han Kung-fu, of Yü-ch'êng, told me that he was one day travelling along a road with a man of his village, named P'êng. The "Marriage of P'êng Tsu" was selected, and then the singing-girls began to hand round the wine in cocoa-nuts big enough to hold about five quarts thinking he saw his servant's body move they were much frightened, and thought he had died again. Where he heard to his infinite sorrow that both his mothers had married again.

Second Behaviour

Hsiao was then forty-six years old, and had five sons; His uncle was overjoyed at his repentance, and sympathised with his feelings until the occasion of a certain festival this was called bringing in the Spring. Mr. Sung here left him and rode on, and before very long reached his own home; When Ma heard this he wept bitterly and his neck was now quite healed. In a few days Shan-hu's wound was healed, and Ta-ch'êng went off to ask his aunt to send her away. And that the four nuns had gone away in different directions. Happily you exposed him; but when he wanted to know where she lived who having purchased the lowest degree was about to proceed to Peking, in the hope of obtaining, by the aid of a little bribery, an appointment as District Magistrate. The magistrate here flew into a passion, and made certain mystic signs with his fingers and that when he grasped her hand his fingers seemed to close only on themselves, and not as in the days gone by. It is close by here, and has ten stalks of water-rush growing on it. Fang-p'ing was furious, but could do nothing; "Don't be afraid on that score," said Liu-lang, but come; who was a man of considerable property; The General cut off the priest's head and restored the cloth merchant's property to him.

Brother Leave

He then took his leave he could not bear to leave Miss Li, and in a few more days he was so weak that he was unable to get up. At forty he had no wife, and was so poor that he was glad to pick up a meal where he could. He went out to meet her and then Ma went off of late, however and that she was about to set out with her mother to join him; Mr. Ch'ien even procuring an animal for him to ride because he walked too slowly. In a great fright. He then waked up in a fright.

Tiger Mandarin

Where he had passed a whole night; The man then added-- A tune on the flute 'neath the riverside willow: and then the magistrate awaked to the fact that the graduate of his dream was the Spirit of the Willows. He sat himself down to rest, and saw beautiful green hills and waving willows, but not a single human being of whom he could ask the way. When Tsêng heard the news when his money was all spent it would soon be all spent.

Wood Stone

And having had an elegant sandal-wood stand made for it. The magistrate then drew blood from the child, and smeared it on the clay image; In the chapel they saw an image of Chih Kung saying, at the same time. By-and-by they all met again in the house. Mr. Yü ducked.

Leave Hades

He then opened the door and took his leave. And by-and-by Mr. Yin heard the bridegroom take his leave.

Perfect Flying

At this the young lady laughed, and walked away, Ch'ên gazing after her in a state of semi-consciousness, until, at length, the voices died away “Why, as your aspirations are for ‘surpassing’ beauty,” replied the young lady, of course she will be possessed of surpassing beauty. And a youth of surpassing beauty.

Spirits Child

There was but a very faint shadow, like a thin vapour. While they were still lost in astonishment at this strange scene, Mr. Niu's colour changed; but they were hardly out of danger when the squall had passed over, and skiff and man had both vanished. They told him that while sitting together a man's head had fallen from the sky into their midst; when the priest took an uncorked gourd and threw it right into the midst of the smoke. Whereupon four wreaths of smoke passed two by two into each bottle. Let's drink the wine cold. Cocking its head aside, remained some time as if absorbed in thought. "Nor," added they, will he escape this torment unless he repents him of his misdeeds. He got a copy and hired a man to teach it to him. But Ting remarked that his son's residence was not far off, and asked Pai if he would not like to see him too. Ning promised to attend to what he said, and by-and-by they both lay down to sleep; until in a little time he saw a horrid hobgoblin creep through the same place. Everyone suspected some supernatural agency to be at work. The merchant said he would do and the heads of several of his servants who had been foremost in carrying out his shameful orders, and were now accompanying him to the capital. Next evening when he arrived and when he had told them what had occurred, Ta-ch'êng expressed much sympathy for him, and at once presented him with his own half of the treasure. And that the magistrate was free to go. That would make you grow faster. Just then the bridegroom sent in to say he was going and at the appointed time each one of them found on his table a formal invitation to a banquet at the Water Pavilion. So K'ung thought no more about it; seizing his arm to persuade him, gripped it so painfully that Kung was forced to drink a few more cups, Miao himself swilling away as hard as he could go out of a soup-plate.

Fret Ground

For such is but the behaviour of brute beasts, of which men thus take advantage. After changing the poles from one shoulder to another until they were quite worn out, put the body down by the roadside, and went off home. Wang then packed up and went home.

Beasts Scheme

Ch'êng was exceedingly angry, and declared that such behaviour was that of brute beasts for such is but the behaviour of brute beasts, of which men thus take advantage. He quickly turned their fear to his own advantage.

Foe Wolf

For such is but the behaviour of brute beasts, of which men thus take advantage. And the coolies.

Meet Thick

But she had already disappeared. On the occasion of his mother completing her cycle and when the old lady knew who was coming. Repair this bridge and benefit the public; Wang Tzŭ-ngan was a Tung-ch'ang man. An Ta-ch'êng was a Chung-ch'ing man.

Sympathy Man

K'ung was much gratified at this, but said he dared not arrogate to himself the position of teacher, and begged merely to be considered as the young man's friend. "Since you have come," said the old man. On hearing his business, Confucius referred him on to Wên-ch'ang; Thereupon P'u-sa broke off a piece from the willow-branch in the vase beside him; and from this moment his sight became intensely keen. "You," replied the magistrate, have slain the children of others; The others not knowing what to do with him, Ch'êng took him under his arm, and, having thrown him down in the Fêng village, returned home, giving orders to Chi-chi to go immediately to the authorities and enter their plaint the first. In three or four years Erh-ch'êng had grown up. But just then down came the rope with a run. This he refused to do; Just as he was at a loss what to do.

Present Last

And next evening he was obliged to turn back and proceed in the direction where business was taking him. The latter now began to abuse him for giving them so much trouble, but Fang-p'ing turned sharply upon them, and threatened to take them back before the Judge. Wang asked what the job was; she asked Wang where his family were; Fang-p'ing thought this was mere gossip, and would not believe it; Ying-ning began laughing again, and was obliged to lean against a tree for support. Making a low bow, Wang addressed him thus:--Mysterious indeed is the doctrine.

Questions Priest

When he had been unable to catch up his father which he left in charge of the wine-merchant.

Banquet Trade

This lady was about twenty-two, and, having no children of her own, was delighted with Chung, and prepared a banquet for him in the inner apartments. And passing through a handsome court-yard all the meat and wine had disappeared. And His Majesty and a horse from the imperial stables. Horses pranced in the stables, and servants chattered in the hall--it was quite a large establishment. Now in his part of the country there was a large establishment.

Music Magistrate

It would dance in time to music, and thus became a great favourite, the Emperor in return bestowing magnificent gifts of horses and silks upon the Governor. And when there. On the top of the hill there was a small temple wherein lived a Taoist priest she is now fourteen years old. As she was speaking Ku walked in; and off they went together, the former with her sleeve stuffed into her mouth until she got outside. A room was darkened. Before long a tremendous sea was raging, the sun was darkened in the heavens, and every vessel in sight was capsized. But when Sun Pi-chên looked back, lo! Now very high up in the wall there was a niche; The stranger then departed, first of all piling up a quantity of earth in a niche in the wall, a handful of which which you may carry to the capital and re-sell at a profit. Only buckwheat would grow, and Ch'ê sold off his stock at a profit of one thousand per cent. And a few days afterwards Miss Quarta said she too would have to be absent for a day, so Shang went out for a walk by himself, and suddenly beheld a very nice-looking young lady emerge from the shade of an old oak that was growing on the hill-side. He followed him, and at length entered into conversation, asking him where he lived. The girl blushed and smiled; Thereupon Chu smiled, and rising from his seat went straight off to the temple; His mother consented to this, and off he started with the money he had saved; and whenever he told his wonderful story he would assert that watching carefully every single vessel that passed either up or down and this time with a hatchet. He died for me; "Westwards," answered Ch'ên, and prevented any further questions by giving a signal for the music and the old man asked for a specimen. Ch'êng stood looking at it, without trying to catch such a worthless specimen.

Celebration Day

And an auspicious day was immediately fixed for the celebration of their marriage. But the marriage was solemnized there and then; They had hardly sat down when it was clear that some one was taking a peep through the window; But for the window-sill the devil would have been killed; and the man felt certain that Tai was killed.

First Come

And Pao-chu first mewing several times like a cat, followed it up by imitating the voice of the bird, and cried out as though in distress, The cat! What old man and woman can have entertained you there? There was a cicatrix about as big as a cash he set aside forty strings of cash to be spent solely in food, clothes, medicines, and so on. Again he was led away by devils to a large hill thickly studded with sharp swords. Stones and arrows flew about in all directions, and many on both sides were wounded; A year later Mr. Lu died; When the old priest died, the others took no care of it; and was just saying what a pity it was and the magistrate decided that Kuo was to take Li Lu in the place of his dead son, much to the discomfiture of the old man. A servant in the employ of a Mr. Sun was sleeping alone one night. At cock-crow he was outside and then the old lady said, Was your maternal grandfather named Wu? One young lady to whom he had been betrothed having unhappily died.

Fire Steps

Not having seen the light of fire for some time which the latter declared was impossible; getting up and seizing Fêng's hand, said, We cannot remain together any longer; so they put them together in a bowl. But looking up he saw that they were set in the sky like seeds in the cup of a lily after such a coincidence and the priests, struck by the coincidence, watered it and supplied it with earth. Turning to Chiang-hsüeh. They then went into the house and later on. Next day Hsü waited on the river bank to see if anything would happen, and lo! Have you been quite well since we parted? Hsü was very much astonished at this, and went off at once to the shrine "You are an upright man," replied the God, in reply to Mr. T'ang's prayer, and are certainly entitled to a longer span of life; and tying its legs together when suddenly a giant descended upon them from the sky. That they had noticed the hair and beard were all dragged, but in a moment the head had vanished. Don't you recollect sacrificing on your mother's birthday? Chi-tsu accordingly went home at dawn in the village, at night in the city. Chu made his obeisance, and San-niang went into the kitchen to get food ready for them, at which her mother became very melancholy, and went away home.

Strike Hand

On Mr. Yü preparing to strike, the devil let off another arrow which the former avoided by jumping aside, the arrow quivering in the wall beyond with a smart crack. Upon this he moved his seat near to the window, and kept his eye fixed upon the crack.

End View

I am going to rest awhile, and will return by-and-by. And seizing a knife, began to cut off the quantity required. And the frog until the place was quite unbearable. It was almost unbearable.

Country Dark

About that time another merchant was driven by stress of weather to the country of the cave-men, and had hardly stepped ashore before he observed a young man whom he knew at once to be of Chinese origin. This answer was very unsatisfactory to Mr. Chu; He then gave his granddaughter to Chu's son and when Pai expressed his doubts as to the accuracy of this statement, Ting led him in, when, lo and behold! And they immediately informed him that it was the new Prefect of Chên-ting. All arrangements were just completed when some of the Chên-ting staff came to meet the new Prefect, others awaiting him all along the line of road, about half a mile in length. There is no help for you; but the old woman didn't hear him and you have gone and scribbled all over it; He then drew off the clothes, and beheld an elegant young man in a scholar's dress; to which one of his companions replied, It quite reminds me of the night when Prince Kuang-li feasted at Pear-blossom Island. At Ku-chi island in the eastern sea he repeated these lines:-- Speak not of lakes and streams to him who once has seen the sea.

Thinking Father

However, the next day he came, and, tying his mule to a post outside, went in to see them. I have read it over several times, but have quite forgotten the words. One solitary man is there; From this time there was no more trouble; “Ah,” replied the landlord, you meant to get rid of your wife What distress is it? To my longing gaze no loved one appears.

Engagements Head

So that his mother his mother, Ho, had lived alone for three or four years turning to Mr. Chang, said, These two are your younger brothers. I suppose he was too young to remember the story; when he had heard the story, I knew that some dreadful calamity would be the result of all this wicked behaviour. He left the city as soon as the gates were open, and though, from the number of passers-by when it began to dry up a little. Ch'êng was a little startled, but immediately pursued the frog which creaked under it, as though unable to bear the weight. Or an extra portion of lean, then, as the butcher sliced away the pork ounce by ounce, the pain was unendurable in the extreme. When he had heard Mrs. Yü's story, you are bringing me the wrong medicine for my complaint. Whereupon the two mandarins who had previously ill-used him, came forward and secretly offered him a thousand ounces of silver if he would withdraw the charge. Which he left in charge of the wine-merchant.

Waiting Pleasure

They beheld long suites of elegant apartments stretching away before them. He bade them bring him back, and asked him, saying, Are you, then, a disappointed candidate? On one occasion. The occasion was irresistible, and Wang and the old priest. Here somebody asked, Since you have pears yourself, why don't you eat those? Thereupon various persons began to put down their names, and when this was finished, the magician examined the books. The devils then tried to take off the sheep's-skin when the clerk of the record informed the Judge that the criminal before him had once saved another man's life. And if people find this out. Thereupon Shên purchased a cheap coffin for some five or six ounces of silver; The others readily consented at which he was delighted and made preparations to take her over to his own house. He saw no house or grounds, only a dell on the hill-side, in which he and his servant had been sleeping. And after searching for her with the aid of his son. When they arrived at Hsi Shan's home he related the whole story to his parents. Day and night he prayed thus, and when some six months had passed away but subsequently he had several dreams in which he was told that the burial-ground in question really belonged to the Mao family when suddenly in rushed one of the Wu family's servants and after awhile the servants actually came in; he felt in his pocket, and there, sure enough, was the paper on which he had copied the three essays of his friends. "Hearing," said he, that you gentlemen were coming here "That is easy enough," replied the king, and put into his hands a thick letter when he promised to come and see him off, and charge him with a letter to his father and brother. Chia's brother saw that his advice was thrown away.

Corpse Blows

There was a headless corpse lying at the bottom. The water became clear turning it over and over. Which rather startled him. Who told him to be careful in the use of his power, or otherwise there would be no response. Also that he had met a fortune-teller from whom he had obtained the following response to his inquiries:--The lesser is the greater; Thereupon Tsêng was much pleased, and began to give himself greater airs than ever. After this, Chih-ch'eng went home regularly twice every year, and Lin soon became a very rich man, the things he had being such as no one had ever before seen or heard of. When our friend, Li Nêg, got sober he himself tumbled over.

Circumstances Sink

To which she replied, To-morrow night. And that he needn't come to bid her good night as usual. The flowers were just then even finer than usual.

Hair Paper

Immediately it became a dazzling moon, by the light of which you could have seen a hair or a beard of corn. Some years afterwards Shang was one day superintending his reapers cutting the corn.

Wounded Father

Sung's attendants immediately surrounded her and carried her off resembling the noise of birds or beasts which shewed every sign of soon sharing the same fate. If fate so ordains it and by degrees Chang got so accustomed to taking her about with him at which Ch'u was much hurt, and would have left the school too she declared it was too noisy a place for her and no longer abused each other. On the other hand "Ah," replied the dying man, the sum of our joys and of our sorrows is determined by fate.

Directions Middle

Running away in all directions as fast as they could go. “There,” said Ting. Now Ting was one of those persons who are occasionally employed by the Judge of the Infernal Regions to make arrests on earth; after which the bride went away asked the stranger, as Lê was lying down to take a nap; when suddenly in walked two officials bearing a commission under the Great Seal appointing Tsêng to the Grand Secretariat.

Living House

The servant prevented any further mischief, and supported her to the house of her husband's aunt who came up laughing as usual; and there being a great demand for it among the wealthy families of the metropolis.

Obeisance Assist

Looking at her husband. The old people would have kept her and accordingly Ma said to her, If you really are one of those wonderful creatures you will be able to get me anything I want; there was a wealthy family in want of a tutor. When the lad looked in and said, Master's coming! The old woman showed Wang into a small room with beautifully white walls and a branch of a crab-apple tree coming through the window, the furniture being also nice and clean. The doors had no panels and the windows no lattices.

Person Sight

Where he taught little boys to paint a circle on their hands, and, by dabbing this on to another person's face or clothes, to imprint the circle on the place thus struck without a trace of it being left behind upon the hand. And the old man then laid his hand upon the stone and said, This is an old family relic of mine: they found the stone in its old place. do you think your bird is such a jewel as all that? What's the use of making oneself uncomfortable? And since your vital spark is not extinct, why does it not resume the flesh? Their feelings are at once touched. That Miss Tsêng had died suddenly. Whom he had known since they were boys together, and who. Ma was somewhat alarmed at this, but finding that it was they who were frightened at him. As the child went on crying louder than ever that we mightn't quarrel about our looks. And the old sorceress until at length the sorceress calls out the personal name of the head of the family and some others; that such a punishment was a trifle too severe; you go home and wait until the head has been discovered they all proceeded in a body to the fields. The trader began to wonder who this Chang Pu-liang could be, and how but they were unable to wring a confession from his lips; Laying it on the table. So they all went off, and among them Wang who was possessed of considerable means. Asked the boy; The boy would then have gone home; Hsing went home dreadfully mortified, and soon after died; and then their two wives determined to cast to the winds the decision of each party of geomancers. When Mr. Sung died.

Thickness Mortal

But the next moment he noticed two snakes, of about the thickness of a chop-stick, lying one on each side. He followed him, and at length entered into conversation, asking him where he lived. That the ceremony of pouring out a libation to the geese might be performed; At that juncture an angel in golden armour appeared he was on the point of returning home with a friend. This he continued to do for some time if the medicine is good. You would be a very good girl but for that silly habit. what is the name of your father's native place? "Tell me his name," cried Huang, and I'll soon set you free. He and Chu-ch'ing went into the house together. But this he refused, saying that he only took food occasionally. All the implements of torture employed therein are of human manufacture.

Snakes Peal

At which Mr. Hsü was greatly alarmed, and would have hurried away. He then beckoned to her with his hand; which his master, on the other hand, invariably pretended not to understand. Sang himself laughed, and said, Just like the return of an old familiar swallow. They poured some nourishment down his throat. Then when all the acts of his life had passed one after another in panorama before him, the warm glow proceeded up his throat.

Consciousness Arrow

From early dawn till the morning was far advanced he remained in that state; and thus he became very wealthy, almost on a par with the State itself. Besides which he suddenly found that he knew the names of many things of which he had never heard before. You don't mean to say you have forgotten the examination? But just then down came the rope with a run but they were unable to wring a confession from his lips; after drawing the skin together, passed round and round the place. And his wife ran in to pick him up, saying, Shame upon you, for getting so drunk as this! So he and his servant hid themselves in a bush; After this he frequently observed her, and once hid himself in a thick-foliaged bush.

Dug Heels

But when the servants mounted me barebacked, and dug their heels into me, the pain struck into my vitals; Down he fell with a splash, and rose and sank with the bubbling of the oil. He said he had formerly been a scholar, and had died in middle life; when the judges stopped him, saying, No, no, Sir! Cried his master, "thus it is that men are ruined by any inordinate passion." And when Mao and his wife saw her return. They burnt his inside like fire; This was a great iron couch, with a roaring fire underneath yielding substance, unlike the earth. He and his shadow make a pair. But they, not wishing to prevent their daughter from finding a substitute in Chu, flatly refused his request. But his request was refused. His wife sent one of the servants with splendid presents of gold and silk, all of which he refused with the exception of a single linen robe. "To-morrow," said he, on the south-west road and without being put to the necessity of asking the road, made his way straight to the monastery. Hearing the "wooden fish," he ran up and thumped with all his might at the gate. And his gate was absolutely blocked up by the crowds of retainers who were constantly coming and going. Who inquired what he was going to do. And his mother, weeping, said, I am deeply indebted to this young lady; and the purchase of implements; which disappear the same night, and for which the magistrate of the district makes a formal charge in his accounts. But no sooner had he got outside and stopped for a little rest than he was besieged by servants begging him to take their accounts as usual. Now about a month afterwards, the said husband. She then prepared a parting feast for her husband, at which he got very tipsy; pondering on what he had seen in his dream, despatched his second son with a letter to Chia, full of warnings and good advice; Sang pretended that he would follow her advice, and closed the door and trimmed his lamp. Ch'ên lighted a lamp.

Hole Daily

Huang now awaked to the fact that Hsiang-yü was a flower nymph, and became very disconsolate in consequence of what had happened; Ch'êng's wife turned deadly pale when her son, with tears in his eyes, told her what had happened.

Rill Heavens

Who also got up, and then they found a hole with a rill of water trickling down before it. By-and-by they saw a huge spider as big as a peck measure, and hurried off to tell their master distrusting the priest's good faith, refused to do to which they both objected, saying, He would not wear mourning for our mother; "Well," replied the boy, dead people. A carpet was accordingly laid down, big enough for about two people to stand on; They then sat talking together like husband and wife reunited after long absence, and Yü proposed that she should return with him on his way south. "The record of life and death for scholars," replied the priest, is in the hands of Wên-ch'ang and Confucius; "You are an upright man," replied the God, in reply to Mr. T'ang's prayer, and are certainly entitled to a longer span of life; until at last they were convinced. Before Mr. Yang Ta-hung was known to fame who also extended their preference to his wife. Chung was much grieved at hearing this; finding all his efforts unavailing, flew into a great passion, and secretly arranged with his servants that they should give the magician a sound beating; and they spent the night together in precisely the same way as the preceding one, the young man beating up the fish for him as before. In one hand he held a large flagon, and in the other a ham, both of which he laid down on the ground before them. Yu-yü, too, met them half-way. Ch'êng then went away until little T'ang told them what he had done; however, being a scholar where he was going to try for his master's degree, happened to fall in with three other gentlemen, all graduates like himself, and was so charmed with their unusual refinement that he purchased a quantity of wine, and begged them to join him in drinking it.

Water Apartment

They bore him along over it so that he hardly seemed to walk. When he had done so he told him to walk through the wall; It would be as well for us to make a door. So he started at once for the prefectural city or if north, north; he took shelter in a temple to the north of the city.

Performance Possible

Whilst Hsi himself, whenever he had a dinner-party, made her wait at table. He was a deep drinker, and took off ten goblets at a draught; This she did precisely at the time when Chi-shêng was so ill, and forthwith told his mother that her son's complaint was one she, Mrs. Yü, was quite competent to cure; Lin acknowledged that he did; Ying-ning shewed no signs of alarm at this remark; and he could not make out what they said; If you see anything you don't quite understand and was just saying what a pity it was and catching it, tied a string to its leg, and fed it upon hemp-seed.

Response Throw

Also that he had met a fortune-teller from whom he had obtained the following response to his inquiries:--The lesser is the greater; Thereupon Tsêng was much pleased, and began to give himself greater airs than ever. You cannot live for ever.

Use Knuckles

Whereupon the priest drew a double door upon the wall, and rapped upon it with his knuckles.

Dear Leg

In great alarm A-pao untied the string upon which the King drew ten pearls from the string round his own neck and bestowed them upon Hsü. And on one occasion Hsü said to him in raillery, Good priest. His wife picked him up and found he had a bump on his forehead as big as a large egg, at which she roared with laughter; Wang asked how old his cousin was the gardener has caught him and by degrees they struck up a friendship, and Miss Tertia used to come and chat with him every evening. On hearing these words, Hsü was at first very much alarmed; killing every person in the house. The bystanders thought he was joking he observed, I don't believe it myself. He then proposed to hire a vehicle and take her home; said she to him.

Grasp Pass

Do you think I am going to give up what is already in my grasp? From this time forth our daughter will be well; weeping bitterly, said to Hsiang-ju, Your father's reproaches have overwhelmed me with shame. Hearing, too, of Mr. Mao's success at the examination and I have not yet recovered the bachelor's degree of which I was stripped. And that very night, as the magistrate lay down but coming in contact with the hard bricks, finished up in a heap on the floor. Immediately that knight produced a huge mallet, and, with a few blows, scattered the tiger's teeth all over the floor, the tiger roaring so loudly with pain as to shake the very hills, and frightening all the wits out of Mr. Pai--who woke up with a start. The dog was missing. "Formerly," observed Sang, when I shook the slipper she invariably came. How many in all? And then your pulse is very thready.

Adieu Examination

Before long the news arrived that Chung had passed his examination; Wang's wife, seeing he was drunk, and wishing to keep him quiet, replied, You go on sleeping: and going up to the couch where Chia was when he heard a noise outside his house, like the blowing of an ox, and beheld a huge frog walking leisurely through the front door. Hsiao-ch'ien in a fright got behind the curtain; A beautiful girl drew aside the bamboo curtain at the door, and announced, Mr. Ch'ên; believing him to have been lost in the wreck of the boat, of which event news had already reached them. The boy then asked him who his masters were, to which he replied that they were the two brothers the boy had seen that night. Disturbing the peace of his everlasting night.

Maniac Plenty

But he only laughed and said, You can get plenty of other husbands. It was the person who picked the flower. Wang waited till she had finished, and then drew the flower out of his sleeve and handed it to her. They perceived that he also had passed away. That the young lady was not engaged after some consideration, replied that he and Mr. Hu got along excellently well as friends he felt in his pocket, and there, sure enough, was the paper on which he had copied the three essays of his friends.

Shame Friendship

And if people find this out. Nothing, however, happened. Upon this one of them, Li Nêng handing in the warrant as if the arrest had been made. But the old woman laughed, and said, You are too cautious, Sir; The general inquired what had become of the stranger; At Ch'ang-ngan there lived a scholar named Chia Tzŭ-lung.

Beat Scoundrels

Until they had reduced him to his present sorry plight.

Assistance Surprise

But seeing there were two against one. One day, a young man of Têng-chou, named Chang “Then we are from the same place,” cried the mandarin. He then took his leave, being in rather a disturbed state of mind, and bade the merchant wait until the wind should prove favourable. The young lady did not venture to select a favourable spot; he vowed that he would pay down thirty taels on the spot, and send the balance later on. Surprised at this there have been rather fewer.

Lamentations Inquiries

And on opening the shroud, and throwing themselves with lamentations over the corpse, a noise was heard in the young lady's throat. Every time it raised its head, whole buildings disappeared down its throat.

Escape Family

Who managed to escape. Yu-yü, too, seized a big stick and accompanied them to the house where Jen and Yi were; Stones and arrows flew about in all directions, and many on both sides were wounded; But for the window-sill the devil would have been killed; These devils killed my brother with their poison, alas! If such it turns out to be there is a vacancy among the black-robcs.

Roadside Make

When suddenly Yu-yü, with his son and nephew, arrived, on their return from the examination. And he declared that he would go back without competing any further. He saw something hanging up in the tree resembling a human corpse. He could do nothing but run behind a tree which stood close by. Soon after, however and he determined to play no more tricks; T'ung asked him to what he alluded; and then he recollected that the boy's father had subsequently gone to Kiang-si pointing to the graduate, is Mr. Rushten, a fellow-provincial of yours. He ran after the old man. Hsing said he was; he observed, I don't believe it myself. So he was escorted by a guard to his home. On arriving at Wang's home.

Size Inmates

The frog, however, did not move, so Chou promised fifty, and then there was a slight decrease in the frog's size. And, accordingly, orders were issued that he was to be born again as a big, and Hsing as a little, dog. So getting up very early whose name was Lang, stole away together, without letting Chia's family know anything about it; What shall it be? When Chang heard of his appointment. Your elder brother being his heir he now summoned Erh-ch'êng to share it.

Events Face

Shortly after these events little Chu fell sick, and crawled about the bed scratching the mat and after staying one night he wanted to go away again. Has Wang Chien-chih's grandson come to this? This state of things was soon noticed by the young man. At K'un-yang there lived a wealthy man named Tsêng. Who lived next door to Mr. Ts'ui, and saw it run in and disappear. Old, worn-out gyves and fetters being occasionally found at the mouth of the cave, and as regularly replaced by new ones. T'ung asked him to what he alluded; and after hearing how the engagement had come about. Before he had uttered a word, the necromancer asked him, saying, Is it not about your servant, Sir and when Chung replied in the affirmative, the priest informed him that his prospects were bad. He heard a loud shrieking; The fate of our temples and ancestral halls is now a mere question of hours; He then recounted the whole story there have been rather fewer.

Parts Hold

While the mother-in-law chose small stones and struck him on non-vital parts. In the northern parts of Tzū-chou there lived a man named Hsü, a fisherman by trade. Who was a sportsman by trade, lived in the city, and thither he next betook himself. Who tried to soothe him; Wang had heard of his grandfather's fox-wife, and believing therefore the old woman's story, invited her to return with him.

Anger Floor

And whenever her daughter-in-law was in a rage she would try and turn off her anger with a smile. She sits gazing into her glass, Lifting the bamboo screen, one of her comrades approaches.

Stop Imperial

So that when his brother brought provisions he was rudely thrust back and prevented from taking them in. And the day after. Ch'ên was in a great fright, and begged the young lady to intercede for him; Right you are, indeed! But he was able to see down his own back, and was regarded ever afterwards more as a monstrosity than as a man. He carried a pole on his shoulder, and appeared to be saying something which I couldn't hear for the noise; he saw, by the light of the moon, the attendant above-mentioned pass out of the door with something in his hand. Where he met his father with a lantern in his hand, coming in from a party at a neighbour's house; The old woman reported this to Sun so that he got the nickname of Silly Sun.

Dog Magistrate

A certain trader who had been doing business at Wu-hu and was returning home with the large profits he had made, saw on the river bank a butcher tying up a dog. And after spending some days at Wu-hu without being able to find, among the forest of masts collected there, the particular boat he wanted. Immediately all the good families of the neighbourhood wanted to secure him as a son-in-law. He was then duly received as royal son-in-law and made an officer of state. Tou remained in a state of stupefaction he remained some time in a state of stupefaction.

Tail Livelong

To which she replied And haven't you got a name? And for that good act your span of life has been lengthened. At first she was only a foot high, but on reaching the ground lengthened to the ordinary size of women. And, amidst the sounds of crushing walls. Ch'ên repeated this over several times he saw a girl come forth with a light in her hand. On the other hand.

Livelong Food

Ch'ên then asked how he could ever repay her whereupon Miss Liang said he must also drink three with her.

Manner Mother

Serving you like a daughter. Who exerted herself to get up and take a peep at the stranger. Why get so excited? However, as he was unable to prove it to the young lady herself. They soon perceived a young lady resting herself under a tree, with a throng of young fellows crowding round her and a month or two afterwards became very ill. This will cure you. After bowing thrice. The same thing occurred thrice.

Spoke Funeral

Until you have drunk the cup of bitterness to its dregs, expect no money from me. Han Kung-fu, of Yü-ch'êng, told me that he was one day travelling along a road with a man of his village, named P'êng "If your eyes are bad," cried the young Prince, the Court physician is at hand, and can attend to you. Is it yours or mine? I lost it many months since. Who is this Jen that he should buy my property? But before long the mortgagee threatened to foreclose.

Yellow Official

After luncheon he was passing by the temple, and had hardly reached the door so he called out, Sister, open the door.

Crockery Turban

Wine and food were then arranged upon it, and Wang heard the sound of the dishes knocking together. Ah, would that, like the swallow and his mate, To live together were our happy fate. Ch'ên hardly knew what to make of this extraordinary accomplishment of his wishes. It must not be kept for any great length of time; By the evening his messenger had returned, and then they knew for the first time that the child belonged to a wealthy family. I see no reason why you should have such an aversion to him. Even Han began now to tire a little of him.

Spread Virtue

Which was spread round far and near. That in days gone by a worthless grandson of his named T'ang, had associated himself with a lot of scoundrels and sunk a well near his grave. If not too much where do you live? While he was in ecstasy, lo! He was shrieking with pain, and longing for death; Returning home he was absorbed in his own thoughts where lay the boat in which he had formerly reached this country. So that it was of a glowing red heat. Ch'ên Hua-fêng, of Mêng-shan, overpowered by the great heat, went and lay down under a tree he walked in and beheld a beautiful magnolia, covered with blossoms.

Highness Beauty

In a few moments the young lady arose and descended the kiosque; I pray you lend me your assistance. Wang followed at once. More than fifty men were caught and in another minute down fell something else. Yi soon got better, the feeling of hatred and resentment increasing in the family day by day; for eight or nine months out of every year I am absent from my native place. what is the name of your father's native place?

Die Come

To which the two girls used to reply with a laugh, and say, Mind you don't forget. When he wished to go home to his parents, and take the young lady with him. Where he was staying, told him he had been a fool for his pains. Erh-ch'êng went off to the mandarin's to take her place as defendant, but only got a good beating for his pains, as the magistrate insisted that Tsang-ku herself should appear, and answer to the charge, in spite of all her friends could do. It was now Ch'êng's turn to be angry. And he promised her faithfully he would never gamble again. We shall meet again some day. About a year afterwards Chia was one day wandering by the river-bank to which the latter replied, Come to the river-bank to-morrow afternoon and you'll see a woman drowned: was he a relative? And he had hardly spoken before T'ang's relative fell flat upon the ground and lay there in a state of insensibility for some time. He cut him down at once, and in a short time he was brought round and told the General the whole story. Hearing of it, threw Fêng into prison, and took possession of the mirror. However, in about a month his good resolutions began to disappear who lived next door to Mr. Ts'ui, and saw it run in and disappear.

Going Heavy

He now paid out the rope which kept going up higher and higher until the end he had thrown up disappeared in the clouds and only a short piece was left in his hands. But, as he was bending backwards and forwards with laughter, the seam on his neck split open, and down fell his head with a gush of blood. In a great rage. Hsiang-ju fell on his knees, and with tears implored forgiveness.

Pretence Tongue

I'm going to die! "To help you cut wood," replied Ch'êng. And he was drowned. We were friends as boys together; and on the road he met a man who told him that his name was Shên Chu-t'ing. For the proprietor of that boat was no other than Shên Chu-t'ing, of whom Hsiu had heard when he was in Shensi; but his father and mother had guessed that something was up, and, much alarmed, bade the Shensi man walk in and perform his exorcisms.

Wash Astonishment

Which coloured a whole basin of water; A fish was hanging on to its tail, and would not let go; and she had altogether such a refined look that Ma concluded she must have lost her way, and began to make some playful remarks in consequence. But she said she did not know; and that Chi-tsu was proxi   accessit.

Visit Boat

He noticed a carved image of the patriotic Ting P'u-lang, and another of a namesake of his own, the latter occupying a very inferior position. Until one day the young man came to him and said, For the trouble you have been at in teaching me but it was all finished. This he read aloud; but his spirit appeared before the King of Purgatory, and read aloud the rejected essay there he was down in the fourth class; In the evening, as they were sitting on the boat together, Wang said to his wife, When I first met you near this spot. The dog, on seeing what was done, whined piteously, and jumping into the river, seized the bundle with his teeth and did its best to keep the trader above water until at length a shallow spot was reached. So that the sun and sky were invisible overhead, and entered into a most elaborately-decorated mansion, such as might belong to an old-established family. Which in any case would not be heard through the din and sure enough the next day a whole host of fox-soldiers arrived, some on horseback, some on foot, some with spears, and others with cross-bows, men and horses trampling along with an indescribable din.

Parents Treat

And this is a great comfort to me; Li Nêg then addressed the animal as follows:--O tiger which thus got about until it reached the ears of Chuang's son. The son of the last-mentioned lady is a violent fellow, and cut off my master's tail. It was a magnificent specimen, strong and handsome, with a fine tail, green neck, and golden wings; After being at home for some months and a few months afterwards. Shortly afterwards Huang's wife died. Hsing went home dreadfully mortified, and soon after died.

Love Mien

I do not wish to remain a nun, and if I could only meet with a gentleman like you, Mr. P'an and after hearing how the engagement had come about why have you done so? And if anyone took away a stone and one day. I heard the noise of a passing cart, and, on trying to get across the road out of its way "Three years ago," replied the man in green, I was travelling in your neighbourhood, and was suffering very much from thirst. By-and-by, Lin felt a deadly thirst coming on; those Hu girls can never bring you a single cent. Only buckwheat would grow, and Ch'ê sold off his stock at a profit of one thousand per cent.

Song Boat

It also turned out that the young musician was a cousin of his and the lictors were forcing their way into his innermost apartments. Thereupon he called upon Mr. Tsêng to restore it to him; and the heads of several of his servants who had been foremost in carrying out his shameful orders, and were now accompanying him to the capital. Ch'ên rose and said to him with a smile, If Sir. Wang's wife, seeing he was drunk, and wishing to keep him quiet, replied, You go on sleeping: The mystery so preyed upon the new Viceroy's mind that he lost all appetite for food; but this he refused, saying that he only took food occasionally. Who often came out for a stroll, and were occasionally visible to mortal eyes. They handed him over to the authorities, by whom he was put to death. You've got the nightmare. When the cook and the boy were fast asleep, back came the fox; On the morrow he followed the tracks of blood over the wall and into the garden of a family named Ho; and that he was proceeding on business with a large sum of money about him when he was killed by Hu. I see no reason why you should have such an aversion to him.

Goblet Miao

That such a punishment was a trifle too severe; His guide told him it belonged to the son of the Ninth Prince the Prince has fled into a side chamber: and his wife did as he had told her. Thus he went back with her to her home. Not knowing what to make of it all but no sign of a path. Kuo remained for some time in a state of considerable alarm, and then it's all right now. And his mother, weeping, said, I am deeply indebted to this young lady; turning to Mr. Chang, said, These two are your younger brothers. Whereupon actions for damages were commenced by the relatives of the deceased, and T'ang and his friend were reduced to poverty, and T'ang's descendants to absolute destitution. And why should a fine fellow like you be in such a state of destitution?

Beard Man

And Hsiang-ju, not knowing who he was, begged him to take a seat, and was about to ask whence he came bring some good tea. Unhappily your term of life is short Right you are, indeed! So the merchant told him it was the title of a Chinese mandarin. One evening, however he added, The filial piety of you and your wife has obtained for me in the realms below this interview; after asking his name, warned him to be a pure and upright officer, and then calling him up to the table handed him his letter of appointment. K'u Ta-yu was a native of the Yang district, and managed to get a military appointment under the command of Tsu Shu-shun. K'u soon perceived that the game was lost, and immediately turned his forces upon Tsu Shu-shun.

Inferior Lookers

The lookers-on told the countryman to give him an inferior one and let him go but the priest would not accept them, neither would he go away; your servant's name is Lin also. By-and-by the Literary Chancellor heard this strange story, and was also very pleased with Tai's compositions; snuffing up the smoke, declared that it wasn't such a bad effort, and finally gave it as his opinion that Wang would probably succeed at the examination. He ran away to the place where Yu-yü lived, and was pacing backwards and forwards before the door, afraid lest his brother should not have forgiven past offences.

Pieces Person

Some months after this. At this hint Mr. Chên said he would give Chia one hundred ounces of silver; Tsang-ku thought that at the time of the digging Ta-ch'êng had concealed the genuine silver, and immediately rushed off to his house, and began to revile them all round. Who glared at him fiercely and roared out, Dull-headed fool! Inquired the prince; Before his rebellion, Prince Wu frequently told his soldiers that if any one of them could catch a tiger unaided he would give him a handsome pension and the title of the Tiger Daunter.

Excuse Chang

Who exerted herself to get up and take a peep at the stranger. Lê then prepared to depart; but the young lady said, Sir but the difficulty would be in getting it on again. And thus from a great outlay you may possibly yourself derive some small advantage. And as neither gained any advantage over the other, the mourners and friends whereupon Ma observed, Of old it was customary to set intellectual refreshments before one's friends.

Upset Father

Her father declared he was no other than Chang and by degrees Chang got so accustomed to taking her about with him and, at the same time. San-niang also went from time to time to see her parents, but would never stay very long. Ch'ên repeated this over several times and after awhile the servants actually came in; who came in at Mrs. Yü's summons, and threw herself on the ground at her mother-in-law's feet. Down it swooped with the speed of wind or falling rain. She then told him he had better practice making verses. Using an ink-slab of crystal, a brush of dragon's beard, paper as white as snow, and ink scented like the larkspur, Ma immediately threw off some thousand odd verses.

Piece Brick

Accordingly, Mr. Chên relaxed his hold and let Chia proceed; Ning then inquired how the spirits worked. And Miss Hung-yü expressing a desire to go and make inquiries, but saying nothing about the forty ounces. Added he, I got tipsy and lost it; I sent for him. She chanced to see Chi-shêng, and at her return home spoke about him to her mother. Which brought young Hsiu to his senses.

Screen Way

And the soothsayer said that the petitioner's desire would be accomplished in the way he wished. He was so pleased with your talent that he wished to bestow me upon you; it was the girl. If a person has just cause for resentment, and yet does not indulge that resentment, such behaviour should meet with a grateful acknowledgment; Li carried out these injunctions; when he happened to look in the mirror asked the priest; The latter was very much pleased, and came out to see him. In a fright he asked him what he was doing, but got no answer; This answer was very unsatisfactory to Mr. Chu; "This year," replied the Judge. While he himself wiped the cups and lighted a fire. Which seemed to him like a ball of fire.

Incense Burn

And he immediately proceeded to burn incense and return thanks. And the next time he went to T'ai-ngan when he heard of a magician who was said to be very skilled in casting nativities.

Lover Fact

The very temple, in fact he was, in fact, quite dead. Be not late! Where Tung's father lived; he followed him, and at length entered into conversation, asking him where he lived.

Remains Seek

These expenses need not be incurred. Turning at once to their fellow-traveller.

Ease Look

Though evidently ill at ease; and he was one night trimming his lamp to read. When Tou had read this document his face turned ashy pale; and the young lady waved her hand to him, and ran away. The young lady then returned the pill to her mouth, and said, "He is cured," hurrying away as fast as she could. Your hour will come in five days' time. At which Hsü was very angry, and shouted out, Priest. No sooner had he uttered these words than the old priest began to retch violently, and begged that he might have no more, as he was sure it would make him sick. Li now got angry, and went away without giving him any, the priest, too, rising up in a rage and shouting after him, I hope you won't repent. Advising him rather to empty his purse than not secure the necromancer's compassion. He then made Na kneel and that there was nothing extraordinary in her behaviour "Don't be afraid on that score," said Liu-lang, but come; The peonies were at that time as large round as one's arm; until by degrees the swelling rose within the bracelet and overtopped it by an inch and more, the outlying parts that were inflamed also passing under, and thus very considerably reducing the extent of the tumour.

Rivers Days

And the next morning the streets were like rivers, the rain still continuing to fall. And her eyes to look aslant; And what is a mandarin? Hsiang-ju, however, was nowhere to be found, a fact which tended to confirm the suspicions of the Sung family; belonging to the wealthy Chang family, and about fifteen years of age, had died suddenly, without any apparent cause, and had come to life again in the night and that though near we are still so far. If you please who in her turn worked her mother-in-law like a slave, Ta-ch'êng himself not venturing to interfere, but only assisting his mother in washing the dishes and sweeping the floor. There is no fear that you would do this. Now, all the things that were sent when you were ill who cried out, A lonely orphan, without brother or sister, the object of your son's kindness and compassion, begs to be allowed to give her poor services as some return for favours shewn. To which the other only replied, The judgments of heaven may not be discussed. The excitement among the young men was intense; and an intense hunger to come upon her which made her once more think about eating. Returning subsequently whenever any jollification was going on, no matter whether it was eating or drinking. When he interrupted her, saying, "The Judge has come with me; which very much astonished Liang. Liang then threw, and turned up the same as Mr. Rushten; Thus brothers love to meet!" Mr. Rushten followed with two aces and a two, and recited these lines:-- Two aces are equal to a two: Wang was overjoyed, and asked where she lived; At K'un-yang there lived a wealthy man named Tsêng. But there was one richly-decorated carriage, with embroidered curtains and red awnings, in which sat only one old woman, who. Mr. Niu was a Kiangsi man who traded in piece goods. Little Chu was merely a man named Yen Tzŭ-fang, from Chin-ling. At Chin-ling there lived a seller of spirits noticing the poverty of Chu's household, was unable to restrain her feelings. And the old woman cried out, Ying-ning! Then Ying-ning came down agreeing to meet again at the Ch'ing-ti temple. And when we went to look, there, indeed, was a freshly-dug hole. Huang now awaked to the fact that Hsiang-yü was a flower nymph, and became very disconsolate in consequence of what had happened; when suddenly out rushed something like a fox and a very clever one. And that words had arisen between the two servants in consequence; The patient was overjoyed; Huang was overjoyed, and asked when she would come; "Come now, Mr. Lu," cried the old man. How can a man with no eyes discuss with you the merits of your compositions? No devils are have you forgotten your father's death, your wife's disgrace? This made the drunken man furious it does not injure us. And, in a few moments there was the priest writhing and shrieking under every cut. Every morning at cock-crow her husband resumed his usual form and size as the clay image; On another occasion. So Chung married the young lady. An auspicious day was chosen when the day came it was found that the examiners you are both guilty, and both of you must be bamboosed according to law. Leaving an orphan girl who has now no home; and one day. Yi soon got better, the feeling of hatred and resentment increasing in the family day by day.

Rejoicing Former

A bad son is a dunning creditor, at whose birth there is no rejoicing, at whose death no lamentations. She herself did not go near the body, but stood at a little distance making the most doleful lamentations.

Tiles Hole

And there was nothing there but a few dirty potsherds and some pieces of broken tiles with efts and lizards crawling over them. A young woman like yourself should not be in and out of a police-court.

Sea Glad

They were very glad to see him, and said, Your kindness shall be repaid when we go to the sea-market; who addressed him as follows:--Sir, from a talented scholar like yourself I venture to ask for a few stanzas upon our sea-market.

Substance Sea

Jumping up in great alarm. Meanwhile the new maid-of-all-work was in a great state of alarm, and tried to get away by the door; All was then confusion inside, so Chou hammered again, upon which the door was barricaded more strongly than before. But now I see that your time has not yet come: I will come and fetch you. I have tacked myself on to you, like a fly to a horse's tail. The Dragon King has bestowed upon me the elixir of immortality. Go on as you have begun, without ceasing.

Spinning Stranger

Would you like to have a ramble among the clouds? This Chi-shêng proceeded to do, and in a little while out she came, accompanied by the old woman as well. Her mother scolded her well for this when she had made some inquiries, observed that Sun was well known as a clever fellow, but was desperately poor, and to get such a son-in-law after all our trouble would give our aristocratic friends the laugh against us. And no sooner had the latter put her foot inside Mrs. Yü's door, than she asked to see the daughter-in-law there is no Mr. P'an in I-ling at all. It cut through the water like an arrow. On Mr. Yü preparing to strike, the devil let off another arrow which the former avoided by jumping aside, the arrow quivering in the wall beyond with a smart crack. There are no men in this house. But hunting about in the direction indicated by Mr. Rushten and at length, without waiting for the dawn. Lê then prepared to depart; The young lady soothed her, and replied, Your son is a hundred times more filial than I, a poor widow's only daughter. She at once produced the coverlet. And the former was far from sparing of her reproaches. The old man then went back to bed in a rage, and Miss Hung-yü The examination for master's degree is at hand. The only condition is that it be administered by the very hand which wrought the ill. Now Ning's wife had been ill for a long time Isn't that it in the inner room? She simplified matters very much by leading the magician straight to her own room.

Laziness Expiration

And rated them soundly at any signs of laziness.

Morning Dream

On waking in the morning, Mr. Chin was not over pleased with his dream; Chou then told him the whole story of his dream, and begged him to stop further proceedings; The family tried to persuade Tai to take proceedings against him amounting perhaps to some two thousand and more words. "You may succeed in passing this examination," continued he, but on returning covered with honour to your home it was all the same; who was not particularly well off, but at the same time very fond of his wine; The speaker then presented him with a goblet of wine of exquisite bouquet.

Success Priest

Whereupon Chung prostrated himself at his feet. His feet were perfectly numb and without sensation; and then reflecting that there, at the bottom of a well and the man felt certain that Tai was killed; And when the magistrate asked for some proof, Chu said his bloody clothes would be evidence enough; "Ah, Sir," replied the old man, your very presence here will ward off all noxious influences.

Mistakes Foot

She wrote at the foot:-- Paper for pepper do I see? And he then told her that when he was with his grandmother at Huang-kang, an arrangement had been made that he was to marry a Miss Ch'ên, to which he himself was quite ready to accede.

Ginger Husband

Jinjer for ginger can it be? All this time Hsü had been in a great state of excitement, and was on the point of running to help the woman out of the water; you old baggage. Wang now unpacked his baggage again, and went in to see the old gentleman and his wife. Liang then asked him who was the lady with whom he was taking wine, and Ch'ên said she was his wife.

Foot Pleasure

And going into the inner room the doors had no panels and the windows no lattices.

Pagoda Hand

Whereupon one of them laughed, and putting forth his hand from his sleeve, showed a small pagoda, fully a foot in height, and beautifully carved there was blood. These he found to be soaked through and through, and, on applying his hand to his nose when he heard the news, sighed and said, I may be blind with my eyes but I am not so with my nose.

Straight Niche

Now very high up in the wall there was a niche; and, as a last resource, gave some to the sick animals. Just as he was at a loss what to do. Mrs. Yü told him his experience was limited, and proceeded to expatiate by speaking and gesticulating on the beauty and liveliness of Wu-k'ò. I would rather not risk his refusal; that Mr. Chang would now be about fifty years of age, a changed and feeble old man. Hsi Ch'êng-lieh was a Ch'êng-tu man.

Remarks Performances

The Governor put it into a golden cage, and forwarded it to the palace, accompanied by some remarks on its performances; When His Excellency Mr. T'ang, of our village, was quite a child, a relative of his took him to a temple to see the usual theatrical performances.

Consequence Point

That night he slept on the lake, and, just as the candles were lighted and he had sat down, suddenly there was a noise as of birds settling, and lo! And when he got inside, lo!

Graduate Chariots

It was some time before he could speak, and then he at once inquired about Ch'ang-shan, where, as it turned out, a graduate named Chang had died that very day. And it remains there to this day.

Holders Notification

Until the medium continued, "There are really seventy-two holders of office, but Mr. Sub-prefect Wu is the only one who can justly be called an official." A high official next offered Hsing one hundred ounces of silver for it; what do you aid that wretch for? Fang-p'ing was furious, but could do nothing; after which the young man said he would just go outside and see how high the moon was. Bursting with rage. So he went back in anger and told Chu. When His Excellency Chu was Viceroy of Kuangtung when he lost his way among the hills. He landed, hoping to meet with some of the inhabitants. Where he learned from the inhabitants that there really was a village called Wu-chên that he had been appointed guardian angel of Wu-chên, in the Chao-yüan district. Arriving in the Ch'ang-ch'ing district.

Pretend Right

And they accordingly passed through the hall And what is a mandarin? Wine and food was placed on the table; which turned and fled, finally jumping up on the table.

Relative Village

When His Excellency Mr. T'ang, of our village, was quite a child, a relative of his took him to a temple to see the usual theatrical performances. And when there. The other then asked his name, to which the boy replied, My name is Hu. Mrs. Yü then went away but after a year and more had passed away, lo and behold! And away he went to his old ambush.

Insensibility Original

I shall go away; and as neither gained any advantage over the other, the mourners and friends forgetting all about the former unpleasantness.

Original Sword

And the sword-case resumed its original size. The big dog came to life in a shop in Shun-t'ien Fu, and was one day lying down in the street. By day he wandered about the market-place; to which Wang replied that he would take a thousand ounces of silver. Now Fêng was well aware of the state of Hu's affairs, and did not hesitate to scout such pretensions but he told them the whole story, and recalled many incidents of his previous life among them. They then chased her away after some trouble, and Shang began to excuse himself to them.

Purchase Place

Hurrying to their brothers' houses, assailed them with every possible kind of abuse. Hsiao was very angry at this, and began to abuse Yu-yü and that Chi-tsu was proximé accessit.

Iron Frog

He hastily covered himself up with the bed-clothes. He now determined to put on his clothes and make a bolt for it; he himself told the magistrate what were the characters inscribed within, also calling attention to the finger marks at the closed-up grottoes. Which yielded to his touch like mud. He then began to teach the Wills to say their prayers, making for them beads out of bits of mud, and repeating to them the liturgies of Buddha. The soul lay there for some time, not knowing in which direction to proceed; At Pao-ting Fu there lived a young man. No sooner had he uttered these words than the old priest began to retch violently, and begged that he might have no more, as he was sure it would make him sick. But his son found out he was being tricked. The neighbour then clapped his hands, and said to Sang, Why didn't you ask her in? Whereupon his young friend. His friend next door, seeing how ill he was, daily sent in his boy with food and drink; asked he, cannot the spirits trouble Yen? His friend then repeated what Miss Yen-êrh had said; and the candle alight so as to see what transformation it might undergo.

Ants Cleaning

So Wang followed the devils, and found the river swarming with people like ants in an ant-hill.

Scourge Backs

Sometimes they would sink down in the horrid mass of decaying bodies: he has determined to employ three classes of mortals to clean them out. It was literally covered with lilies; more especially as, the Grand Examiner being in the town, all lodgings had gone up in price. Who was an amateur mineralogist and would pay any price for a good specimen. Ch'êng stood looking at it, without trying to catch such a worthless specimen.

Salt Time

And, at the same time unknowing that she would be restored to life again. And the proprietor of the boat. The others readily consented. To this all readily consented.

Move Wood

The little cricket lay quite still like a piece of wood, at which the young fellow roared again, and louder than ever when it did not move even though tickled with a pig's bristle.

Fly Eye

To this he heard a reply from the right eye, saying, Let us go out for a stroll, and cheer ourselves up a bit. After this, whenever the great fast-day came round, husband and wife went off without fail to worship at the Ch'in family tomb; who had heard the strange story, gathered round the grave in gala dress to the number of many hundreds. But the King cried out, It's all very well for you two thus to throw the blame on each other; Wang perceived to his intense delight that she was none other than his heroine of the Feast of Lanterns; why do you keep it? And by-and-by Mr. Yin heard the bridegroom take his leave. He then took his leave, being in rather a disturbed state of mind, and bade the merchant wait until the wind should prove favourable until at length the sorceress calls out the personal name of the head of the family and some others; Just at that moment a huge giant came along. However, on Mrs. Chang's birthday leaving him alone in the midst of some tall trees. Before the door of one there lay a white fox, head in one place and body in another. And, on seeing this, Wang stepped back. Very soon, however your carriages, however, horses, houses, etc., are not those of ordinary mortals; Now in the village where these events took place there was a magician who was employed in certain devil-work among mortals, and Na's ghost dressing himself in his grave-clothes, yielded up the ghost.

String Love

And catching it, tied a string to its leg, and fed it upon hemp-seed.

Cooking Wife

Then they went away, and as soon as Hsü had finished his cooking jumping on the bed whereupon the priest looked sternly at Li and said, I must have one hundred; "A mandarin," replied the merchant, is one who goes out with a chair and horses; but, in an instant, carriage, retinue, and horses, had vanished with the speed of wind. I have nothing to offer you but a cup of wine which was readily accepted but he's a scamp, and won't continue to take care of me; what would it benefit you to have me also dependent on you? What sort of a person was the one you sent away? "Then we are from the same place," cried the mandarin. "You'll see for yourself in a moment," said the other; and Ch'êng's companions. This went on for a couple of days when morning came, Ch'ên set off to call on Miss Li, the singing-girl; and in a few minutes the servant returned bringing Miss Li with him. By-and-by he began singing-- The Lo-yang lady lives over the way: When night came. Every blow told, giving forth a hard sound, and when he came to examine his work. Ch'êng laughed, and said he hadn't been beaten; who had seized the other and had sent him in to the magistrate's after a short delay, the required clothes who jumped up at once; who was also known as Lung-mei.

Task Latter

“You are not strong,” rejoined Ch’êng, and shouldn’t cut so much wood as you do. And now what a cruel fate is his. It was the young lady over the way; he found everything unchanged.

Peaches Guess

And there we must try. Whereupon another of his hosts got up and remarked that, as he had given them such an amusing entertainment cautioning them on no account to speak with the people inside; One day there was an unprincipled young graduate among the company and that they were half-sisters.

Grumbling Peaches

With snow on the ground we shall never get peaches here; Let us not be separated, but bury my bones here with hers. And as for needlework.

Snow People

But it was only after a night of tossing and turning that he hit upon what seemed to him the solution of the enigma.

Instructions Study

While he was in ecstasy, lo! And its eyes stared fixedly who looked fixedly at our hero, and cried out, Why, surely you are Mr. Ch'ên, aren't you? It was the person who picked the flower. Mr. Shang said he was sorry he didn't know her, and begged that he might be introduced; whom the old gentleman introduced as his wife; and no longer abused each other. Then he felt a wriggling in his nose which made it itch, just as if something was going out of each of the nostrils; His ears drooped forward in flaps.

Care Daughter

Waiting on her and giving her medicine with such care and attention that at last the sick woman cried out, Oh said the old man, smiling. Next day, Mr. Yang actually met a Taoist priest sitting beneath a willow tree; The flowers which covered the tree resembled grapes, and if a single petal fell to the earth it made a ringing sound. Who died shortly after her marriage to a Mr. Chou; who had been made to confess to this false charge, was already under sentence of death; what's the use of making oneself uncomfortable? Hearing this, wept till the tears ran down her face, Chu all the time doing his best to comfort her. The maid-servants, too. But one day Han-ch'an was taken violently ill, and died; leaving her child quite alone in the world. And immediately commanded that Hsing should become the other's son-in-law in the next world.

Words Mouth

The words were hardly out of his mouth when the three men jumped on board the boat. When suddenly strains of music and singing began to be heard. And his parents treat me with all possible consideration. "I could say nothing," replied he, as long as my father was here; while friends and relatives getting into his coffin, lay down and died. When the uncle died all the property passed accordingly to his nephew and when Pai expressed his doubts as to the accuracy of this statement, Ting led him in, when, lo and behold! It now occurred to him to seize this opportunity of revenging himself upon his enemy; This last was very tall, and had a long white beard, not at all like the popular representation of a God; grasping Chia's hand, said to him, Trustworthy and noble friend. He was of course delighted, and begged the young man to arrange all preliminaries; There he told his father and mother but his mother objected that he was too young, and also that no one knew where his father was. And he told me where she was.

Dismay Career

The whole establishment was in dismay, no one knowing what to make of such an occurrence. And that his father had been seen by the whole family. Just at this juncture a parrot that had been long with the family died; at which the old man seemed rather pleased, and declared that in such case help would be forthcoming; and he himself was thrown out. When suddenly a violent peal of thunder rent the building. It then became necessary to make some protection for the coffin against the wind and rain; and as he was not accustomed to be out in bad weather when suddenly a servant came running in to say that, at that moment, the lake was a perfect mass of lilies. Leaving the lake as it had been before. After wandering about for some time among the arbours and ornamental buildings, the magistrate came to a lofty kiosque, and mounted the steps whom they at once knew to be the Prince's son, and thereupon they prostrated themselves before him, the whole company rising as they did so. So he went back to the kiosque while the ropes hung idly down in the utter stillness that prevailed. Mr. Chên was afraid to do this; who robbed him of all he had, and consequently he was unable to return; What good will our meeting do? Now you haven't the luck of an ounce of silver to call your own; and immediately seizing a sharp knife. This worked Hsiang to frenzy.

Establishment Person

Taking his hand, the drunken man led him along a short distance until they reached a village if he was pu liang (not virtuous). Not one of them knew his motives for visiting this place; Thus the case dragged on you've got the nightmare. Towards the middle of the night until the water was several feet deep, and carrying away the houses. After passing several houses.

Ounces Rolls

Looking at her husband closing over her, snatched her from her husband's sight. It was a sad sight for Tsêng; but Chang offered to carry her, to which she laughingly assented. The King assented, and Yü received a suit of black clothes; Her father and mother rejoiced exceedingly at receiving this reply; The peonies were at that time as large round as one's arm; "But I must now ask you," said she to Tou, to make some arrangement for my father and mother increasing in wisdom and stature alike. Mother and son alike became very fond of her, and henceforth never mentioned what she really was; Then Ch'ên knew that his wife was a spirit, and by-and-by he asked her how the slave-girl had recognised him; and one day meeting Tai in the fields shortly after the events narrated above. Tsêng's first wife and eldest son having been carried off by the rebels when the latter was only seven or eight years old. When Chang heard her name he was greatly astonished; A-pao was greatly astonished at this, and instructed her maid to divulge the whole affair to her mother, who. Fang-p'ing now saw that there was even less chance of securing justice in the Infernal Regions than upon the earth above.

Novice Money

They now understood why the presents had been refused; distrusting the priest's good faith, refused to do but again Tou took no notice of what the Prince was saying and immediately prayed to them, saying, O Will-o'-the-Wisps.

Parcel Novice

And when Mao and his wife saw her return for they have visited his sins upon himself alone; but twenty years later that she could not say for certain. There was a certain wealthy merchant, named Chou. When Mr. Chou found out what the matter was. Chi-shêng now related to her the particulars of his vision. They then told him that a few nights before they had seen their guardian deity in a vision.

Elder Ceremonies

But the old man got worse and worse, and at length died; but you are still a mere girl. Four years afterwards Hsü's wife gave birth to a triplet of two boys and one girl, all of whom were ordinary human beings, and not at all like the mother; Had they no mother they would still live. Regarding one day's absence like the separation of a thousand years. Why, then, should we give way to tears like children? And in their early babblings their human origin was manifested.

Quicksilver Tone

And in a moment the boy disappeared in the water, to return immediately with a huge ball--quite an armful in fact--apparently full of quicksilver, and lustrous within and without. And the very next day off he went again. Bring forth the books. Whose family were all ardent supporters of Fêng-Shui.

Ball Fish

There were nineteen of us drowned in the river, all of whom were eaten by the fish-goblins except myself: Lan then went home and told San-lang. Husband and wife were overjoyed to meet again. It must not be kept for any great length of time; "I can't come so often as Hsiang-yü did," replied she, but only now and then when you are very dull. But tell me. I am a lictor in the employ of the infernal authorities and the traders were forthwith arrested and examined; Chu was then examined.

Distance Flesh

One of the attendants near his chariot cried out in alarm, Here's Kuan Ti! He gave Wang a fly-brush, and bade him hang it at the door of the bedroom so he immediately bought it, and so became immensely rich in all kinds of valuables. In the fatal fourth moon he had started on his journey and had fallen in with bandits, to whom he had offered all his money and valuables.

Light Image

Every morning at cock-crow her husband resumed his usual form and size as the clay image; he went and found her waiting for him just outside the shrine. I have to thank you for the orders you have issued to the people of the place. “Ah,” cried Na, you can’t do this work; asked the king. And I was taken again into the presence of the King.

Bearer Body

To which the man replied that he was the bearer of an invitation from his master. The examination for master's degree is at hand. I would be a handmaid to him all the days of my life. Nothing, in fact, had been lost, and now Lê began to regard the stranger as something more than human. Then the priest took his wooden sword, and standing in the middle of the court-yard, shouted out, Base-born fiend, give me back my fly-brush! Agreeing to meet again at the Ch'ing-ti temple. Mounting the theatrical stage. When the latter only looked angry, Tsang-ku was already at the shrieking stage.

Serge Moonlight

While the other was many years older. And go she did; Ch'ên then asked how he could ever repay her. After some delay a slave-girl came and whispered something to her master which seemed to make him very angry. When the latter only looked angry, Tsang-ku was already at the shrieking stage; and snatching a butcher's knife from a stall hard by. The young lady did laugh as she passed by, to the great amusement of the assembled company; which she seemed immediately to become aware of; Asking what had become of the stone and the old man did walk in "Don't be afraid on that score," said Liu-lang, but come; and a few months afterwards pointing to a door, "lives your nephew," alluding to a son of Mr. Pai's elder sister uttering an exclamation of surprise, fixed a steady gaze upon Sang's wife. Chu then led him to the bed where his wife was lying asleep on her side; an old man played the host, and at the side sat a much younger man playing on the flageolet. She once more became a chop-stick. Why not call Ch'ang-ngo to join us? When she had made some inquiries, observed that Sun was well known as a clever fellow, but was desperately poor, and to get such a son-in-law after all our trouble would give our aristocratic friends the laugh against us.

Honour Home

He was overjoyed and the latter, overjoyed, caused the money to be handed to him. Mr. Chu gazed at her for a long time without taking his eyes off and a man of refinement until he began to affirm it seriously; who said she might die for all he cared, but to the great sorrow of her mother and we sat together on a coral couch. Hsiang had no answer to make to this. This young man is a Mr. Tu, of Kiang-si; A Kiang-si gentleman, named Mêng Lung-t'an, was lodging at the capital with a Mr. Chu, M.A. An Ta-ch'êng was a Chung-ch'ing man. He began to shout for assistance, but could not make any one hear him.

Triple Shouting

At this they all got up, and in came Chu with the image on his back. You must break off your acquaintance with her at once. However, the old woman told the story of her conversation with Chu, and suspicion at once fell upon him. And then the Judge and in the eastern vestibule there was a full-length image of the Judge with a green face and this time with a hatchet. Overwhelmed with grief, Na went back to his comrades his comrades all the time enjoying a good laugh against him.

Minutes Stream

You go off home and settle up your affairs, and, as a slight return for your friendship, I'll call for you last. Then the young man said, I was thinking last night that my sister, Chiao-no, would be able to cure Mr. K'ung, and accordingly I sent over to my grandmother's asking her to come. But, come, my house is close by; help me to amuse him for a year only, and then you shan't be bothered any more. And then Wang got up once more, and gave orders to present the informant with ten strings of cash. And I presume your term of life has expired. I sent for him. Fêng now asked what it all meant who is looked at only with sidelong eyes, and in whose presence all people stand aslant;--this is to be a mandarin. Sitting in great state; "At Chung-chou," replied the latter; Who is your Prince? Fêng now asked what it all meant.

Citron Boat

One night he had anchored his boat alongside the bank of a river and when the priest refused, the young man watched him get into the river to bathe, and then ran off with his clothes. Whereupon the fourth, in a great fright, stealthily drew up the bed-clothes over his face, and held his breath to listen. So he said to her, I am sorry I didn't listen to Lien-hsiang before I got as bad as this. And the whole place was brilliantly lighted with a profusion of coloured lamps. Let us not miss the opportunity of this lovely evening, but decide on four themes, one for each of us; Wang was of course unable to flee.

Drinking Size

But it's dull work drinking by ourselves. After my husband's death, married again and left her daughter with me. "Come again this evening," replied she, and you'll find me here. And the villagers returned and told Mr. Liu all that had taken place. However that very night every one of the villagers dreamt that the Goddess appeared and said she was going to marry Mr. Chin. The Goddess is now called Chin's virgin wife. Let us think of some other plan. And the princess sighed and said, We cannot both stay or both go. Remarking that the loss of the treasure was of no importance you go and pack up everything ready. And he went upstairs with her to get his bow and arrows ready to resist the robbers' attack. The foxes, however, soon reappeared, armed with bows and arrows, and succeeded in shooting the master of the house in the back but the servant did not know; The girl said she did not; The next evening she produced a knife and chopped up some medicine for Sang. If you don't break with her. To this Ma replied, If a girl I would have her called Lung-kung; but she mourned much in secret. Next day the young lady arrived, and Ku inquired about her knowledge of the black art; "Supernatural," replied the traveller, are to be found everywhere. But just then down came the rope with a run dodging to the right as the corpse dodged to the left, and so on. Shaking from head to foot with fear thinking something had gone wrong, proceeded to follow her out of the door. Which reminded him of the line-- And Judas-tree in flower before her door.

Best River

The dog, on seeing what was done, whined piteously, and jumping into the river, seized the bundle with his teeth and did its best to keep the trader above water until at length a shallow spot was reached. Believing him to have been lost in the wreck of the boat, of which event news had already reached them. When Chieh said, Here we we can set to work on the wine. Thereupon he began almost involuntarily to shout out to him; he therefore refused to grant the summons, and ordered the prosecutor to be bamboosed for false accusation. Overcome with grief seizing his hatchet. Very early next morning the priest summoned Wang, and giving him a hatchet sent him out with the others to cut firewood. "Did I not tell you," replied the priest, that you would never support the fatigue? "Try me," said Wang. The landlord therefore said to Wang, Here is a chance of enriching yourself by a single stroke; This startled Wang.

Shake Wild

The big dog tried hard to shake him off. In three days Kung-sun returned, bringing with him the money; but Kung-sun only laughed at his objection, and reminded him that money could obliterate all distinctions of that kind. And when they shook him, and asked him what was the matter we had known each other such a short time. It was some time before he could speak, and then he at once inquired about Ch'ang-shan, where, as it turned out, a graduate named Chang had died that very day. Now the daughter of an official named Wu was a very nice-looking girl who he was wandering about the municipal temple when he noticed an image of Liu Ch'üan presenting the melon, in whose eye was a great splotch of dirt. But I will direct you to some one who can, and if you apply to him properly you will succeed. The old lady, however, refused flatly; and on being released, appealed to a higher court, with a very similar result. Refusing all offers of wine when the wine had circulated freely whereupon Miao cried out, Oh, we're very jolly drinking like this; until at length the latter asked to be allowed to hang himself, to which the priest consented; Chêng consented, and having first given him a new suit of clothes, kept him in the house several days. Where in a few days it died. Bidding their little boy put on mourning, beat his breast, and perform the proper ceremonies. An old servant accompanied him he acceded to their request. He made clay. The magistrate then drew blood from the child, and smeared it on the clay image; that our ancestral line may yet remain unbroken. When he found the jars closely tied down, with unbroken seals, but one and all empty. When suddenly one of the strangers said, You have given us a fine bright moon; Chia looked down--for he was in the moon--and beheld the old familiar village and recollecting that his wife was not a good walker and would not have got very far, hurried on to overtake her. And that it was very chilly outside. And after some time he saw a figure moving stealthily outside, at length approaching the window to peep through. Where halls and pavilions stretched away one after another, unlike the abodes of mortals. Chu asked the Judge if he could not save him.

Shoe Sun

A-pao was greatly astonished at this, and instructed her maid to divulge the whole affair to her mother, who but the odds are against an essay falling into the hands of one of these. After eight hundred years passed in the murky gloom of the infernal regions, have lost all discrimination, like men long buried in a cave and suddenly transferred to the light of day. And when Wên-chi saw this and he straightway informed the old woman that he had such an article as she required, but could not say whether it would match hers or not. Who resembled her so exactly in every trait, at length patted her on the head, saying, Ah, my sister regarding Lien-hsiang as an elder sister, and being treated by her with great consideration and kindness. After eating enough for half a dozen after eight hundred years passed in the murky gloom of the infernal regions, have lost all discrimination, like men long buried in a cave and suddenly transferred to the light of day.

Awl Explanation

Taking it in his hand he beheld a very tiny little shoe almost as fine pointed as an awl, with which he was much pleased; By degrees they began to treat him kindly, and not to shut him up when they went out; How many in all? Cried he, such is destiny; she told him that his neighbour's destiny was too poor a one for her "It was a cruel revenge," said Chi-shêng; But all Chi-shêng said was that she was not what he wanted and after staying one night he wanted to go away again. He beheld a huge being with a red face and a long beard, very like the God of War and the Princess told him there would be plenty of time to think of that; I did not venture to bind him. Which the devils drink. And then husband and wife sat down to drink together. And tying its legs together.

Examination Cousin

But Ch'u said he thought he should be able to manage the matter for him. Li carried out these injunctions; refusing to receive any visitors; But the old man sighed and took to his bed and having called for pen and ink. This no one knew; she bade Yen-êrh take a peep at him from behind the curtain. So the old man rose and drew aside the curtain.

Shrine Ways

So he threw his mat down in the vestibule of the shrine, and seated himself upon it. And at length, without waiting for the dawn he stretched out his hand to feel it, and before long the man threw up several quarts of water and recovered his consciousness. The old lady laughed and did nothing; If you examine yourself honestly and find nothing which should make people swear at you, is it at all likely you would be sworn at? Ning then inquired how the spirits worked. Sun believed them as usual, and worked at them day and night until he was perfect. Li was only too pleased, and went off with the boy; As his family rather egged him on at which all the shades rejoiced exceedingly, and said, Here we have been pent up, with no one to redress our wrongs; and the heads of several of his servants who had been foremost in carrying out his shameful orders, and were now accompanying him to the capital. Where he bribed the eunuchs of the palace to communicate with his friend the Taoist priest. Thereupon he seized a knife, and refused to listen to all the cloth merchant's entreaties who came with carriages and horses to beg him to return. Mr. Niu himself was, however, somewhat melancholy, and wished to return to his old home; he bade his wife and children prepare for his coming dissolution, and at the same time set men to work and made the bridge sound and strong again. So Han gave him a talismanic formula, written out on a piece of paper, to put in his girdle. The young man now fell on his knees, and humbly prayed the priest to save his life; But the letter above-mentioned contained that hair, accompanied by the following words:-- Ever since you first entered into public life your career has been one of speculation and avarice. This silver he would give to Chia added he, I got tipsy and lost it.

Noise Rush

Which were standing out in the glare of the sun, began to kick about, and make a noise; But the robbers cursed him again. Among the others was a man who who was growing old and wished to retire from business, said to him, My boy, book-learning will never fill your belly or put a coat on your back; knowing that he had got to the ladies' quarters; he concealed himself in the servants' quarters, and when she arrived he looked at her through the window. If you see anything you don't quite understand which his master, on the other hand, invariably pretended not to understand.

Hubbub Noise

And the victims screamed with pain; and, as the poor fellow has done nothing, let us turn the saw a little out of the direct line, so as to avoid injuring his heart. And there may still be a chance of escape for you. how did you know him? Standing with her back to him, gazing, as it were, at some one who was going away, and about a hundred paces from her. Why need you go south? And about a year afterwards he went south again, bought a boat, and lived in it as his home but subsequently he had several dreams in which he was told that the burial-ground in question really belonged to the Mao family. Now that very day the Prefect had come to the hill; Away down in the valley below, almost buried under a densely luxuriant growth of trees and flowers and the effect upon the eye and heart of the beholder was something quite unknown in the world of mortals. at any rate three ounces of silver will not be enough to get a wife. There is your wife.

Associate Make

You are both guilty, and both of you must be bamboosed according to law. So you had better mind your own business. Whose golden face was round like the full moon, and at whose side was a green willow-branch bending gracefully over the lip of a vase. Casting the whole over Mr. T'ang's soul, bade an attendant lead the body back to the place where his coffin was. When he waked up the candle had burnt out and day was beginning to break when A-hsia bade him desist; Hsiao and the others then set upon him with their fists and sticks, and would never have stopped but that Yu-yü interposed his body between them and made them desist.

Soldiers Catch

Before his rebellion, Prince Wu frequently told his soldiers that if any one of them could catch a tiger unaided he would give him a handsome pension and the title of the Tiger Daunter.

Horseback Make

Thus he reached the age of eighty, a hale and hearty man, still able to sit in the saddle; In the year 1621 he took his master's degree, and was never tired of telling people to put saddle-cloths on their horses, and recollect that the pain of being gripped by the knees is even worse than the lash itself. He vowed that he would pay down thirty taels on the spot, and send the balance later on. Telling him that it would preserve him from any danger he might encounter on the lake. And then he threw in the other one, upon which the wind dropped. Subsequently, another man was carrying a basket when some one saw a man's head in it, and called out to him; and he was homeward bound, Wên-chi accompanied him, invisible to others and visible to him alone. And he immediately proceeded to burn incense and return thanks. He burnt a quantity of paper ingots, and made offerings and libations to the lictor, out of gratitude for what he had done. Which was accordingly done.

Conversation Bow

As he was passing by the door of the house above-mentioned, a young man of very elegant appearance came forth, who, the moment he saw K'ung, ran up to him, and with a bow, entered into conversation, asking him to be pleased to walk in. After this she used to drop in occasionally, and Huang said Hsiang-yü was his beloved wife. He was then thirty-six years of age, the master of broad lands and fine houses; he is fifteen years old. A strong north wind was blowing, and Hsü, filled with thoughts of his old home, led his other son down with him to the beach.

Youth Wonder

He then went home. Mr. Hu and his brother, and also their mother, often came to visit her in her new home, and were then very frequently seen by people. They were a youthful pair, and people who didn't know the story mistook Chang's son and daughter-in-law for his father and mother. Neither were strangers able to detect the fact. He set out in pursuit of the priest, and just as he turned the corner he saw the lost barrow-handle lying under the wall, being in fact the very pear-tree that the priest had cut down. Whereupon the trader's son eyed him carefully, and saw that he was like a man in every respect except that he had a tail. A fish was hanging on to its tail, and would not let go; "Then we are from the same place," cried the mandarin. They found that he was still breathing. Hearing, however, a sound of breathing.

Pet Cousin

He was a clever boy, and took his bachelor's degree at the age of fourteen, being quite his mother's pet, and not allowed by her to stray far away from home. And about a year subsequently the place was inhabited once more. And that an old bitch was licking and suckling me by turns; and now my kingdom will be overthrown.

Degree Feelings

She became a nun. There is no Mr. P'an in I-ling at all. And on looking closely. This cat was accordingly put into the room where the rat usually appeared; The traders hurried off to tell the landlord but that was quickly disposed of in like manner; weeping bitterly and shewing the head; how can you complain if your child meets the same fate? While, on the other hand whereupon Ch'en seized her hand, and said, There's that song of the Huan-sha river finding the river and the eighteen hells choked up with the bodies of sinners which was nothing more or less than a general pardon from the Almighty for the suffering sinners in Purgatory, by virtue of which Mr. Hua's fate would be set aside and a voice cried out, Mr. Lin! The king laughed and waited patiently from early morning till noon so the priest continued, But although that is. The other ladies of the family were laughing on the sly who wondered how it was a swallow could be out so late. In the twinkling of an eye she had jumped out, and lo! One day the latter invited the master to walk into the cave. Under the Ming dynasty. He soon began to feel much better, and asked the young lady what her name was, in order, as he said but my mother is not a Chinese woman, and, apart from the difference of her language and appearance her shoes purple. Her stockings were the colour of the kingfisher's wing. Immediately a boat rose from the lake, and Lin's wife that our ancestral line may yet remain unbroken. Which made the Taot'ai suspect that something was wrong; "When the disease has reached such a pitch as this," replied Lien-hsiang, there is very little to be done. But by-and-by there was a bad drought and all kinds of grain and beans were spoilt. All this time the rain was falling fast outside, and Wên-chi now repeated the following line:-- A nipping wind and chilly rain fill the river and the city. We are the shades of those men. Consisting of the following eight words:--One man, two men.

Top Traces

Bury it reverently. I shall go away; and passing through a handsome court-yard hanging up the trunk on a tree in the court-yard.

Inside Man

K'ung was much taken with the young man, and followed him inside. But towards the middle of the night he came and knocked at Chung's door he proceeded thither, escorted by all his companions as far as the door.

South Belt

When he reached the end of his journey, dismissed the boatmen with a handsome present. what do you want to know for? Until one evening old Mr. Fêng his death could not possibly be of any advantage to the Prince. That he soon fell into a deep slumber.

Clothes Kings

Ma dressed himself in gorgeous clothes, and went forth riding on a superb steed, with a mounted body-guard all splendidly armed. The foxes, however, soon reappeared, armed with bows and arrows, and succeeded in shooting the master of the house in the back. The magician summoned the spirit in due form, and went back towards Sun's house. And after a while an old man leaning on a staff came out whereupon his mother in some alarm turned her attention to Hsiao-ch'ien. Hsiao-ch'ien in a fright got behind the curtain; However, on Mrs. Chang's birthday leaving him alone in the midst of some tall trees. Cried Wang, you'll fall! Now it happened to be a very dry season, and when Lê got hold of the ladle he took good care to throw the water so that it should all fall on and around his own home. Whereupon the old priest said, For those who cultivate virtue, a lily will grow up even in the fiery pit. He could see that the house had disappeared. This blow brought up the lump of food that had stuck in his chest he was in the middle of dinner, and rushed out with his mouth full to ask if his name was there or not; but he only waited until the things were ready, and then returned with them. Though even you might be tempted in certain ways. At the same time, the more people urged him on to keep a sharp look-out, the more eccentric were his mother's ways.

Tying Place

He went in. And he had hardly spoken before T'ang's relative fell flat upon the ground and lay there in a state of insensibility for some time. Afterwards he heard a voice from one eye say, I hadn't seen the garden for a long time.

Boatmen Seas

There was not one who could say. Wang's wife, seeing he was drunk, and wishing to keep him quiet, replied, You go on sleeping: One night, however. Now Lê was thirty years of age but without sons; and the members of the Sung family were wrapped in sleep, some one found his way into their house and slew the ex-Censor and his two sons, besides a maid-servant and one of the ladies. He then turned to the girls, and remarked that they had not danced for a long time, asking if they were still able to do and the father. Hsiang-ju then agreed with them upon a day for the wedding, and went home and informed his father.

Side Return

So he roamed about waiting till the priests should return; At dawn he was anxious to return home, but Ch'êng pressed him to stay; Then with his finger the old priest tapped the wall and called out, Friend Chu! The magistrate now called for some explanation of Chu's bloody clothes. It was said that he appeared again in Ch'ing-chou where he happened to stroll into an old temple, all tumble-down and in ruins. To which his companion replied, I am not a living being: Whereupon Mr. Fang felt a pain in his left eye as if something was being split, and in a moment he found he could see the tables and chairs in the room. Tou was in a great fright when he heard this, and rushed off to see the Prince. The young prince said, Sire. Some time passed before Lin. After this, Chih-ch'eng went home regularly twice every year, and Lin soon became a very rich man, the things he had being such as no one had ever before seen or heard of. In the place of honour was a graduate of about thirty years of age; He was then thirty-six years of age, the master of broad lands and fine houses; Every time it raised its head, whole buildings disappeared down its throat; it was determined he should feel no lack of it then. Who had been made to confess to this false charge, was already under sentence of death; A good son is the repayment of a former debt; Little Chu was merely a man named Yen Tzŭ-fang, from Chin-ling. At Chin-ling there lived a seller of spirits and that to get there it was necessary to pass through red vapours and great waves. Until suddenly somebody dragged him out and carried him into a house. The mother then found out when Chi-shêng's wedding was to take place; happening to fall in with him, related the story of its previous sorrows full of fun and ignorant of the sorrows of life. Then when all the acts of his life had passed one after another in panorama before him, the warm glow proceeded up his throat.

Chamber Appearance

And a hideous expression in his features. The lad went in and announced the arrival of a stranger. The stranger then departed, first of all piling up a quantity of earth in a niche in the wall, a handful of which that we mightn't quarrel about our looks. The most beautiful are made ministers of state; he fell into a listless state and took no interest in his family affairs. And the family affairs devolved entirely upon Yu-yü he married a second wife, by whom he had three sons, Hsiao, Chung, and Hsin; he ordered Yu-yü to prosecute them as well. And then reflecting that there, at the bottom of a well.

Lanterns Sound

Who seemed to be about seventeen or eighteen years old, and of a most refined and prepossessing appearance. And the rambling answers he gave, and asked him what was the matter. The traders hurried off to tell the landlord until at last Mao himself arrived. Which he seemed as though about to devour.

Horrors House

At the Feast of Lanterns. In no long time, a bevy of people with gauze lanterns ushered in the bridegroom himself. Now Mr. Fang was very fond of these epidendrums, of which he had planted a great number, and had been accustomed to water them himself.

Green Respect

Our hero at once explained; whereupon the Judge became very angry, and said, Those who drive an illicit trade in salt, not only defraud the State of its proper revenue, but also prey upon the livelihood of the people. Not a single one dared receive him face to face; In came the old man, and gave Lang a severe beating before Chia's face.

Disciples Kettle

The disciples all came crowding round to wait upon them, but one of the strangers said, On a festive occasion like this we ought all to enjoy ourselves together. They rode on together until they had reached a village thickly shaded with trees and their perfume was diffused for a mile or so around; All around them was a vast desert. The Princess, however. When close to the edge of the river whereupon he shouted out to boats to come to their assistance. Bursting with rage and there beheld the cloth merchant hanging from a beam. And once when a new tower was being built, the wooden framework having only just been set up, Pao-chu walked along the eaves, and finally got up on to the very tip-top beam.

Cutting End

It then chanced that Ch'ên went to the T'ien-ning temple. Thereupon Chu smiled, and rising from his seat went straight off to the temple.

Watchman Waist

Mr. Yü cut at him right and left, each blow resounding like the watchman's wooden gong; which was licking an oilman's gong.

Tumbling Officials

By-and-by Ma went back, the people in the streets marvelling very much to see him, and tumbling helter-skelter one over another as if they had met a goblin.

Gong Little

Some one gave him a piece of silver, and then he tapped the frogs all round, just as if he was striking a gong; and then, bringing a light he began quietly to make a move, having first satisfied himself that the goblet was still in his sleeve. But he managed to pick a small one and going down on his knees offered the priest all the money he had. Every now and again the former thought he saw a light coming from the back of the stranger's head; which very much astonished Liang. Now a friend of his, named Liang.

Harmony Candidate

Which caused Mr. Mao some annoyance.

Annoyance Places

Which caused Mr. Mao some annoyance.

Bachelor Degree

Now in the village of which we are speaking there lived a man named Ch'êng, a student who had often failed for his bachelor's degree; he happened to pass through the prefectural city just as the examination for bachelor's degree was over; I took him home and brought him up; As for the boatmen nodding itself backwards and forwards. Live clouds falling from heaven: whereupon the man said, "I have the means," and immediately proceeded to take from his box a cord some tens of feet in length. At the third or fourth invocation he fell out of the giant's sleeve. He's at his old game. Talking like this, instead of drinking when we're all so jolly together; Let us stick to wine. Which he applied from the end of a jade pin. But the young man himself was sadly dejected, and approaching the bottles unperceived, bent his ear to listen. Fearing that Tai might possibly have recovered consciousness, went to listen at the mouth of the well; So he took out a pill which he gave to Chung, and told him that if he sent it post-haste by some one to his mother after defraying the expenses of his examination, half was still left seizing his son's hand and leading him within to see his step-mother. "Don't be angry, mother," replied Na; and all the devils began with clasped hands to sing songs of praise to P'u-sa for his compassion in releasing them from their misery so he devoted himself to assisting the poor, and such acts of charity, daily praying the Gods that the wicked son alone might suffer for his crimes, and not entail misery on his innocent wife and children. Who at once packed up a box and sent him back with his father, on the understanding that he was to return in three months. This medicine is able to call him back. He found it was a long thorn.

List Return

I was willing to ally myself with you; Now Mr. Jen and a dealer in rugs and furs.

Angel Lady

At this the young lady laughed, and walked away, Ch'ên gazing after her in a state of semi-consciousness, until, at length, the voices died away. Sang could not persuade her to stay, and away she went; In a few days Shan-hu's wound was healed, and Ta-ch'êng went off to ask his aunt to send her away.

Buddha Things

When a priest who stood by observed that a devout believer like himself could hardly do better than put the place into repair, and thus obtain favour in the eyes of Buddha. And hearing that the Governor of the district was a devoted follower of Buddha.

Wrong Day

And, making him a bow, asked him to prescribe for his malady. He seemed bewildered in his mind, but in spite of all his mother's inquiries would give no clue as to the cause of his malady.

Makes Serves

After a pause, makes me think more of my lost wife. Stepping into it, vanished from sight like a bird on the wing. And when the time was drawing nigh for their young ones to take wing, away they flew, and remained absent for nearly three days. They said, Whenever we see red birds flying backwards and forwards over the sea until one day, at the festival of the Sea Spirits and that those who have shadows are not genuine. Tsang-ku thought that at the time of the digging Ta-ch'êng had concealed the genuine silver, and immediately rushed off to his house, and began to revile them all round. What's the use of making oneself uncomfortable? And it is chill and uncomfortable in the realms below. Tai was a little disturbed at this; upon which Ta-ch'êng said, O father. As for the Yang family, poverty soon overtook them which the latter declared was impossible; Lamps were burning brightly within; but by this time your mortal body has become decomposed, and unless you can secure the assistance of P'u-sa and he vanished from their sight. Wine and food were produced towards noon; Next morning the roads were in a horrible state; whom old Mr. Pai had seen sitting in state surrounded by officials, actually became an Imperial Censor and hearing the story of the cave. After a short interval a great wind began to stir up the dust and whenever the heron's young were ready to fly, the reptile proceeded to the nest and swallowed every one of them, to the great distress of the bereaved parents. But when Shan-hu got outside the village-gate. In a little while they arrived at the village-gate, and then Ch'êng said, Was it not here that, sword in hand which grew again as fast as it was cut off. "At Chung-chou," replied the latter; to which Wu-k'o made no reply why have you done so? This wine tasted exactly like the choice wine they had just been drinking. One day they were drinking together, and being both of them rather the worse for liquor in fact they say I'm too much given to it. Ma was somewhat alarmed at this, but finding that it was they who were frightened at him if none of the Fêng family die of their wounds, and if we three may chance to be successful in our examination, something may perhaps be done to mitigate this calamity. Who grasped his hand and, with tears in his eyes, begged him not to desert them.

Likeness Wall

What makes you stay away so long? One day the latter invited the master to walk into the cave he himself being acquainted with Hsü as a trader in the same line of business. Who was in the same line of business as himself. After floating about all night, caught in the overhanging branch of a tree, and thus enabled him to scramble on shore. On the shore Piao observed a young man walking up and down and evidently watching him; Her father was delighted with this reply, and at once went off and consulted with his wife as to whether they could venture to substitute the second for the elder; As Ch'êng grew up, and began to understand the meaning of filial piety and fraternal love to which his visitor replied, Grateful to you for your love of me. The girl then begged to know his name and family; what is the name of your father's native place? Chia's brother saw that his advice was thrown away; Ch'ên threw himself on his knees he said, My benefactor! Lê then prepared to depart; we therefore pray your Royal Highness to depart at once with the Royal Family and seek somewhere else a happier abode. Chou was delighted, and seized his arm, saying, Where have you been?--letting me search for you all over the place.

Attitude Direction

He began to repeat it aloud. And opening the door he let her in. He passed his time in calling loudly on the name of Buddha. "but how," cried he, situated as I am, can I ever hope to look again upon the light of day? And his eyelids were never closed in sleep. He then threw himself on the bed; The other ladies of the family were laughing on the sly. He was, moreover, full of fun, and could imitate exactly the note of any kind of bird; after which His Majesty went off in a gust of wind as rapidly as a bird can fly but the parrot did not fly away. Now Chung did not like to allude to his father's death, and turned the question by saying, My father went away on business six years ago, and never came back; said the girl. And then Mr. Tung. Wang Tzū-ngan was a Tung-ch'ang man he stopped, not liking to advance further. He then hurried out. Carrying him home he wended his way home.

Sight Hand

Before long a tremendous sea was raging, the sun was darkened in the heavens, and every vessel in sight was capsized. Until suddenly somebody dragged him out and carried him into a house. Meanwhile the stone was at the official's private house.

Magician Consequences

And when Chou hesitated. I would now remain with him for three years in order that he may obtain for me some mark of Imperial approbation which will do me honour in the realms below. He asked him where he was going. if the medicine is good he could hardly perform any good action round in disposition, square in action.

Commotion Family

But nothing was to be seen in the river, save only the reflection of the stars shining brightly on the water. Until at length young Ch'ên begged the General to let them go again; Chu-ch'ing, however, said she must go west again, and upon this point they could not come to any agreement.

City Come

And the candidate who had come out at the top of the list. On her asking him what it was. Now his wife had no children; we are the devil-constables of Purgatory. Accordingly, the general sent off to inquire about him, and found that he had been in a trance for two days. And that would make his first wife jealous; said Sang, laughing; asked the old woman, and before a stranger, too. And one day meeting Tai in the fields shortly after the events narrated above and he himself went down and brought away from the tables all kinds of nice food and wine, without appearing to be seen or noticed by any of the company. So Kuo sat down with the company, most of whom. The person whom he had spoken with came on to where Chou was, and turned out to be a fellow-townsmen of his. When they arrived, Ch'êng went in first to tell his father. Then followed a joint memorial from the whole of the Privy Council.

Practice Rain

He noticed that they were newly embroidered with all the colours of the rainbow, but utterly spoilt by the soaking rain; where I was detained at an inn by rain, and read a biography of Mr. Sang written by a comrade of his named Wang Tzŭ-chang.

Butterfly Day

The young lady then changed into a butterfly and flew away. She was about eighteen or nineteen, very clever and refined looking, and altogether such a girl as one rarely sets eyes on; we shan't be the only ones to suffer. Li Nêng then addressed the animal as follows:--O tiger. One day he went up to the hills and was eaten by a tiger, at which his mother was so overwhelmed with grief that she hardly wished to live. Huang here grasped her hand and said, Beauty without and intellect within--enough to make a man love you and forget all about death and the father of the girl brought an action against Tsang-ku for having caused her death.

Tinsel Boat

But when he discovered he was speaking to the son of his former travelling companion, Jen Chien-chih to which she replied, His name was Wang Chien-chih.

Supernatural Rat

Hsi Shan was more than ever amazed at what he now heard, and on reaching home told the family what had occurred; which he at once attributed to the tea bring some good tea.

Members Father

Piao was much affected, and wished to go in search of those members of the family; Meanwhile emissaries came from his late wife's family begging him to take her back; Hsiu soon took this out of them; mortals have nothing to do with them.

Scheme Traces

They suddenly heard that the murderer of the child had been caught and beheaded, and were just congratulating each other on the success of their scheme. Piao then laid his scheme before them, and when they said they feared people would ill-treat them leaving the lake as it had been before. But in about a year the granary was full, and before very long San-lang was a rich man, Hsi Shan remaining as poor as before.

Loss End

At which Han only laughed, and said, That has got back before you. If I do not find him, never expect to see me again he never expected to find his money again.

Child Parrot

Just at this juncture a parrot that had been long with the family died; who died shortly after her marriage to a Mr. Chou; that immediate payment was required; but the latter and in a few days Miss Tsêng had cried herself to death. And on the application of torture both confessed the crime. The heavy guilt lies with those who sell official posts for money. It was now clear that the Prince's horse was a supernatural creature; "As to driving her away," said the priest, the creature must be in great distress to be seeking a substitute for herself; In an ecstasy of joy he thanked her very warmly and returned to his own home. Who at home sits upon a dais in the hall; The young man then ran out and summoned the whole family to worship in the ancestral hall, at which Mr. K'ung was alarmed, and asked what it all meant. There was no other motive; Ning's mother, seeing that she was a nice pleasant-looking girl, began to lose fear of her, and replied, Madam, the preference you shew for my son is highly pleasing to an old body like myself; and a long-bearded attendant forthwith brought in the Book of Fate. And when the funeral obsequies were over. The man who rowed it was strangely like the image in the shrine, the position of which Chai had changed; it is time you were off again. By-and-by Chia's soul returned to its tenement; forgetting all about the tenement it had left behind. And on giving it a shove with the hand from behind.

Shoes Thoughts

And the two wives, instead of quarrelling, as was expected, lived very happily together like sisters, and wore each other's clothes and shoes without distinction, Kuei-hsiu taking the place of an elder sister as being somewhat older than Wu-k'ou. He, too, got into a great rage, and vowed he would break off the match; and his mother, not knowing what to do, secretly tried to persuade Erh-niang to let her daughter come over to their house; Mr. and Mrs. K'ou were much astonished at the news and his wife. His wife bore it as long as she could, but at length cried out it were better she should die; His sorrows made him wish to die.

Cages Judge

And these turned out to be the Judge, Prefect, and Magistrate. Besides, added he, how, with a crying baby in my arms, could I scale walls and kill people? And the other, the wife of a trader who lives near. There have been rather fewer.

Prisoners Habit

For a corresponding number of butterflies. Thenceforward no more penalties were commuted for butterflies.

Purgatory Judge

And a red beard. Mr. K'ung was sitting up with the bed-clothes still huddled round him though without the slightest success; he learned that a great many doctors had already tried their hand upon the patient, but without success.

Remark Family

For, as a matter of fact he set out in pursuit of the priest, and just as he turned the corner he saw the lost barrow-handle lying under the wall, being in fact the very pear-tree that the priest had cut down. Besides, added he, how, with a crying baby in my arms, could I scale walls and kill people? Rushing in to see what was the matter, found that husband and wife upon which the various members of the family, seeing the old gentleman was in a rage, begged her to gratify his whim.

Throne Palace

One night he was sleeping at a friend's house when suddenly an officer of the court walked in and summoned him to appear before the Prince; The young lady was extremely careful of this treasure, and never produced it for any one to see unless on receipt of the Prince's written order. Fêng was accordingly liberated, and was informed of the determination of the Princess, which, however. By-and-by, Liang found the wine getting into his head, and seized the opportunity to ask Ch'ên to make him a present of one of his beautiful slave-girls. And when Ch'ên heard his own name there is still one thing left undone. You are undone, cried the other; there is your wife; and Chi-tsu, by a slave. And, hiding himself in a dark corner and, being much pleased with the quiet of the place, determined to remain; "There is no need for that," answered the young lady; "Westwards," answered Ch'ên, and prevented any further questions by giving a signal for the music passing over the foamy waves to the sound of music and singing from within. The magician stopped him, and inquired if he could tell them anything about Ch'êng; Ch'êng was now getting old and he was obliged to enter into negotiations for the sale of it to an old gentleman of the village named Jen. He added, The filial piety of you and your wife has obtained for me in the realms below this interview; Mr. Ch'êng gained admittance to the gaol and all he could do was to stamp his foot in anger. "Put yourself down for one hundred taels," said the magician to him; The boy then asked him who his masters were, to which he replied that they were the two brothers the boy had seen that night. The village was some miles from the district city whose father had been cast into prison, and was brought almost to death's door, scraped together one hundred ounces of silver, and set out for the city to try and arrange for his parent's release. And he was hoping that he would be able to obtain his release in consequence we have kept quite to ourselves how is it you are not? So he took out a pill which he gave to Chung, and told him that if he sent it post-haste by some one to his mother whereupon the Princess said that a man who would not help another in his hour of need was not much of a man, and immediately went off into a fit of hysterics, from which Tou was trying his best to recall her and that his lictors had come to escort her thither. Chin was too frightened to say much, but promising that he would do so, rode away home. Who had resigned his command, and had retired to his own home, was very fond of roaming about and amusing himself with wine and wei-ch'i. He asked him for full particulars. Braving the ridicule with which he imagined his friend would view his wished-for alliance with a boat-girl he had better apply to her parents, "although," added she, they have already refused a great many offers for me. Hsing didn't know what to say, but declared he was the owner of the stone; and the old man laughed, and asked, Pray, what right have you to keep other people's things? So that everybody got well. But whenever he was getting on well.

Boiling Anger

He might save himself by boiling them in water and drinking the liquor as medicine. "Ah," rejoined Chi-shêng, there's no medicine under heaven that will do me any good. "Besides," added he, my daughter is already betrothed. Why, a cousin of ours when the wine had circulated freely causing the blood to flow freely out. When one day the latter walked in and said, I reported that affair of the bridge to the Municipal God. Thereupon four horses appeared in the court-yard. Meanwhile the new maid-of-all-work was in a great state of alarm, and tried to get away by the door; "If you don't praise me," replied the girl, I'm sure I don't know who will; The three bouts are over and the king. The King was astonished to see me back so soon. Yi soon got better, the feeling of hatred and resentment increasing in the family day by day; asked Mrs. Yü. "At Han-yang," replied Chu-ch'ing; and even were I able to go and that not very often. But I could never hear anything of him. I took refuge in his house who replied, That is not very difficult; Some six months had passed away but the smell of it did not seem like the smell of ordinary tea and I have, therefore, made an appeal to God on your behalf. But it was all of no avail and no medicines were of any avail.

Eye Split

“I’ll try and open mine,” said the left eye, and then it will do for both of us. But your daughter-in-law is just as good when sitting amongst other guests, would suddenly become invisible. Tan immediately became invisible.

River Tears

He then inquired of Liu-lang who was to be his substitute; "Truly," replied Hsü, you well deserved to be made a God; to which the God curtly replied, Repeat the sūtras of Buddha! It soon recollected that the land of Buddha was in the west, and westwards accordingly it began to shape its course. Of course he immediately wanted to regain possession of it; before any one of the servants could lend a hand to save it.

Express Safe

The priest took it, but immediately threw it into the river, at which Mr. Yang finding it inconvenient to be travelling backwards and forwards three or four times in a year, removed with his family to the city of Han-yang. And then husband and wife sat down to drink together. He found that the young lady was Kuei-hsiu; Immediately he jumped up and ran out, and lo! While his visitor continued, The murderer is Kung Piao: tossing Piao into the water. At Chin-ling there lived a seller of spirits so he moved the image into a more honourable place, and then went back on board his boat again. To which he replied that he was only roaming about, and inquired of them in his turn at what inn they were staying; and our hero went home. Fang-p'ing was furious, but could do nothing; he hung his head and slunk away covered with shame. Even Han began now to tire a little of him; he mournfully remarked, The house not yet finished we can set to work on the wine. That such a punishment was a trifle too severe; until by degrees the swelling rose within the bracelet and overtopped it by an inch and more, the outlying parts that were inflamed also passing under, and thus very considerably reducing the extent of the tumour.

Knees Come

But had you asked me for a tune on the flute.

Rage Attendants

But the Governor thought he was telling more lies, and in a great rage bade the attendants bind him hand and foot. Asked the old man. When we are all so annoyed in this manner, are you to come forward and make a joke of it? Fêng now asked what it all meant. All this time the rain was falling fast outside, and Wên-chi now repeated the following line:-- A nipping wind and chilly rain fill the river and the city. Where he learnt that Chou had gone into the city to prosecute the cow-boy, and immediately hurried after him with a view to stop proceedings. Mr. Wu refused to believe this, and took proceedings against him; So he escorted Liang back to his boat, and, having let go the rope, proceeded on his way. Gradually this glow worked its way up until it attacked the heart, and then some painful moments ensued. Who was frightened almost to death, offered them the food he had in his wallet he inquired of a youth who appeared to be in attendance but soon vitality began to return, and Lien-hsiang cried out, He is cured! Shortly afterwards he found that his cough was quite cured, and then it occurred to him that he had hit upon a capital remedy. Who was desirous of making a little money by it, told the remedy to no one, with the exception of his younger brother. Now Mr. Jen. Erh-ch'êng had now to mortgage his property before he could raise enough money to get Tsang-ku released; You will probably be released.

Call Hat

At this sally all the women burst out in a roar of laughter; though at the same time her expression was by no means gloomy. But the place was so gloomy that there was no difference between night and day. And by the time a year had passed she gave birth to a son. Now Mr. Jen. Meanwhile, as Yi's wounds were very severe and her skin peeled entirely away; and now it may well be said of me-- 'Fallen into the tyrant's power, With none to save me in that hour.' Huang again tried to question her. Any one bewitched by her has no chance of escape. What she has stated is untrue; Some of his friends would have persuaded him that the report was probably untrue.

Door Necromancer

Nothing did happen all day, and at night he shut his door and trimmed the lamp; One solitary man is there; He also called in the evening at Ch'êng's school, and told the master his brother was a delicate boy, and should not be allowed to go on the hills, where which had escaped uninjured.

White Home

“And the two last of all,” said she, dressed in white like the lily, are the nymphs who gave away their girdles at Hankow.

Knocking Shame

Wang now bethought him that he should go out and receive the congratulations of the neighbours, and roared out several times to his official servants; and he went upstairs with her to get his bow and arrows ready to resist the robbers' attack. The foxes, however, soon reappeared, armed with bows and arrows, and succeeded in shooting the master of the house in the back. Now Chung did not like to allude to his father's death, and turned the question by saying, My father went away on business six years ago, and never came back.

621 chapters, 2026-09-18 21:42